THESE things<sup>a</sup> have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended.<sup>1</sup>

2 They<sup>b</sup> shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service.

3 And<sup>d</sup> these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But<sup>e</sup> these things have I told you, that when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And these things I said not unto you at the beginning, <sup>9</sup>because I was with you.

5 ¶ But<sup>h</sup> now I go my way to him that sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?<sup>2</sup>

6 But because I have said these things unto you, 'sorrow hath filled your heart.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; <sup>3</sup>It is expedient for you that I go away: <sup>4</sup>for if I go not away, the Comforter<sup>3</sup> will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, he will <sup>4</sup>reprove <sup>5</sup>the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:

form; and will assist, own, and succeed you in confuting your enemies, and bringing vast multitudes of all nations to the obedience of faith. And under his conduct and influence ye shall be enabled to give a noble, plain, courageous, and unexceptionable testimony to me and my cause, in your doctrines, miracles, lives, and deaths, as persons who have, during the whole course of my public ministry, been acquainted with my discourses, miracles, sufferings, and behaviour, public and private, all along, till my ascension to heaven.

REFLECTIONS.—God has made the most abundant provision in Christ for the spiritual life, growth, fruitfulness, and happiness of men, and for advancing his own glory in and by them. Intimate, beneficial, and endearing is their union with him, and gracious his influence upon them. But without union to and fellowship with him, there can be nothing in religion done in a spiritual or acceptable manner. While under the influence of his grace, received by faith through his Word and ordinances, a most abundant production of good works may be expected. The more vigorously faith is exercised, the more will our holiness in all manner of conversation increase; and everything that we ask for God's glory and our own good, shall be graciously bestowed. But, alas! great is their folly and guilt who take up with external forms of religion instead of vital union with Christ, and by their dead works of formality and wickedness prepare themselves for eternal woe.—Infinite is his love in dying for us his enemies, and in calling us his endeared friends. But we cannot have the evidence of our union to him, or friendship with him, but in cleaving to him. Nor can we expect the manifestations of his love, but in believing his promise, and gratefully keeping his commandments without reserve. His love to us, and ours to him, ought to make us obey and imitate him in a sincere, affectionate, and active love to our brethren.—Thrice happy is it when he grants us his Spirit to attest his truths, and, as our Advocate, Guide, and Comforter, to animate us with holy courage in our profession of his name, and to support us under all the tribulations which we endure for his sake. And never should we wonder at, or be discouraged by, the hatred, reproach, contempt, and persecution we may be called to suffer from carnal men for the sake of Christ, when he, our great Lord, has undergone all and much worse for us. All that will live godly must suffer persecution; and the more faithful professors are, especially ministers, the more must they expect of it.—But inexpressible will be our guilt if we pervert the clearest revelations of Christ, and render them the occasion of greater enmity and opposition to him and his gospel, his servants and followers. It is to quarrel with our own mercies, and become our own worst adversaries: and whatever we may pretend, it is all owing to our ignorance of, and enmity against, God himself.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 1-3. I have beforehand told you of the trials and comforts which lie before you, that ye may not be discouraged in, or turned from, your duty by my leaving you, or by the troubles which you may meet with from my enemies and yours, whose rage will lead them to all manner of violence and cruelty against you. The ecclesiastical rulers will excommunicate you from all church-fellowship, as the most abandoned wretches. Nay, so furious will be their mad zeal against you, that multitudes will barbarously take pleasure in murdering you, imagining it an honour done to God, and a mean of promoting his interest in the world.—Thus they will persecute you for my sake, because, through the wilful blindness and hardness of their hearts, they neither know, nor believe in, nor love me nor my Father. 4-6. These things I have thus plainly foretold you, that, when such trials come, ye may hereby be the more confirmed in your faith in me and my words.—And I did not tell you of this sooner, because I was with you to shelter you from trials, by exposing myself, and to support and comfort you under them.—But now I am just going to leave you, and return to my Father's immediate presence in heaven; and yet ye little understand my meaning, or rejoice in my happy departure and the fruits of it, nor do ye even make inquiries about it, as ye did when ye thought I was going somewhere on earth to erect a temporal kingdom. And so much quicker are your apprehensions of things grievous than of gladdening promises, that what I have said of my leaving you, and the troubles that will ensue, hath quite overwhelmed you with sorrow. 7-11. But notwithstanding all your dejection and fears, it is really necessary, and for your unspeakable advantage, that I leave this world and ascend to my heavenly Father: for according to our loving purpose and the just order of things, unless I return thither, the Holy Ghost, that blessed Guide, Advocate, and Comforter, will not visit you with his richest gifts, graces, counsels, and assistances, supports and joys; but when once I am enthroned in my heavenly kingdom, I will send him to answer all the great and glorious purposes for which ye and my church shall need him.—And he, coming from on high, by virtue of my death, and in consequence of my resurrection and exaltation, shall carry on my cause in this lower world, demonstratively convincing both Jews and Gentiles of their sinfulness and misery, of the insufficiency of all their works to recommend them to the favour of God, of the sufficiency of my obedience and suffering to justify them in his sight; and of my judicial power to reform the world, overthrow the kingdom of Satan, and at last condemn to punishment the unbelieving and unrighteous. By his miraculous gifts and operations for confirming the gospel, and by his internal illumination and influences, he shall convince the world of the sinfulness of heart and life, and especially of its great sin of unbelief in wilfully rejecting me. He shall convince men of the righteousness of my person and cause, and of the necessity and perfection of that everlasting righteousness which I am come to work out by my obedience and death, because I am now to be exalted at my Father's right hand, in testimony of his full acceptance of it in the room of a lost world;—and ye shall no more see me in this state of debasement, in which I must continue till it be finished. He shall also convince men of my power and will to renew and sanctify sinners, to destroy the kingdom of darkness, and to execute judgment upon all the finally impenitent and unbelieving; because Satan, who rules in the hearts of carnal men, is tried, and judicially defeated in all his power and claims, by my death, resurrection, and ascension; and my kingdom of light, grace, and holiness established on the ruins of his dominion on earth; and he and his agents shall be condemned to everlasting ruin at the last day. 12-15. I have still many other things to inform you of relative to the future alterations of the state and worship of the church under the direction and influence of the Holy Ghost; but through the weakness of your faith, and the strength of your carnal prejudices, ye cannot as yet apprehend, or be reconciled to them.

9 Of<sup>n</sup> sin, because they believe not on me;
10 Of<sup>e</sup> righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;

11 Of<sup>p</sup> judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

12 I<sup>a</sup> have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit<sup>r</sup> when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: <sup>a</sup>and he will show you things to come.

14 He shall <sup>t</sup>glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you.

15 All<sup>a</sup> things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall show it unto you.

16 ¶ A<sup>v</sup> little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, <sup>a</sup>a little while, and ye shall see me, because <sup>v</sup>I go to the Father.

17 Then<sup>z</sup> said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me: and, Because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? <sup>a</sup>we cannot tell what he saith.

But when the Holy Ghost, who is faithfulness and truth itself, shall come to do his work upon and by you, he shall give you a complete understanding of the whole of divine truth relative to my gospel kingdom. And he will reveal these things unto you, not as separate from, but as one with me and my Father, and entirely acquainted with our whole mind and will. He will also acquaint you with all that is necessary for you to know, or make known to the church, relative to time or eternity. And his manifesting to you the things relative to my person, offices, cause, and kingdom, will tend to my honour, and make you to have clear, exalted, and endearing thoughts of me, of my love, fulness, office, and work. For in this he will manifest to you what concerns my Father, as I am one with him in nature, perfections, counsels, and property; and the administration of all that he does is committed to me. 16, 20, 22. In a few hours I shall be taken from you by death and burial, and after that ye shall have but for a few days an opportunity of seeing me, and then I will ascend to my Father.—My sufferings and death shall quickly overwhelm you with sorrow and mourning, while my carnal enemies will triumph and rejoice, imagining that they have ruined me: but very soon after, by my personal visits, and the pouring out of my Spirit upon you, I will turn your sorrow into the greatest joy, the foundation of which neither men nor devils shall ever be able to shake, and of which no one can rob you. 23-27. And under this comforting light, and these influences of my Spirit, ye shall neither need my bodily presence, nor to ask information as ye now do. But I solemnly assure you, that whatever ye, by the assistance of the Spirit, shall ask my Father and yours, with faith in my name, as your only Mediator, High-priest, and Advocate, he will readily grant it on my account. Hitherto ye have had recourse to me in all your difficulties, and have not well understood how to plead with him upon the ground of my righteousness, and interest with him for you.—But henceforth, in all your wants, present your petitions and pleas with faith in my atonement and intercession, that, by the gracious answers which you receive, your joy may daily increase, till it be completed. These things I have delivered to you in short substantial sentences, which, by reason of your ignorance, sorrows, and prejudices, ye do not well understand; but in a little time after my resurrection, and afterwards by my Spirit, I will make to you a free, open, and full discovery of my Father, and of all his gracious mind; of my own person, office, and work; and of your proper method of fellowship with us: and then shall ye, by the assistance of the Spirit, offer up all your requests, with express mention of my name, and entire dependence on me.—Nor need I again inform you that I, as your great Advocate, will recommend your persons and prayers to the Father's acceptance: nay, he himself will delight to hear your prayers thus presented to him, and to manifest his affection towards, and bestow his favours upon, you as my disciples, who believe in and love me as his Son and the appointed Saviour of mankind. 28. I, who was with the Father from everlasting, voluntarily came forth from him, in a way of peculiar manifestation, into this world; and in a little time I am to leave this world and return to the Father in my ascension, that I may be glorified together with him, and may manage the concerns of my people in heaven, and by my Spirit apply my complete salvation to all who believe. 31-33. Do ye now at last clearly apprehend, and firmly believe what I have said? or do ye imagine that ye are so established in the faith, that ye shall no more stagger through unbelief? Nay, to manifest my omniscience, and to warn you to be humble and watchful, I assure you that within a very little time, even this same night, ye shall all, suddenly affrighted, leave me to my murderous enemies, and disperse yourselves, for your safety, among your friends. But though you will thus shamefully desert me, my Father will assist, own, and carry me through all the sufferings which I have consented to undergo in his service and for his honour. Now, all these things I have delivered to you in this farewell discourse, that, by virtue of your union with me, and by faith in me, ye may enjoy the most refreshing peace with God and your own consciences. While ye continue in this world, great troubles and persecutions for my sake will attend you; but courageously trust in me, and expect a happy issue; for, having vanquished all opposition from men and devils, I am going, through my death and resurrection, to the heavenly mansions, that, by my intercession and the outpouring of my Spirit, I may prepare all believers to dwell with me for ever.

shall be no longer in ignorance, no longer desirous of asking me questions. The second signifies to ask in prayer, or to pray. The clause is in no way connected with what precedes: it is an independent promise.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Blind bigotry often raises the most furious persecution in the church; and her best friends are frequently reproached and murdered as her worst enemies. True believers are sometimes grieved at that which, properly understood, is a real ground of their joy. For how much more advantageous is it to have Jesus, our exalted Forerunner and Advocate, on his throne, than to have him always continued on earth! How great is he!—possessed of all perfections and property equally with his Father and the Holy Spirit. And thrice happy is it that this divine Spirit, who perfectly knows all the designs and mysteries of the Godhead, comes to acquaint us with all needful truth, and to glorify Jesus Christ, in revealing and communicating his fulness to us. Powerfully he convinces men of sin, righteousness, and judgment—all to the honour of Christ.—Kindly Jesus suits his instructions to our capacities and circumstances.—But great is our dulness and ignorance that we rightly apprehend but few of them. Powerfully he dispels our griefs, and turns them into joy by his gracious visits. But never, when we are self-conceited, are we far from danger and shame. Let me therefore always be clothed with self-diffidence, and given to pour forth prayers in his name. The Father, who loves him, and us for his sake, will not refuse us a gracious answer. And faith in and love to him will graciously secure his Father's delight to do us good.—What a scene of sorrow is this world! Quickly the triumphing of the wicked issues in everlasting disappointment and misery; and children are certain crosses, but uncertain comforts. They but come into a world of sin, snares, troubles, and griefs.—But if we meet with great tribulation, it is but the predicted lot of Christians. If friends forsake us, so they did Christ our Saviour. If his peace compose and victory comfort us, nothing need discourage us; and if he and his Father abide with us, our light and tran-

26 At<sup>a</sup> that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, <sup>a</sup>that I will pray the Father for you:

28 I<sup>t</sup> came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, <sup>u</sup>I leave the world, and go to the Father.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Christ prayeth to his Father to glorify him, 6 to preserve his apostles, 11 in unity, 17 and truth: 20 to glorify them, and all other believers with him in heaven.

THESE words<sup>a</sup> spake Jesus, and <sup>b</sup>lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, <sup>c</sup>the sitory afflictions shall work for us an exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 1-3. O Father, the time fixed in thy eternal love for completing my course of obedience on earth is now come! Own and support me as thy Son, under my sufferings, that, in finishing all righteousness, triumphing over sin, Satan, and death, and in ascending to heaven, I may manifest and spread the honour of all thy compassion in the world; that in the exercise of that mediatorial authority over all mankind which thou hast allotted me as the reward of my obedience, I may freely and graciously bestow the great blessing of eternal life upon all those who come unto me and accept me as their Savior and abide in me. And the way to, the beginning, earnest, and evidence of right to, this eternal life, and even the complete enjoyment of it, is by an approving and fiducial knowledge of thee as the only true and faithful God, in opposition to all idols; and of me as the anointed Saviour and the only Mediator, in opposition to all others. 4, 5. As I have invariably intended and manifested thy glory in the whole of my doctrine, miracles, and practice, and am just ready, without fail, to honour all thy perfections by my death, which will complete that work of the work of redemption which was intrusted to me, do thou therefore, according to thy affection to me, advance my incarnate person to the highest glory at thy right hand, where I may appear in my human nature and mediatorial office like myself, and shine forth in that divine majesty which I had with thee from eternity, but which has been obscured in my humble state on earth. 6-8. As for those true believers who through faith have accepted me as the Savior of the world and have determined to walk in me as they received me, I have begun to give them a spiritual understanding of thine excellencies, mind, and will, and of my relation to thee and commission from thee; and they, under my powerful influence on their hearts, have embraced and adhered to thy truths which I taught them; and by my instructions have been made to know and believe that all things which I, as Mediator, have undertaken, taught, performed, or suffered, are by thy love and blessed, and the fruits of thy infinite wisdom and sovereign grace. 9, 10. I therefore affectionately recommend to thy care, these my disciples and those who through their ministry accept me as the Redeemer of the world as the members of my mystical body, to be redeemed and saved by me, that thou mayest perfect everything which concerns them. And as thy right in them is so inseparably and entirely the same with mine, I pray that thou wouldest perform in them all the good pleasure of thy goodness, that I, together with thee, may be glorified in their redemption and blessedness, and in their faith, love, worship, obedience, and eternal salvation. 11-13. And now the time is come that I must die a sacrifice for all sin, and afterwards be but little with men in this world, to instruct, defend, and comfort them; yet these my apostles, as well as my other disciples, must for a time remain in it, compassed about with many infirmities, temptations, and dangers.—And as I am coming to appear in thy presence for them, I beseech thee, by thy mighty power and infinite wisdom, and for thine own name's sake, to preserve them steadfast in their faith and holy profession, that, as my witnesses and chief ministers, they may be entirely united in heart and affection, testimony, interest, and designs, as we are in ours.—While I have been personally conversant with them, I have, according to thy commission, by my doctrine, example, and powerful influences, so confirmed and preserved them from apostasy, that not one of them has miscarried, except the perfidious Judas, who, by forsaking and betraying me, is just now bringing inevitable ruin upon his own head, agreeably to the ancient predictions concerning him. But now, as I am coming to be glorified at thy right hand in heaven, leaving them without the benefit of my company to guide, protect, and comfort them, I thus supplicate thee in their hearing, that they may rejoice in hope of thy preserving, teaching, and comforting Spirit, and that their joy may be more abundant than ever it was in my personal presence. 14, 15. I have given them a spiritual understanding of, and commission to preach, thy gospel; and carnal and unbelieving men are filled with enmity, rage, and violence against them, because their principles, tempers, doctrines, and views, as well as mine, are utterly disagreeable to their carnal lusts, sentiments, and interests. However, I do not plead that thou, to deliver them from their troubles, shouldst deprive this world of their holy example and useful ministrations; but that thou wouldest preserve them from the temptations of Satan and their own remaining corruptions, and support them under, sanctify to them, and carry them through, all the persecutions which they may meet with before they have finished their work. 16-19. They are already of such a religious temper and disposition, and engaged in such excellent work, as is directly contrary to the inclinations of carnal men, even as I myself have been before them. Let this holy temper and practice be maintained and increased in them by means of thy Word; and by the anointing of thy Spirit, let them be consecrated to serve thee in propagating gospel truth. For as thou hast sent me into the world with a commission to preach thy important and infallible truths to mankind, I have authorized them to carry on the same work, wherever Providence may cast their lot, after my departure from them. And for this, as one great reason, have I devoted myself to the mediatorial office, and am going to consecrate myself by suffering and death, that they, through the truth, may, by the Holy Ghost, be consecrated to, fitted for, supported, and succeeded in preaching it. 20, 21. Nor do I only pray for such preserving, supporting, sanctifying, and comforting influences to my apostles, but to all who, in this and the following ages, shall be brought to a saving faith in me, by means of their publication of the gospel—that the whole number of believers, in all generations, may be joined together as one body, in faith and love, worship and obedience, by one spirit, in as near a resemblance as possible to that union which we have by our mutual inbeing; and that, in their measure, they may be united to us; that others, beholding the powerful effects of the gospel on them, may be induced to believe in me as the promised Messiah. 22, 23. And in pursuit of this great design, I have given them an interest and subordinate partnership in that glory which thou hast given me, as their Head, Representative, and Trustee; that, as members of my mystical body, and joint heirs of God with me, and partakers of my Spirit, they may be united in the most close, honourable, and beneficial manner. In order to which I will dwell in them by my Spirit, according to their measure, as thou dwellest in me by him without measure, that they, being joined to me, may attain to the most perfect union they are capable of, in one spiritual body, under me as their Head—that by means hereof multitudes of both Jews and Gentiles may clearly and satisfactorily perceive and believe that I am the Christ whom thou hast sent into the world for the redemption of men; and that thou hast a peculiar, affectionate, and delightful love to them for my sake, some way resembling that supreme love which thou bearest to me as thine eternal Son and their Mediator. 24. And I further claim that, according to my sacrifice and suffering, all those whom thou hast called to receive eternal life be given the opportunity of repentance and acceptance of heaven, where I already am in my divine nature, and for ever shall be in my entire person, that there they may have an appropriating, blissful, and transforming vision of that glory which thou hast bestowed on me as their Head and Representative, because from all eternity thou hadst an infinite delight in me, as thy Son and their Savior, who sought to glorify thee in their salvation. 25, 26. All these things do I ask from thee, not only as thou infinitely hatest all impurity, and lovest me and them for my sake, but as thou art a righteous and faithful Father, ready to give men whatever I have secured for them. As for the unregenerate worldlings, they are ignorant of and reject thee and thy counsels; but I am thoroughly acquainted with thy nature, perfections, and will; and these my apostles have known and received me as the true Messiah whom thou has sent for the salvation of Israel.—And as, according to my commission, I have fully declared to them whatever was proper, and have savingly enlightened them in the knowledge of thyself, I will, after my resurrection, by personal visits, and after my ascension by the effusion of my Spirit, more clearly and fully acquaint them with thy glorious perfections and will, that the infinite love with which thou hast from eternity loved me may extend to and manifest itself in men, and that I may dwell in their hearts by faith till they arrive at that perfection of eternal blessedness which, in thy distinguishing love, thou hast prepared for all and for all who receive me by faith.

Ver. 1. It is recorded of our Lord that he continued all night in prayer, but this is the longest of his prayers of which the Spirit has left any verbal record. C.

Ver. 3. The only true God. This, like ch. 14.28, has been a special stronghold of all who deny the supreme deity of the Son of God; yet requires merely the application of one Scripture rule, the 'comparing of spiritual things with spiritual,' 1 Co. 2.3, to show itself in perfect accordance with that essential doctrine. (1) Then, be it remembered, that our Lord teaches us to say, 'Our Father who art in heaven.' (2) That the gods of the nations are idols—false gods—always on earth—never in heaven. (3) That 'THE WORD was God,' Jn. 1.1, 'and dwelt among us.' (4) That, as such, he is called 'the true God,' 1 Jn. 5.20. Wherefore, the Father is called 'the only true God'—God in heaven—not in opposition to Jesus Christ, who is 'the true God'—'God manifest in the flesh,' dwelling among us on earth; but the Father is so called in opposition to idols, which are vanity and a lie. C.

Ver. 4. I have finished the work. The work of instruction, of miracles, of witness-bearing—the work of contending with Satan and his auxiliaries—and now I am about to enter upon the sufferings I have been appointed to underlie. C.

Ver. 9. I pray not for the world. When Christ prays he is certainly heard, Jn. 11.42. But he prays not at this time, for the impenitent world, his whole mind at this time was upon his disciples. C.

Ver. 12. None of them is lost, &c. None that were given are lost; but 'the son of perdition' is lost, 'that the scripture might be fulfilled.' Not as if Judas were lost that the prophecy might become true, but the prophecy is verified in the fact of his treason. C.

Ver. 13. My joy. The joy derivable from me.—Fulfilled. By the presence of the Holy Spirit—one form of whose precious fruit is joy in the birth, doctrine, death, resurrection, kingdom, and victories of Christ, Lu. 2.10; Ga. 5.22; Re. 12.12. C.

hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:<sup>1</sup>

2 As<sup>d</sup> thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

3 And<sup>g</sup> this is life eternal, <sup>h</sup>that they might know thee <sup>i</sup>the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom<sup>j</sup> thou hast sent.

4 I<sup>k</sup> have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.

5 And now, O Father, <sup>l</sup>glorify thou me, with thine own self, with the glory which <sup>n</sup>I had with thee before the world was.<sup>2</sup>

6 ¶ I<sup>o</sup> have manifested thy name unto <sup>p</sup>the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they<sup>q</sup> have kept thy word.

7 Now<sup>r</sup> they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee.

8 For <sup>s</sup>I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received <sup>t</sup>them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I<sup>t</sup> pray for them: <sup>u</sup>I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.

10 And<sup>v</sup> all mine are thine, and thine are mine; <sup>w</sup>and I am glorified in them.

11 And<sup>y</sup> now I am no more in the world, but these are in <sup>z</sup>the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, <sup>a</sup>keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, <sup>b</sup>that they may be one, as we are.

12 While I was with them in the world, <sup>c</sup>I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the<sup>d</sup> son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

13 And<sup>e</sup> now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.

14 I<sup>g</sup> have given them thy word; and <sup>h</sup>the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

Father in heaven. (2) The state of humiliation on earth when he assumed manhood, and put off for a time the external glory of deity. (3) The state of resurrection glory, when he assumed in his twofold nature, God-man, the same glory which he had as God with the Father from eternity. ## CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Judas betrayeth Jesus. 6 The officers fall to the ground. 10 Peter smiteth off Malchus' ear. 12 Jesus is taken, and led unto Annas and Caiaphas. 15 Peter's denial. 19 Jesus examined before Caiaphas. 28 His arraignment before Pilate. 36 His kingdom. 40 The Jews ask Barabbas to be let loose.

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, <sup>a</sup>he went forth with his disciples over <sup>b</sup>the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

Ver. 19. Sanctify myself. Separate myself from the world, and dedicate myself utterly to the service of my Father. C.

Ver. 21. How is it that 'the world,' out of which the disciples were taken (ver. 6), for whom Christ Jesus did not pray (ver. 9), that hated his disciples (ver. 14), and with which our Lord and his apostles had nothing spiritually in common (ver. 16), is here said to 'believe' that the Father had sent him? Some solve the difficulty by taking the word 'world' in two senses, viz. the one an unbelieving, and the other a believing world. But how strange must it appear if the same word be taken thrice in one sense, and immediately after twice in a sense the very opposite! Surely there is no necessity for this arbitrary and violent transmutation! Believing, when alone, is no mark of a change of heart, Ja. 2. 17. The 'devils believe and tremble,' Ja. 2. 19. Even so the time is coming when 'the world' that hated both Christ and his disciples shall both believe and know that the Father sent the Son (ver. 23), even as multitudes of Mahometans and professing Christians both 'believe and know' that he was sent; yet the one part prefer to him the 'false prophet,' and the other 'hold the truth in unrighteousness.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is necessary to conclude important advices, and prepare for impending temptations, by fervent and solemn prayer, and with heart and eyes lifted up unto God. In what a dignified manner Jesus intercedes for all men, particularly his ministers, upon the footing of his own finished righteousness, and his Father's perfections manifested and promises ratified thereby! It is impossible for those to fall short of grace or glory who are interested in such prayers, which so closely connect the glory of God and the good of men.—Marvellous is his exaltation and his saving power! And thrice happy are they who have the saving knowledge of him as the only Mediator, and of his Father in him. His glorification of his Father's perfections, by fulfilling all righteousness in our stead, wonderfully secures eternal glories to himself, and conversion, deliverance, and everlasting happiness to all faithful members. And by our holding fast his doctrine, by our holiness in heart and life, and giving him the glory of all that we are and do, he marks our relation to him as his true children.—Great is the mercy that all our spiritual knowledge, faith, holiness, and eternal happiness are secured in and by him; and that though he be no more in this world, his Word and Spirit are left to supply his room. This polluting and ensnaring world is the greatest enemy to his saints. But while multitudes of professors, and even noted preachers, are eternally ruined by its influence, Christ's prayers, the directions of his Word, and the influences of his Spirit, will carry all who are faithful safely, and even comfortably and honourably, through it. If we be not carnally disposed, we shall quickly get to heaven, out of the reach of carnal men. For if Jesus devoted himself to sufferings for us, he will advance us to glory with him. Whatever good work he once begins will not fail on his account; and if his ministers need to be eminently holy, steadfast, and faithful, he offers up particular prayers in their behalf; and if he send ministers, he will make their labours powerful for increasing, uniting, and edifying his mystical body the church. Let carnal men deride it now as they will, they shall be made to know that Christ and his people are one in law, spirit, temper, and design. And while the wicked are ruined by their sins, the good shall be admitted into the most immediate vision of and fellowship with him, in his glory and in his Father's love.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 11. It is no time for fighting; nor is my kingdom or cause to be propagated

VALLEY OF JEHOSEPHAT. [JOHN, xviii: 1.]—This is also called the Valley of the Kedron, but is generally known as the Valley of Jehoshaphat. The Jews believe that the final judgment will be held here, and for this reason they regard it a great privilege to be buried on the sides of the Mount of Olives, so when they arise from the dead to be judged they will be close to the place of the final accounts. This belief among the orthodox Jews is based on Joel iii: 2-12. The Moslems have also adopted the belief of the Jews, and so they have turned the sides of the valley next to the walls of Jerusalem into a cemetery. In this valley are the tombs of Absalom, Zechariah and St. James. The brook Kedron flows through it. When the name "Valley of Jehoshaphat" was first applied to this place is not known. The date is not mentioned in the Bible.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: for <sup>c</sup>Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.<sup>1</sup>

3 Judas<sup>d</sup> then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, <sup>e</sup>knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, <sup>f</sup>Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, <sup>g</sup>stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, <sup>h</sup>they went backward, and fell to the ground.<sup>3</sup>

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he: <sup>i</sup>if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled which he spake, <sup>j</sup>Of them which thou gavest me have I lost none.

10 ¶ Then<sup>k</sup> Simon Peter, having a sword,<sup>4</sup> drew it, and smote the high-priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malehus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: <sup>l</sup>the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 ¶ Then<sup>m</sup> the band and the captain, and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and <sup>n</sup>bound him,

13 And led him away to <sup>o</sup>Annas first; for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high-priest that same year.<sup>5</sup>

14 Now<sup>p</sup> Caiaphas was he which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die<sup>6</sup> for the people.

15 ¶ And<sup>r</sup> Simon Peter followed Jesus, and <sup>s</sup>so did another<sup>7</sup> disciple: that disciple was known unto the high-priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high-priest.

But as the band, which was doubtless of Roman soldiers, must have heard much of the miraculous powers of Jesus, and as they had with them such light as would give full display to his person, it is not improbable that some indescribable heavenliness in his appearance, manner, or voice, produced an effect upon them which if not directly miraculous, was in every sense supernatural, and amounted to an acknowledgment of his kingly dignity. And perhaps (as Boothroyd supposes) our Lord intended by this power over the soldiers to show to his disciples that he could have escaped if he had pleased.—C.

<sup>26</sup> The phrase eat the passover may signify eat the paschal lamb; but it may have a wider signification. The context alone can determine the true meaning. If it signify the paschal lamb, then our Lord must have been crucified on the 14th of the month, and could not have eaten the paschal supper with his disciples. Yet the other evangelists say he did, Mat. 26. 17—20, &c. The word passover, therefore, must have some other meaning. John employs it to denote the whole festival, ch. 2. 13; 6. 4. &c.; but the word eat limits it here to some particular act. We know that it was customary to kill voluntary peace-offerings on the 15th, and these were eaten by the offerer and his friends who were ceremonially clean. To these offerings the term passover was applicable; and to these doubtless the evangelist refers in this passage.—P.

Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high-priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, I am not.

18 And<sup>t</sup> the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals,<sup>8</sup> for it was cold: and they warmed themselves: and Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.

19 ¶ The<sup>u</sup> high-priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, <sup>v</sup>I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? <sup>w</sup>ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

23 Jesus answered him, <sup>y</sup>If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but if well, why smitest thou me?<sup>22</sup>

24 Now<sup>z</sup> Annas had sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high-priest.

25 ¶ And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself. <sup>z</sup>They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One<sup>b</sup> of the servants of the high-priest, being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off, saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 Peter<sup>c</sup> then denied again: and immediately the cock crew.<sup>3</sup>

28 ¶ Then<sup>d</sup> led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment:<sup>4</sup> and it was <sup>e</sup>early; <sup>f</sup>and they themselves went not into the judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the <sup>g</sup>passover.<sup>6</sup>

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

by force of arms. I am not destitute of almighty power to rescue myself; but from regard to the glory of God, and to manifest my own love in the salvation of sinners, I freely and cheerfully submit to all the tribulation and wrath which he hath appointed me to undergo, and I will allow of no opposition to it. 20, 21. Whatsoever I have taught has been with all openness, plainness, and freedom to all sorts of people, in the most public places, and on the most solemn occasions. Nor did I ever teach aught in private that I did not teach openly.—Let then my hearers, whether friends or foes, be examined as to what they heard me deliver. 36, 37. My kingdom is altogether spiritual and heavenly, consisting in a dominion over men's souls and consciences, and not over their secular affairs.—Nor does it in the least interfere with, or tend to the disturbance of, civil government; if it had, I should have allowed my followers to fight for my protection or rescue.—I freely own myself a king; but, to satisfy you that my kingdom is not of a worldly constitution or design, know that God hath sent me into this world, that, by my preaching and miracles, I might reveal and confirm the truth, and that alone, concerning God and myself, and the way of salvation to sinful men. This is the mean of my conquests and government; and every one that is acquainted with and awakened by the word of truth may believe and embrace my testimony, and become my willing subject.

Ver. 2. This garden may have belonged to some friend of our Lord; or, more probably, have been one of those public gardens which are common around cities both in Asia and Europe.—Note, The life of our Lord is strikingly diversified between extreme activity and publicity, and the love of quiet and retirement. There never appears, however, any morbid preference either for publicity or solitude; but the one is diligently employed as the means of doing good to men, the other is thankfully received as an occasion of more private converse with his disciples, or of communion with his Father. C.

Ver. 28. Defiled. They were defiled with hypocrisy, malice, falsehood, and bloodthirstiness: with all these pollutions within them and upon them they were ready to eat the passover as a work of righteousness; but they would neither enter the prætorium nor come in contact with a Gentile soldier, lest they should be disqualified. They were careful to 'make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter,' to whiten the exterior of the sepulchre, but forgetful or regardless of the death and rottenness within.—Note, Let this ceremonial scrupulosity and moral defilement of the Jews furnish to every Christian a special note for self-examination before prayer and the Lord's supper, and every other act of religion! C.

REFLECTIONS.—Garden retirements should at once lead our thoughts to Adam's ruining fall, and to the gracious promises and redeeming sufferings of Christ. Amazing was his willingness to die for us who thus went forth to meet his murderers. And after showing his ability to strike them dead, he readily resigned himself into their hands, in obedience to his Father's will. Why then should danger or death ever deter us from faithfully owning his cause! Kindly he proportions his people's trials to their strength, and preserves them by offering himself a sacrifice for them. And his cause is to be maintained by his ministers by weapons not carnal, but mighty through God. Yea, the most hasty in their zeal are seldom the most steadfast in his service. But hardened indeed are men when even awful miracles cannot restrain their wickedness and folly. Dreadful is the nature of sin, that brought God, in our nature, under such sorrow and suffering. And infinite was his kindness and condescension cheerfully to submit to all for our sake. O my soul, let the treachery of Judas, the rage of Jews, the repeated denials of Peter, the cowardly injustice of Pilate, serve me as a glass to view myself, as a warning to watch-

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31 Then said Pilate unto them, <sup>h</sup>Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, <sup>i</sup>It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

32 That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled,<sup>7</sup> which he spake, signifying what death he should die.<sup>8</sup>

33 Then<sup>j</sup> Pilate entered into the judgment-hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself,<sup>9</sup> or did others tell it thee of me?

36 Jesus<sup>n</sup> answered, <sup>o</sup>My kingdom is not of this world:<sup>2</sup> if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hencee.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king.<sup>3</sup> To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear<sup>p</sup> witness unto the truth. Every one that is <sup>q</sup>of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth?<sup>4</sup> And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, <sup>r</sup>I find in him no fault at all.

39 But<sup>s</sup> ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the passover: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 Then<sup>t</sup> cried they all again, saying, Not

<sup>g</sup> Behold the man! From this example, as well as in ch. 18, 38, it is apparent that Pilate was a sentimental and laconic speaker, nor is it easy in either case precisely to pronounce upon his meaning. The Scriptures have left us not a single trace of the personal appearance of our Lord; yet it is not improbable that Pilate saw in the countenance of our Lord such evident marks of sincerity, guileless simplicity, and innocence, that he makes this appeal to the compassion of the Jews—as if he had said, 'Behold the man you have accused, and let his meek, subdued, patient, and innocent aspect, excite your pity, while I pronounce his release!'

this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Christ is scourged, crowned with thorns, and beaten. 4 Pilate is desirous to release him, but being overcome with the outrage of the Jews, he delivereth him to be crucified. 23 They cast lots for his garments. 26 He commendeth his mother to John. 28 He dieth. 31 His side is pierced. 38 He is buried by Joseph and Nicodemus.

THEN Pilate<sup>a</sup> therefore took Jesus, and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers platted<sup>b</sup> a crown of<sup>c</sup> thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, Hail,<sup>d</sup> King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 ¶ Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that <sup>e</sup>I find no fault in him.<sup>3</sup>

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!<sup>4</sup>

6 When<sup>d</sup> the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, <sup>e</sup>We have a <sup>f</sup>law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;<sup>6</sup>

9 And went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? <sup>g</sup>But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me? <sup>h</sup>knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, <sup>i</sup>Thou couldest have no

fulness, and to avoid fellowship with sinners! And let the wisdom, meekness, and boldness of Christ be my pattern. Let me adore that wonderful providence which overruled all for the fulfilment of scripture, the glory of God, and salvation of men. And never let me condemn persons or things because they are run down by the multitude.

CHAPTER XIX. Ver. 11. Therefore, &c. To discover the grounds of this conclusion has greatly perplexed commentators. Might we venture to suggest one additional solution, it would be this:—Take the words 'Thou couldest have no power at all against me except it were given thee from above' as parenthetical, and consider the words 'Therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin' as a reply to Pilate's assertion of despotic authority, 'I have power to crucify thee, and I have power to release thee,' and the reply is most applicable.—'Therefore he that delivered me' (to a judge determined to assert and act upon power, and not upon justice and mercy) 'has the greater sin—his own sin aggravated by that of the judge his accomplice.' C.

Ver. 14. Mark says 'it was the third hour, and they crucified him,' ch. 15, 25; John says 'it was about the sixth hour,' even before he was delivered to his enemies. The most common method of reconciliation is that of Eusebius, who states that the Hebrew numeral for 'the third' was mistaken by the early transcribers for the Greek numeral for 'the sixth.' In this reading seven of the best MSS. concur; it is also supported by several of the early fathers, and adopted by the most learned modern commentators. But, in opposition to all these authorities, the early versions of this Gospel have all 'the sixth hour'—an evidence of authenticity scarcely to be overborne. Perhaps a better solution of the difficulty may be found in the difference between the Jewish and Roman modes of commencing the numeration of hours. The Jewish numeration commenced at sunrise, the Roman at midnight: so that, 'about the' Roman 'sixth hour' corresponded with the time about the Jewish first hour—most probably half-past the Jewish one o'clock A.M., at which time, according to John, Jesus was 'delivered to be crucified,' ver. 16. Now, as it is evident from Mat. 20, 12 that the Jews counted their hours from their commencement, and not from their conclusion, this would leave barely an hour and a half till the Jewish 'third hour.' And considering the slowness with which the mass of spectators could emerge from the hall and advance through the crowded streets; and allowing a sufficient time for the procession to Calvary, which lay without, though near to the city (He. 13, 12; Jn. 19, 20; and Robinson's Geography, pp. 64-80); and adding the time necessary for completing the cruel preparations for the crucifixion—it will be easy to perceive how this hour and half would be occupied, and the accounts of Mark and John perfectly harmonized. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What struggles are there in the breasts of carnal men between the convictions of their conscience and their care of their secular interests—between the terrors of God and the fears of men! But indulged lusts dreadfully bear down all religion, truth, and equity.—How shocking is it to behold the men of Israel persecute their divine King with outrage, indignity, and barbarity! Yet more amazing to behold the God of heaven giving up his only begotten Son into the hands of such vile and savage miscreants! But, lo! even the marks of disgrace proclaim his character and spread his renown! Astonishing is his meekness, patience, and holy fortitude, under all his sufferings. Remarkable his filial regard to his mother, and his dying trust in his heavenly Father. And while his hypocritical persecutors pretend ceremonious scruples of conscience amidst their obstinate violation of important precepts, the blood and water streaming from his heart verify the scripture, mark him really dead, and figure out our justification by his blood, and sanctification by his Spirit. And to magnify the grace of God, fulfil the predictions of the prophets, and honour the crucified Redeemer, disciples who had long been timorous and afraid to own him are emboldened at such an important crisis to give him an honourable interment.—Now, my soul, behold the God-man who was falsely accused that I might be honourably acquitted—was wounded and scourged, that by his stripes I might be healed—was clothed with a robe of derision, that I might be clothed with robes of righteousness and garments of salvation—was crowned with thorns, that I might wear a diadem of glory—had his royalty insulted, that I might be made a king unto God—was condemned, that I might be justified—bore his own cross, and was crucified on it, that he might bear my sins and carry my sorrows—was numbered with transgressors, that I might have a cup of salvation, joy, and praise—and finished transgression and suffering, that I might be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation!

CHAPTER XX. Ver. 17. Do not stay now to express your affection to me in this manner, as you will have repeated opportunities of seeing me before I ascend to my heavenly Father; but run quickly to my poor disconsolate disciples, whom, notwithstanding their late defection, I still love as much as ever, and esteem as my brethren, and heirs of the same glory with myself, and tell them that I am risen to an immortal life, and not to set up a temporal kingdom among them on earth; and am, after some time, to

THE ARCH OF ECCE HOMO, JERUSALEM — WHERE THE CROSS WAS LAID UPON CHRIST. [JOHN, xix: 16.] — The way along which our Savior was led from the Judgment Hall to the place of crucifixion is called the Via Dolorosa, or the Way of Sorrow. The Arch of Ecce Homo is the second station in the Way of Sorrow, for it is said that here the cross was laid upon Christ. There is something very pathetic about this gloomy street. As one walks along and sees the people kiss the various stations, thereby evidencing their deep love for the Man of Sorrows, it is sufficient to call forth tears from the hardest heart. Beginning with the palace of Pilate and ending with Calvary, the Via Dolorosa is the most loved street in the world, and it is the only street in history made famous by one single person walking over it one time.

power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore <sup>h</sup>he that delivered me unto thee hath the <sup>k</sup>greater sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, 'If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cæsar.

13 When<sup>n</sup> Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.<sup>7</sup>

14 And it was <sup>o</sup>the preparation of the pass-over,<sup>8</sup> and about the <sup>9</sup>sixth hour:<sup>1</sup> and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!

15 But<sup>p</sup> they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him! Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, 'We have no king but Cæsar.

16 Then<sup>r</sup> delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 ¶ And he bearing his cross went <sup>s</sup>forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew, Golgotha:

18 Where<sup>t</sup> they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 ¶ And<sup>u</sup> Pilate wrote a title,<sup>2</sup> and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.<sup>3</sup>

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.<sup>4</sup>

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written I have written.

23 ¶ Then<sup>v</sup> the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam,<sup>5</sup> woven<sup>6</sup> from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, 'They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 ¶ Now<sup>y</sup> there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas,<sup>7</sup> and Mary Magdalene.

<sup>1</sup> According to this statement it was the sixth hour when Jesus stood before Pilate in the Hall of Judgment; but Mark (ch. 15.25) says he was crucified—i.e. nailed on the cross at the third hour; and the three first evangelists agree in the statement that Christ being upon the cross 'from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour,' Mat. 27.45. MODERN MOUNT CALVARY—ONE OF THE TWO PLACES AGREED UPON AS THE PLACE OF CRUCIFIXION. [JOHN, xix:17.] —This is here called modern Mount Calvary, because another place contends for the honor of being the spot where our Lord was crucified. The other place is inside the walls of Jerusalem and covered by the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. This is outside of the walls, and many of the best authorities claim that the evidences are in favor of its being the real place where Christ was crucified. It is to the north of the city, just across the Damascus road from the wall. To the right of the picture near the margin, we see the dome of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. So from this place we really have a view of both of the places where different authorities represent Christ as being crucified.

42 There<sup>y</sup> laid they Jesus therefore, because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.

THE first<sup>a</sup> day of the week cometh Mary<sup>1</sup> Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the <sup>b</sup>other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, <sup>c</sup>'They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter<sup>d</sup> therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together: and the other disciple did <sup>e</sup>outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he, stooping down, and looking in, saw<sup>g</sup> the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then<sup>h</sup> cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,<sup>2</sup>

7 And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For<sup>i</sup> as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then<sup>j</sup> the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ¶ But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, 12 And seeth two angels in white sitting,<sup>3</sup> the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weapest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw <sup>k</sup>Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weapest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, <sup>l</sup>and I will take him away.

with such divine authority, that whomsoever ye, according to the gospel, declare pardoned as a believer, or absolved from church censure as a penitent, he may take the comfort of forgiveness and absolution, as ratified by my authority; and whomsoever ye declare unpardoned on account of his unbelief, or keep under church censure as impenitent, his condemnation and continued censure shall stand ratified by my authority,

17 Jesus saith unto her, <sup>q</sup>'Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to <sup>r</sup>my brethren, and say unto them, <sup>s</sup>'I ascend unto my Father, <sup>t</sup>and your Father; and to my God, and <sup>u</sup>'your God.

18 Mary<sup>v</sup> Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

19 ¶ Then<sup>w</sup> the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, <sup>y</sup>'Peace be unto you.

GROTTO OF JEREMIAH—THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS BURIED. [JOHN, xx: 1.] —The Grotto of Jeremiah is under the height we have already given under the name of modern Mount Calvary. Those who look upon what we call modern Mount Calvary as the place where Christ was crucified take the position that the tomb of Joseph, in which Christ was buried, is what is now known as the Grotto of Jeremiah. This Joseph of Arimathea, a city of the Jews, asked Pilate for the body of Jesus, and then took it down from the cross, wrapped it in new linen and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone wherein man never before was laid. Joseph of Arimathea was said to be a native of Ramleh, on the road from Jerusalem to Joppa. His connection with the burial of Christ brings his name to our day.

31 But<sup>a</sup> these are written, that ye might believe<sup>r</sup> that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that, <sup>s</sup>believing, ye might have life through his name.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Christ appearing again to his disciples was known of them by the great draught of fishes. 12 He dineth with them: 15 earnestly commandeth Peter to feed his lambs and sheep: 18 foretelleth him of his death: 22 rebuketh his curiosity touching John. 25 The conclusion.

AFTER these<sup>a</sup> things<sup>1</sup> Jesus showed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise showed he himself.

2 There<sup>b</sup> were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night <sup>c</sup>they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: <sup>d</sup>but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then Jesus saith unto them, Children,<sup>2</sup> have<sup>e</sup> ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, <sup>g</sup>Cast the net on the right side<sup>3</sup> of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore <sup>h</sup>that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is <sup>i</sup>the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,<sup>4</sup>) and <sup>j</sup>did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits,<sup>5</sup>) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, they saw <sup>k</sup>a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.<sup>6</sup>

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three:<sup>7</sup> and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

1 Some commentators have ventured to call in question the authority of this chapter, not because it is wanting in any MS., but merely because they think it contains matter of too little consequence. Such a principle of criticism is not to be tolerated, even were the matter of the narrative of little importance; still less, when it is just the best possible for the purpose—a narrative of witnesses engaged in their customary employments, discovering their risen Lord, conversing, and eating with him.—C.

5 Peter's last days were spent in prison, and he died a martyr. It is this our Lord here alludes to; John adds the explanation in the following verse, which was probably written after Peter's death.—P.

6 Till I come. Not till I come to the final judgment of the world—for that would be a forced and unnatural meaning—but till I come in those predicted judgments by which Jerusalem shall be trodden down, and the Jewish power dissolved—events which all history testifies that John alone of all the apostles survived.—C.

7 John outlived all the apostles and disciples of Christ. He is generally supposed to have lived in Judea till the death of the Virgin. Then he went to Ephesus, and after the death of all his brethren he battled nobly for Christian truth in the churches of Asia Minor. He was banished to Patmos in the reign of Domitian, and returning to Ephesus again, died about the close of the first century.—P.

12 ¶ Jesus saith unto them, Come and <sup>8</sup>dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus<sup>1</sup> then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now the <sup>9</sup>third time that Jesus showed himself to his disciples after that he was risen from the dead.

15 ¶ So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, <sup>o</sup>Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me <sup>p</sup>more than these?<sup>9</sup> He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; <sup>q</sup>thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, <sup>r</sup>Feed my lambs.<sup>1</sup>

16 He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, <sup>s</sup>Feed<sup>2</sup> my sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time,<sup>3</sup> Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was <sup>t</sup>grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, <sup>u</sup>thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, <sup>v</sup>Feed<sup>4</sup> my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt <sup>w</sup>stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.<sup>5</sup>

19 This spake he, signifying <sup>x</sup>by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, <sup>y</sup>Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple <sup>z</sup>whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter, seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and <sup>a</sup>what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry <sup>b</sup>till I come,<sup>6</sup> what<sup>c</sup> is that to thee? Follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?<sup>7</sup> his own repeated appearances, and even the jealousies of disciples, concur to render it unquestionable. But marvellous was his condescension and kindness to such as had forsaken him in his extremity—to Peter, who had denied him, and to Thomas, who had so perversely indulged the most obstinate unbelief. He gives them his peace, owns them for brethren, and qualifies and appoints them to preach his gospel. Great is the mercy that we have all this recorded by eye-witnesses directed by the Holy Spirit, that we may believe it, to the eternal salvation of our soul; and that we have the weekly Sabbath as a stated season of intercourse with our Saviour. If we love him much, eagerly and early, through darkness and danger, we shall push our way into his presence. For to a tender-hearted Christian the felt absence of his Lord is the most distressing and insupportable. But often that is mourned over which is a great ground of rejoicing.

And Jesus and his consolations are frequently at hand when we know not where to find him. He takes delight to recognize his relation and hasten to our help. And neither shut doors, slavish fears, nor unbelieving hearts, can hinder his gracious visits. Yea, the stoutest hearts ought to melt in confident believing under the transcendent intimations of his love.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 25. Contain. This is no hyperbole, a figure totally incompatible with the derivation of the Scriptures from 'the Spirit of truth.' To 'contain' a book is not to afford it room as an article of furniture, but to retain it in the memory and digest it in the judgment. In this sense, a minute and complete narrative of 'all that Jesus began to do and to teach,' Ac. 1. 1, with all the immediate bearings and effects of every word and action, would, instead of a portable volume suited to every man's time and capacity, have formed a library too voluminous for the leisure and study even of the most learned.—Written. These words form an incontrovertible evidence that the Scriptures (and not unwritten tradition or the church) are the true and infallible rule of faith. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Often repeated, miraculous, and manifest are the proofs of Christ's resurrection. And it is highly criminal to doubt of it after so many satisfactory documents. With what wonders of divine power, condescension, and kindness he shows himself to his people! He is often near them while they know it not, and is better to them than they expect; or even visits them before they look for him. The sight of him powerfully draws out the heart of penitent beholders. And neither danger nor death can restrain their running to him. He delightfully prospers the labours, notices the circumstances, and supplies the wants of all people. But if they have been ashamed of or in any way departed from him, their love to him must be thoroughly tried. Happy are they who can prove it by their superlative esteem of and faithful appeals to himself. And if we know that he first loved us, let our former falls lie heavy on our heart; and let

SEA OF GALILEE—SHOWING VIEWS OF CAPERNAUM. [JOHN, xxi: 11.] — “Simon Peter went up and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three, and for all there were so many yet was not the net broken.”—John, xxi: 11. This incident took place on the Sea of Galilee after the resurrection. It is probable that it also occurred at Capernaum, where our Savior made His home after being rejected by His own people at Nazareth. The picture above is a representation of Capernaum as it appears to-day. Broken marble, Corinthian and Doric capitals, weeds, desolation, and the ever-moving and ever-changing Galilean Sea, is all that we see now. The proud Capernaum, that was exalted to heaven, is now left utterly in ruins. Here, in the midst of His old home, the Lord appeared to the disciples after the resurrection.

24 ¶ This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and <sup>d</sup>we know that his testimony is true.

25 And<sup>e</sup> there are also many other things us, without indulging vain curiosity, follow him through sufferings and death.—Without his direction ministers spend themselves in vain in fishing for souls; but under his guidance and influence multitudes are brought to him; nor can their gospel altogether fail. The weakest souls must be equally taken care of as the strongest. Nor can ministers ever truly manifest their love to Jesus without earnest care and labour to feed his lambs and sheep with his gospel provision. And blessed be the Lord that his own oracles have no uncertainties and need no human supplements. On their contents we may safely rest the eternal salvation of our souls.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JOHN.

The young student of the Greek language who attempts, in any degree, to become his own teacher, soon discovers some surprising difference between the style of John and that of the preceding evangelists. He can read his Gospel with comparative ease, while he finds the difficulties of the others nearly insuperable. This simplicity of construction forms a beautiful example of the teaching Spirit 'becoming all things to all men, that he might (instruct) some;' furnishing 'milk to babes,' while abounding in 'strong meat' for them who 'are able to bear it.' C.

The training of St. John under our Lord, his mental characteristics, and the circumstances under which he wrote this Gospel, have been sketched in the introduction. From the moment when, turning from the Baptist, he joined Jesus, he seems never to have left his side. He delighted in the contemplation of that nature which was all love and mercy. He hung with devoted attention on every word which fell from his lips. He endeavoured to fathom every truth set forth in those matchless discourses. In the intimacy of companionship he doubtless asked and prayed until the full light of divine truth flashed upon his mind. From Mary, too, after our Lord on the cross had committed her to his care, John doubtless derived much information. She who had watched her son with mingled affection and wonder from infancy could no doubt communicate to the beloved disciple many of those displays of wisdom, love, and power which she alone had witnessed. John was also impressed more deeply than any of his brethren with the promise of the Holy Spirit given during one of our Lord's last interviews with his disciples:— 'But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have done unto you. . . . When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak, and he will show you things to come.' And John appears to have realized, in some respects at least, more remarkably than any of his brethren, the fulfilment of this promise, in the way in which he was able to record Christ's long discourses.

John's subsequent career is prophetically sketched in the close of the Gospel, ch. 21. 20-24. After the ascension John seldom appears in the great events of the church's history until near the close of his life. He was a man of contemplation rather than of action. His mind was in all probability absorbed in the study of the deep mysteries of gospel doctrine. He saw others better adapted for the external work of the church, and he was content, while aiding occasionally by his counsel, Acts 3. 1, 11; 4. 19-23; 8. 14-17. Paul speaks of him as one of the pillars of the church at Jerusalem, Ga. 2. 9. His subsequent career is only dimly shadowed in early church history. He is said to have remained in Judaea till the death of Mary relieved him from his sacred trust. Afterwards he seems to have gone to Ephesus, and to have settled there after the close of Paul's work. When he alone was left of all Christ's disciples, and when the trials of the infant church needed his aid, he came boldly forward as a champion of the truth. False doctrines began to spring up. The humanity of Christ was denied by some; the reality of his divine mission by others. A partial conformity to Judaism was advocated on the one hand; and an unholy alliance with idolatrous worship was tolerated on the other. With all these, and probably other forms of error, the aged apostle had now to battle. His profound knowledge of divine truth was now of advantage, and was set forth with equal clearness and simplicity in his Gospel. An age of controversy is apt to be an age of angry feeling. Theological disputes are generally productive of more bitterness than other disputes. But while John met error boldly, and refuted it fearlessly and effectively, he displayed and inculcated a love and gentleness such as could only be drawn from the heart of Jesus himself. He gave to the church and the world in his writings a divine exemplar of Christian controversy.

While John breathed the very spirit of love—while he affirmed that 'God is love'—that the substance of both Law and Gospel is love, the religion which he defended and developed was yet no mere sentiment. The love which John inculcated and exemplified was a love displayed in obedience to divine law, and in the full reception of divine truth. The character of John has been often greatly misrepresented. Christian art has in some degree contributed to this. 'The youthful feminine form which art has assigned to St. John, has served to remove from our minds the stronger features of his nature. Yet these may not be forgotten, for even in this aspect the eagle is his true symbol. His love was no soft feeling, but a living principle, an absolute devotion to truth, as he had seen and known it in the person of his Lord. He stands forth as the ideal of a thoughtful Christian, relentless against evil, and yet patient with the doubting. He tarried till the Lord came, and left his Gospel as the witness and seal of the accomplishment of the apostolic work.'

John was a close follower, and an ardent and enthusiastic imitator of Jesus. Christ's life, Christ's character, Christ's words, formed the constant subjects of contemplation and study. To him Christ was all in all. He sought wisdom from its highest source; he drew his love from the heart of his loving Master. In John we see the noblest powers employed in the noblest work; we see the highest genius consecrated to God; we see, too, his life-work crowned with the noblest reward. P.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

The Gospel by Luke and the Acts of the Apostles are both dedicated to Theophilus; and as the author of 'The Acts' calls the Gospel his 'former treatise,' there is, therefore, internal evidence, with which all antiquity agrees, that the book of 'Acts' was written by Luke. As it continues to the second year of Paul's imprisonment, it could not have been finished earlier than A.D. 64 or 65. The object of the writer was, evidently, not a complete history of the Christian church during the period which his narrative embraces; for he passes over all the affairs of the church at Jerusalem subsequent to the conversion of Paul; furnishes few records of the labours of any other apostle; while some he never mentions at all. Nor was it his object to write a complete history even of Paul, his companion; for he passes over in silence some of the most remarkable events of his life, such as his journey into Arabia, three of his shipwrecks, and his exposure and perils among the robber hordes of the deserts. His objects were higher than these, however gratifying they might appear to a pious curiosity, and however instructive as examples of devotedness and zeal. The object of Luke was mainly to record the wonderful effusion of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, thus teaching the church that, without the Spirit of God, all other qualifications are impotent; to furnish a few specimens of apostolic preaching; to record some of the principal miracles by which the gospel testimony was confirmed; and to bear witness to the admission of the Gentiles into the Christian community.

This being the last historical book of the Scriptures, it is worthy of remark, that not one of the sacred biographers, from Moses to Luke, ever attempts to produce 'a hero'—a man superior to all his contemporaries—the idol of historic worship! The Bible alone tells truth! Paul is introduced as a guilty murderer! and subsequently to his conversion—though the writer passes no opinion—he faithfully records the fact, and leaves us to judge for ourselves, whether Paul or Barnabas was in error in that 'sharp contention' that separated them in the work of the mission, ch. 15. 39. Yet the Bible produces really great characters! Men devoid of every ambition but to do good! Men capable of sacrificing every hour of ease, every prospect of emolument, and hope of honour; of undergoing every toil, of enduring every persecution, of repaying kindness for every injury, of rejoicing in tribulation, of hoping against hope, of enduring to the end; neither depressed by failure, nor rendered vain by success.—Self nothing—Jesus all! Such was Moses—such the prophets—such the apostles; and such, in some measure, must be every one who, 'through faith and patience, would inherit the promises.' C.

CHAPTER I.

1 Christ, preparing his apostles to the beholding of his ascension, gathereth them together into the mount Olivet, commandeth them to expect in Jerusalem the sending down of the Holy Ghost, promiseth after few days to send it: by virtue whereof they should be witnesses unto him, even to the utmost parts of the earth. 10 After his ascension they are warned by two angels to depart, and to set their minds upon his second coming. 12 They accordingly return, and, giving themselves to prayer, choose Matthias apostle in the place of Judas.

THE former<sup>a</sup> treatise have I made, O Theophilus, <sup>b</sup>of all that Jesus began both to do and teach,

2 Until the day in which he <sup>c</sup>was taken up, after that he <sup>d</sup>through the Holy Ghost <sup>e</sup>had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen:<sup>1</sup>

3 To<sup>g</sup> whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them <sup>h</sup>forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the <sup>i</sup>kingdom of God:

4 And, being assembled together with <sup>j</sup>them,<sup>2</sup> commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for <sup>k</sup>the promise of the Father, which, <sup>l</sup>saith he, ye have heard of me.

5 For<sup>k</sup> John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together<sup>3</sup> they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time <sup>m</sup>restore again the kingdom to Israel?

8 But<sup>o</sup> ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you:<sup>4</sup> and ye shall be <sup>p</sup>witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.<sup>5</sup>

9 And<sup>q</sup> when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 ¶ And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in <sup>r</sup>white apparel;

11 Which also said, Ye <sup>s</sup>men of Galilee, 'why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, "shall so come in like manner<sup>6</sup> as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 ¶ Then returned they unto Jerusalem from <sup>t</sup>the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a <sup>u</sup>sabbath-day's journey.<sup>8</sup>

13 And when they were come in, they went up into an <sup>v</sup>upper room, where abode both <sup>w</sup>Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 6. Restore the kingdom. Not merely by breaking the Roman yoke, but by overturning the Pharisaic or Sadducean oligarchy, and re-establishing the constitutional monarchy of David. This idea of an immediate temporal kingdom still haunted the disciples; and, in prospect, is still the hope of the Jewish nation, unless where, alas! they have become totally infidel. The answer of our Lord (ver. 7) seems clearly to intimate that a national restoration is one of the purposes of Providence, though the date of its accomplishment has not been revealed. C.

Ver. 7, 8. Power. The word translated power in ver. 7 is ἐξουσία. The passage there may be rendered thus: 'which the Father hath reserved in his own disposal,' as things unrevealed.—The word here translated power is δύναμις, signifying miraculous power communicated from God. C.

Ver. 13. Upper room. Some have supposed this 'room' to have been in the temple; no opinion can seem more unnatural. If, in the absence of certainty, conjecture may be indulged, might not our thoughts turn to 'the large upper room furnished' in which our Lord and his disciples partook of the last supper? Lu. 22. 12. C.

Ver. 25. His own place. The place suited to him, 'prepared' for him, Mat. 25. 41; the place that, in the face of all warning, he had literally chosen, by choosing covetousness and lies, Col. 3. 5; 1 Co. 6. 9, 10; Mat. 26. 48; Re. 21. 8. C.

14 These<sup>a</sup> all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

15 ¶ And in those days <sup>a</sup>Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of the names<sup>9</sup> together were about an hundred and twenty,)<sup>1</sup>

16 Men and brethren, <sup>b</sup>This scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.

17 For he was <sup>c</sup>numbered with us, and had obtained part of this <sup>d</sup>ministry.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, Let<sup>h</sup> his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and, His bishopric<sup>4</sup> let another take.

21 Wherefore of these men which have accompanied with us <sup>i</sup>all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained<sup>5</sup> to be a <sup>j</sup>witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas,<sup>k</sup> who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which<sup>l</sup> knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two thou hast chosen,<sup>6</sup>

25 That he may take part of <sup>n</sup>this ministry and apostleship, from which <sup>o</sup>Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And<sup>p</sup> they gave forth their lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

<sup>k</sup> Matthew states that Judas, when he saw that Jesus was condemned, 'went and hanged himself.' Here Luke says, 'falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst.' There is no real discrepancy. Matthew shows that he attempted suicide; Luke is more particular, and shows that during the suicidal attempt a catastrophe of some kind occurred; he fell, and in the fall was fearfully mutilated. He was thus in reality guilty of the crime of self-murder; while at the same time the vengeance of Heaven reached him in a direct and terrible form. <sup>g</sup> The Greek and Hebrew words for spirit are derived from roots which signify to breathe. When Christ conferred the Spirit upon the apostles he breathed upon them. So here the chosen vehicle by which the divine Spirit, when descending on the disciples, was manifested to their sense of hearing, was 'a sound as of a rushing mighty wind.' But as if to afford additional testimony of the reality of the Spirit's advent, there was a visible manifestation also in the 'cloven tongues, like as of fire.'—P.

CHAPTER II.

1 The apostles, filled with the Holy Ghost, and speaking divers languages, are admired by some, and derided by others. 14 Whom Peter disproving, and showing that the apostles spake by the power of the Holy Ghost, that Jesus was risen from the dead, ascended into heaven, had poured down the same Holy Ghost, and was the Messiah, a man known to them to be approved of God by his miracles, wonders, and signs, and not crucified without his determinate counsel and foreknowledge: 37 he baptizeth a great number that were converted. 41 Who afterwards devoutly and charitably converse together: the apostles working many miracles, and God daily increasing his church.

AND when<sup>a</sup> the day of Pentecost was fully come, <sup>b</sup>they were all with one accord in one place.

2 And<sup>c</sup> suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them <sup>d</sup>cloven tongues, like as of <sup>e</sup>fire, and it sat upon each of them:<sup>1</sup>

4 And<sup>g</sup> they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.<sup>2</sup>

5 And<sup>h</sup> there were dwelling<sup>3</sup> at Jerusalem, Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

6 Now when this was noised abroad,<sup>4</sup> the multitude came together, and were <sup>5</sup>confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

7 And they were all <sup>i</sup>amazed, and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak <sup>j</sup>Galileans?

8 And <sup>k</sup>how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

11 Cretes<sup>u</sup> and <sup>v</sup>Arabians, we do hear them speak in our <sup>w</sup>tongues the <sup>x</sup>wonderful works of God.

12 And<sup>z</sup> they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, <sup>a</sup>What meaneth this?

13 Others<sup>b</sup> mocking said, These men are full of new wine.

REFLECTIONS.—The most glorious and uncontrollable evidence is given us of the resurrection and exaltation of our once crucified Redeemer, that through him our faith and hope might be in God. Great numbers of disciples had frequent opportunities of seeing and conversing with him after his death, and could not possibly mistake him for any other; yea, saw him ascend, in our nature, to heaven, and heard the angel's attestation concerning him. Most gladdening truth! He has carried our nature to the right hand of God, and will in due time return, for our salvation, to judge the quick and the dead. And infinite is the mercy that in his absence he has, by promise and fulfilment, secured for us the presence and influence of the Holy Ghost to supply his room, and to own, assist, and comfort us in his work. Let us then, in a humble dependence on and patient waiting for him, avoid all carnal views of his kingdom, or curious prying into God's secrets. For there is need of great activity in his honourable work, and of preparation for his second coming, at which we must give our account. While the world rages in wickedness, let united devotions be the delight of our souls! The joint effectual fervent prayers of righteous men avail much. But O the inexpressibly terrible end of treacherous ministers! Their honour or wealth avail them but little in the day of God's wrath. Happy is it when God, even by terrible things in righteousness, degrades and punishes them for the confirmation of his truths, and supplies their room with such as are qualified and faithful. And great care ought to be taken that none but such be admitted. But if God testify his call and approbation, all ought to receive and regard them as his ambassadors. Ever solicitous for the welfare of the church, we ought to commit all her matters to Jesus, as her kind head and gracious Lord of all things. And never let us, by lot, appeal to God in matters ludicrous or trifling, but only in cases of great importance which cannot be otherwise decided, and that with solemn prayer for his direction and a ready submission to his decision.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. Pentecost. One of the three great festivals in which all the males were required to appear at Jerusalem. It was called Pentecost (the fiftieth) because celebrated on the fiftieth, counting from the second day of the passover; that is, seven weeks after the 16th Nisan. Comp. Le. 23. 15, &c.; De. 16. 9, &c.; and see Josephus' Antiq. iii. x. 6. It was also called the feast of weeks, De. 16. 10, and was considered a thanksgiving for the harvest, De. 16. 9, &c. C.

Ver. 5. Can this assertion be true, seeing the continent of America and Pacific Islands had not been discovered? Observe, the narrative does not say 'out of every country,' but 'out of every nation under heaven;' that is, men who were acquainted with every generic language—a statement which requires no figure for its defence, but which was simply and literally true. C.

Ver. 13. Others. Not other foreign Jews, for they would have recognized the speech of their several countries, but Jews of Jerusalem, to whom the foreign tongues would appear as the ravings of drunken men; or who, out of malice against the followers of Jesus, would willingly invent and propagate any plausible accusation that might discredit them with the people. C.

Ver. 23. By wicked hands. If Jesus was delivered by 'the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God,' 'why doth he yet find fault? for who hath resisted his will?' God hath said it, and 'who art thou, O man, that repliest against God,' Ro. 9. 19. But, still it is questioned, if God 'determined' that the event should come to pass, how could those who fulfilled his will be 'wicked?' or, if God 'determined' the act, is he not thereby represented as the author of sin? This, if really a question, is fair and reasonable; but if a cavil, most worthless and foolish. God cannot be the author of sin; for God is love, Ja. 1. 13; 1 Ju.

14 ¶ But <sup>c</sup>Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted<sup>d</sup> up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing<sup>e</sup> it is but the third hour of the day.<sup>7</sup>

16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel:

17 And<sup>g</sup> it shall come to pass in the last days,<sup>8</sup> saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out, in those days, of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

19 And<sup>h</sup> I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

20 The<sup>i</sup> sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:<sup>9</sup>

21 And<sup>j</sup> it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord, shall be saved.<sup>1</sup>

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus<sup>k</sup> of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him,<sup>l</sup> being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

24 Whom<sup>n</sup> God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not <sup>o</sup>possible<sup>2</sup> that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, <sup>p</sup>I foresaw the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

26 Therefore<sup>q</sup> did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope:

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer <sup>r</sup>thine Holy One to see corruption.

28 Thou<sup>s</sup> hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Men and brethren, let me<sup>3</sup> freely speak unto you <sup>t</sup>of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore<sup>u</sup> being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

31 He,<sup>v</sup> seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 This<sup>w</sup> Jesus hath God raised up, whereof <sup>x</sup>we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore, <sup>y</sup>being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended<sup>4</sup> into the heavens: but he saith himself, 'The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the <sup>z</sup>house of Israel <sup>aa</sup>know assuredly, that <sup>ab</sup>God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 ¶ Now when they heard this, <sup>ac</sup>they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?<sup>5</sup>

38 Then Peter said unto them, <sup>ad</sup>Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission<sup>6</sup> of sins, and <sup>ae</sup>ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.<sup>7</sup>

39 For <sup>af</sup>the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off,<sup>8</sup> even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with many other words did he <sup>ag</sup>testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41 ¶ Then<sup>k</sup> they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

42 And<sup>i</sup> they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread,<sup>9</sup> and in prayers.

43 And<sup>n</sup> fear came upon every soul: and <sup>ah</sup>many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

44 And<sup>p</sup> all that believed were together, and had all things common;

45 And<sup>q</sup> sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.

47 Praising<sup>s</sup> God, and having favour with all the people.<sup>3</sup> And<sup>t</sup> the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.<sup>4</sup>

4. 8. God therefore does not, cannot, 'determine' that men should sin; that is, should become 'wicked.' But God 'fore-knows' that men, of their own rebellious hearts, will sin, will be 'wicked;' and God, as a judge, can only give them up to their own hearts' lusts, and to walk in their own 'counsels,' Ps. 81. 12; Ro. 1. 24, 28. So that while men act freely, the event is 'determined,' because the judgment 'allowing freedom' is fixed and certain. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It was impossible that Jesus, who by obedience unto death had honored his Father's law and justice, should be held a prisoner in the grave.

And glorious are the fruits of his resurrection and exaltation to his Father's right hand. Yea, astonishing is the effusion of the Holy Ghost thereby to qualify his preachers and to awaken hearers.—Quickly he comes to them who, with united hearts, wait and cry for his

CHAPTER III.

1 Peter preaching to the people that came to see a lame man restored to his feet, 12 professeth the cure not to have been wrought by his or John's own power, or holiness, but by God, and his Son Jesus, and through faith in his name: 13 withal reprehending them for crucifying Jesus. 17 Which because they did it through ignorance, and that thereby were fulfilled God's determinate counsel, and the scriptures: 19 he exhorteth them by repentance and faith to seek remission of their sins, and salvation in the same Jesus.

NOW Peter<sup>a</sup> and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.<sup>1</sup>

2 And a certain man, <sup>b</sup>lame from his mother's womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful,<sup>2</sup> to ask<sup>c</sup> alms of them that entered into the temple;

3 Who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms.

4 And <sup>d</sup>Peter, fastening his eyes upon him, with John, said, Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

6 Then Peter said, <sup>e</sup>Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk.<sup>3</sup>

7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and <sup>g</sup>immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.

8 And <sup>h</sup>he, leaping up, stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.

9 And <sup>i</sup>all the people saw him walking and praising God:

10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and <sup>j</sup>they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 And, as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them, in <sup>k</sup>the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12 ¶ And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as <sup>l</sup>though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

13 The<sup>n</sup> God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath <sup>o</sup>glorified his Son Jesus; whom <sup>p</sup>ye delivered up, and * How could they be said to have denied Jesus 'through ignorance,' in face of all his miracles? Their eyes were blinded through prejudice in favour of a temporal king and conqueror, and therefore the meek and lowly Jesus they could not acknowledge. Their ignorance was highly criminal, for it was prejudice against evidence—still it was ignorance; and therefore the apostle adduces it, not as an excuse for former sin, but as an argument for present repentance.—C.

† Being announced in the first prophecy (Ge. 3. 15) as the 'seed of the woman,' he was thus under a broken law, and so liable to its penalty—sorrow, labour, and death—before he could accomplish the work of salvation. Subsequently every sacrifice pointed to him as a sufferer, while all the prophets, but especially David, Isaiah, and Daniel, describe him in the plainest terms as sold, scourged, wounded, and crucified.—C.

am This was the grand object of Christ's death and resurrection. The Jews had the fullest opportunities given them of seeing and testing the evidences of our Lord's divine mission both before and after his death. To the Jews the apostles were first sent; and among the Jews the palpable proofs of the Holy Spirit's advent, and the wondrous results of his work in the minds of the apostles, and on the hearts of the people were manifested. The object of all being to turn them from their sin of unbelief, and to lead them to faith in God.—P.

18 But<sup>u</sup> those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets,<sup>8</sup> that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 Repent<sup>v</sup> ye therefore, and be <sup>x</sup>converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when <sup>y</sup>the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

presence. And he can suddenly effect a great spreading and understanding of the gospel, and fulfilment of ancient predictions. What bold resolution he gives his lately so timorous disciples! How open their avowal of Jesus' messiahship, divinity, and resurrection from the dead, where he had been lately crucified as a notorious malefactor! Great is the wisdom and power of God in thus overruling the wickedness of men for his own glory, for the honour of Christ, and the salvation of men. But his purpose, or overruling providence, in no respect excuses or extenuates our guilt. Alas! how perversely men will continue opposing and reviling the most evident manifestations of God's power and goodness till the Holy Ghost begins to work in their heart! But then the most wonderful effects will follow—the deepest impressions of divine truths; a thorough conviction and self-debasement; earnest inquiries after salvation: the most unfeigned faith and sincere repentance; dedication of men's riches and their children to the Lord; faithful subjection to Christ and to his gospel; joining in religious fellowship with his people; an observation of his commandments; delightful and reverential regard to his ordinances; grateful praise for his kindness, and zeal for his glory; heavenly-mindedness, contempt of this world, and compassionate love to poor fellow-saints; and a daily addition of members to the church.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 19. Repent. Change your minds.—Be converted. Change your conduct—doing both, not in order to believing, but as the necessary consequences of believing the evidence now furnished to your eyes and your understandings. C.

C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy are they, whose hearts are so fitted for devotion, that the returning seasons of it, in public or private, are always welcome! And if men heartily love prayer, they will never think morning and evening too frequent for it. Many, rich in faith, are poor and destitute in this world: but the blessings of grace do more than balance their wants. It is good to attend God's ordinances in expectation of his favours. If he apprehend us by his Spirit, we shall lay hold on him by faith. And if we obtain his deliverances, we ought to triumph in his praise, and even dearly to regard the honoured instruments of our deliverance. But the more God honours ministers, the more should they lay out themselves for his honour, and take every opportunity of doing good to souls.—How glorious is our exalted Saviour! And safely may we believe his apostles' testimony concerning him. In him ancient predictions are fulfilled. And through believing dependence on his power and authority the

NAZARETH FROM THE EAST. [ACTS, iii: 22.]—We are permitted here to look upon the beautiful little mountain city where lived the prophet the Lord raised up, like unto Moses, but greater than Moses, for He who was prophet was at the same time priest and king. In the valley are the olive trees, whose very names call up Palestine and the East. Rising gradually up the sides of the hill are the white two-story houses, built of stone, and furnishing all that is necessary to make a striking and attractive picture. No one can ever tire of Nazareth. Valleys, mountains, transparent atmosphere, and deep, over-bending skies unite with the beautiful stone houses to make a picture worthy the brush of Raphael. The Savior, who grew up here, and who spent so many of the years of His manhood here, is gone, but His spirit lends enchantment to the place.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The rulers of the Jews offended with Peter's sermon, 4 (though thousands of the people were converted that heard the word), imprison him and John. 5 After, upon examination, Peter boldly avouching the lame man to be healed by the name of Jesus, and that by the same Jesus only we must be eternally saved, 13 they command him and John to preach no more in that name, adding also threatening; 23 whereupon the church fleeth to prayer. 31 And God, by moving the place where they were assembled, testified that he heard their prayer: confirming the church with the gift of the Holy Ghost, and with mutual love and charity.

AND as they spake unto the people, <sup>a</sup>the priests, and the <sup>1</sup>captain<sup>2</sup> of the temple, and the Sadducees,<sup>b</sup> came upon them,

2 Being<sup>c</sup> grieved that they taught the people, and preached <sup>d</sup>through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and <sup>e</sup>put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide.

4 Howbeit <sup>f</sup>many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.<sup>3</sup>

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that their<sup>h</sup> rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And Annas<sup>4</sup> the high-priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high-priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had <sup>i</sup>set them in the midst, they asked, <sup>j</sup>By what power,<sup>5</sup> or by what name, have ye done this?

8 Then Peter, <sup>k</sup>filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the <sup>l</sup>'good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name<sup>6</sup> of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, <sup>m</sup>whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, <sup>n</sup>even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 This<sup>o</sup> is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

12 Neither<sup>p</sup> is there salvation<sup>7</sup> in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

k 2. 23. It is the counsel and purpose of God to save sinners—Jesus Christ comes to fulfil that purpose, saying, 'Lo, I come to do thy will.' That will must needs be fulfilled by the death of the Redeemer, He. 9. 16, and God 'determines' two things in his 'counsel,' and fulfils them by his 'hand': first, to give up his Son to die for sinners; secondly, to give up sinners to their own will, so that, while rebels to his law, they shall yet most assuredly accomplish his work.—C.

s The humility of the apostles was equal to their boldness. They acknowledged that the strength they were enabled to exhibit was not their own. It was divine. They prayed for more, not merely that they might be kept firm; but that by their firmness, and by the miracles which they, as instruments of God, might perform, the kingdom of Christ might be extended and souls saved.—P.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, <sup>u</sup>they conferred among themselves, 16 Saying, <sup>v</sup>'What shall we do to these men?' for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them <sup>w</sup>is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny <sup>x</sup>it.

17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us <sup>y</sup>'straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, <sup>z</sup>'Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

20 For<sup>y</sup> we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.<sup>2</sup>

22 For the man was above <sup>d</sup>forty years old on whom this miracle of healing was showed.

23 ¶ And being let go, they went <sup>e</sup>to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard <sup>f</sup>that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, <sup>g</sup>'thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is;

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, <sup>h</sup>'Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For of a truth, against thy <sup>i</sup>'holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, <sup>k</sup>both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, 28 For<sup>l</sup> to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined<sup>3</sup> before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with <sup>m</sup>'all boldness they may speak thy word,

30 By<sup>o</sup> stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.<sup>4</sup>

31 ¶ And<sup>p</sup> when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together;

most amazing miracles have been wrought. Marvelous is the wisdom and power of God in making even the most daring wickedness of men the great means of bringing about our salvation! And extensive is the instruction, ample the pardons, gracious the reformation, and abundant the blessings which Jesus Christ bestows on the chief of sinners. What delightful encouragement is this to faith and repentance, that, in his seasons of mercy, we may find rest and refreshment to our souls! What excitement to rejoice in his exaltation, and to wait for his return to judgment!

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—Men who heartily hate one another, often cordially unite in opposition to Christ, his gospel, and his servants. But it is delightful when fierce persecution animates to a prudent zeal for Christ's honour, and when he balances it by the conversion of multitudes of hardened sinners. For if ministers preach Christ faithfully and successfully, they must expect trouble for it. Rich, full, and free is that salvation for sinful men which is in him alone. It is necessary always to believe and receive it, and in our stations to exhibit and declare it. Excellent is the cause of the gospel; and nothing but absurd rage and overbearing violence can ever oppose it. But in the most violent opposition Jesus can inspire his most cowardly servants with wisdom and courage to make and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And<sup>r</sup> the multitude of them that believed were of one heart, and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.<sup>5</sup>

33 And<sup>s</sup> with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

34 Neither<sup>u</sup> was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

35 And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

36 And<sup>v</sup> Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite,<sup>6</sup> and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

CHAPTER V.

5 After that Ananias and Sapphira his wife, for their hypocrisy, at Peter's rebuke had fallen down dead, 12 and that the rest of the apostles had wrought many miracles, 14 to the increase of the faith, 17 the apostles are again imprisoned, 19 but delivered by an angel, bidding them to preach openly to all: 21 when, after their teaching accordingly in the temple, 29 and before the council, 33 they are in danger to be killed; through the advice of Gamaliel, a great counsellor among the Jews, they be kept alive, 40 and are not beaten: for which they glorify God, and cease no day from preaching.

BUT a<sup>a</sup> certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And<sup>b</sup> kept back<sup>1</sup> part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.<sup>2</sup>

3 But Peter said, Ananias, why<sup>c</sup> hath Satan filled thine heart to lie<sup>3</sup> to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto<sup>e</sup> God.<sup>4</sup>

6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then<sup>l</sup> fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

an open and bold confession of himself and his truths; and by them he can confound their most potent and learned opposers, and even convince their consciences of the inconceivable advantage of fellowship with him. Easily he restrains the wrath of men, and makes the remainder of it to praise him. And it is manifest that, however despised by men in authority, he is the head and Lord of his church. In every case it is much better to obey God than men. He is the almighty JEHOVAH, the Maker and Governor of all things. He rules the world in the interests of righteousness. All events are a fulfilment of his inspired oracles, and expression of his laws. In every time of need let us therefore address him by solemn prayer. Often he hears and answers in mercy while his people are yet speaking. And if he be with us, we need neither fear nor anxiously care who is against us. He knows every plot and every threatening of our enemies; and his presence and blessing are sufficient to encourage our perseverance in much tribulation. Heavenly is the delight and comfort that his Spirit can produce in our hearts. Yea, he can even make us rejoice in persecution for his sake. And glorious is the church when ministers are remarkably faithful and useful, and Christians so knit together as to be ready to give all they have for the relief of their indigent brethren.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 31. To give repentance, by giving time for consideration between the warning and the judgment, as God gave to the world between the preaching of Noah and the coming of the flood, and by presenting and applying, through the Spirit, the only sufficient arguments for repentance, the love, mercy, and free grace of God in Christ Jesus. C.

Ver. 36. Josephus places an insurrection under Theudas in the fourth year of the reign of Claudius. But this may be true without any impeachment of the accuracy of Luke, for Theudas was a common name among the Jews; and as there were several insurrections, two may have occurred under a leader of the same name. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is impossible to find a church on earth without tares, or much Christianity without some hypocrisy. Satan's temptations and men's own corruptions, particularly covetousness, easily lead them into lying and falsehood. But most heinous is this in dealing with God, as it is a direct contempt of his all-seeing Spirit. And yet, if Satan fill our heart, he will delude us into it; and even our nearest relations will encourage us in it. Seriously then should we guard against prevarication with that God who can strike liars and dissemblers dead for the honour of his gospel and church. And happy is it when such events deter hypocrites from joining her.—Well would it be if men showed as much care for their souls as most do for the health of their bodies! But, alas! with what blind fury do many, under pretence of religion, set themselves against Christ's eminent ministers, and fight against God; and by endeavouring to render them despicable, study to prejudice hearers against them! Yet his counsel and work shall stand, to the defiance and confusion of every opposer. At his pleasure prisons become paradises, or open their doors; marvellous miracles are wrought for the attestation of truth; the fury of the haughtiest rulers is restrained; the multitude is awed, and the church increased, amidst attempts to destroy her. Yea, learned, potent, and even inveterate enemies are made advocates for his cause. If then we endure terrors and reproaches for his sake, we may despise them, or even glory in them. And let us always publish the praises of our once crucified but now risen Redeemer, who is ex-

19 But* the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison-doors, and brought them forth, and said,

20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people <sup>9</sup>all the words of this life.<sup>9</sup>

21 And when they heard that, <sup>2</sup>they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. <sup>a</sup>But the high-priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned and told,

23 Saying, <sup>b</sup>The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now when the high-priest<sup>1</sup> and <sup>c</sup>the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they <sup>a</sup>doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then<sup>e</sup> came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence:<sup>2</sup> for <sup>9</sup>they feared the people,<sup>3</sup> lest they should have been stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, <sup>h</sup>they set them before the council: and the high-priest asked them,

28 Saying, <sup>i</sup>Did not we straitly command you, that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and <sup>j</sup>intend to bring this man's blood upon us.<sup>4</sup>

29 ¶ Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, <sup>k</sup>We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The<sup>l</sup> God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree.

31 Him<sup>n</sup> hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

They were now fulfilling the very duties to which Christ had appointed them; and the Holy Spirit, by strengthening them, filling them with divine power, imparting to them divine wisdom—was a joint-witness with them.—P.

c Gamaliel was one of the most celebrated and honoured of the Jewish rabbins. Though a strict Jew he was liberal in his views, and did much to ameliorate the rigour of the Pharisaic traditions. He was grandson of Hillel, and is still better known as the instructor of Paul.—P.

d False systems of religion have again and again succeeded in the world, and still continue, either where they have superseded Christianity, or where they have corrupted it. Does not this experience, therefore, contradict the doctrine of Gamaliel? No. Two circumstances, totally wanting in Christianity, have always characterized the false systems that have been successful in the world:—1. Every such system has flattered existing prejudices, adopted existing opinions and practices, or ministered to the baser passions of men. All these Christianity rejected, opposed, or mortified. 2. Every such system has had founders possessing such worldly learning, or employing such worldly means as obtained them influence with worldly men. Christianity had none of these means: its preachers twelve poor unlearned Galilean fishermen; its converts despised; and their only visible means, preaching boldly, bearing patiently, and praying continually. The eventual success of such a system, sustained by such inadequate means, Gamaliel did, therefore, rightly assume as a certain evidence of its divine origin.—C.

and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, <sup>a</sup>take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For <sup>b</sup>before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom <sup>c</sup>a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed<sup>7</sup> him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After<sup>8</sup> this man, rose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: <sup>a</sup>he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, <sup>b</sup>Refrain from these men, and let them alone: <sup>c</sup>for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought.

39 But <sup>d</sup>if it be of God, ye cannot <sup>e</sup>overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.

40 And to him they agreed: <sup>b</sup>and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

41 ¶ And they departed from the presence of the council, <sup>c</sup>rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And<sup>d</sup> daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER VI.

1 The apostles, desirous to have the poor regarded for their bodily sustenance, as also careful themselves to dispense the word of God, the food of the soul, 3 appoint the office of deaconship to seven chosen men. 5 Of whom Stephen, a man full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost, is one. 12 Who is taken of those, whom he confounded in disputing, 13 and afterwards falsely accused of blasphemy against the law and the temple.

AND in those days, <sup>a</sup>when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there <sup>b</sup>arose a murmuring of the Grecians<sup>1</sup> against the Hebrews, <sup>c</sup>because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.

2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, <sup>d</sup>It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.<sup>2</sup>

3 Wherefore, brethren, <sup>e</sup>look ye out among you<sup>3</sup> seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

4 But<sup>g</sup> we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 ¶ And the saying pleased the whole mul-alted as a Prince and a Saviour, freely to give repentance and forgiveness of sins to the most heinous transgressors.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—It is hard to manage much business without much inconvenience, and even some reflections. But it is shameful that money matters should occasion discontents among church-members, who are otherwise of one heart and soul.—And to prevent this, it becomes us to use the strictest impartiality in the management of the money, and all other matters of churches or states. It is a great sin and reproach to many Christian congregations that the office of deacon, so clearly appointed in Scripture, should be so much contemned. And it is necessary that every church-officer be intelligent, pious, and prudent; and that church-members be always required to choose their own officers, small or great. No patrons or presbyteries can pretend more fitness to choose for others than the inspired apostles, who refused it. It is dangerous and awful when ministers give themselves to idle chat, unprofitable reading, unnecessary sleep, or civil business, instead of their important ministrations and fervent prayer. But when gospel ministers are faithful and diligent, God often works by them miracles of grace in the conversion of sinners, even of profane clergymen, whose spiritual titude: and they chose <sup>h</sup>Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and <sup>i</sup>Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and <sup>j</sup>Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch:

6 Whom they set before the apostles: and when<sup>k</sup> they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.<sup>4</sup>

7 ¶ And<sup>l</sup> the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient<sup>n</sup> to the faith.

8 ¶ And<sup>o</sup> Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 Then<sup>p</sup> there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines,<sup>5</sup> and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And<sup>a</sup> they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 Then<sup>r</sup> they suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words<sup>6</sup> against Moses, and against God.

12 And<sup>s</sup> they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council,

13 And<sup>t</sup> set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law:

14 For<sup>u</sup> we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs<sup>7</sup> which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, <sup>v</sup>saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.<sup>8</sup>

CHAPTER VII.

1 Stephen, permitted to answer to the accusation of blasphemy, 2 sheweth that Abraham worshipped God rightly, and how God did choose the fathers, 20 before Moses was born, and before the tabernacle and temple were built: 37 that Moses himself witnessed of Christ: 44 and that all outward ceremonies were ordained according to the heavenly pattern, to last but for a time: 51 reprehending their rebellion, and murdering of Christ, the Just One, whom the prophets foretold should come into the world. 54 Whereupon they stone him to death, who commendeth his soul to Jesus, and humbly prayeth for them.

THEN said the high-priest, <sup>a</sup>Are these things so?

country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee.

4 Then<sup>9</sup> came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And<sup>h</sup> he gave him none inheritance<sup>3</sup> in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: <sup>i</sup>yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, <sup>j</sup>That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.<sup>4</sup>

7 And <sup>k</sup>the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and <sup>l</sup>serve me in this place.

8 And<sup>n</sup> he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve <sup>5</sup>patriarchs:

9 ¶ And<sup>o</sup> the patriarchs, moved with <sup>6</sup>envy, sold Joseph into Egypt: but God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.

11 Now<sup>p</sup> there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But<sup>a</sup> when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then<sup>r</sup> sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, <sup>7</sup>threescore and fifteen souls.<sup>8</sup>

15 So<sup>s</sup> Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers, 16 And were carried over into Sychem,<sup>9</sup> and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham<sup>1</sup> bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem.

17 ¶ But<sup>t</sup> when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt,

Ver. 35. The object of this statement is to show, that as the refusal of Moses as a ruler and judge was no evidence against his divine legation, so the refusal of Jesus as a Saviour was no evidence against his personal dignity and authority. C.
Ver. 59. The word 'God' is not in the original, but is erroneously supplied by the translators. From comparing this passage with Re. 22. 20, it will be evident that the dying prayer of the noble proto-martyr was addressed directly to the Lord Jesus. Which prayer, compared with that of our Lord himself, Lu. 23. 34, furnishes an evidence of the Godhead of Christ which nothing but blinded and hardened prejudice can possibly resist. C.

REFLECTIONS.—If we are called to account for our faith and hope in Christ, let the oracles of God be our sole defence: they all relate to him. In them he is represented as the God of glory; as the angel JEHOVAH who appeared to the patriarchs; and as the worker of case is peculiarly desperate. But, alas! how maliciously carnal men set themselves against Christ and his gospel, and readily charge its peculiar doctrines with blasphemy! And none are apt to be more inveterate enemies of truth than empty professors. No spirit of wisdom, no miracles, can move those who, instead of Scripture and reason, fly to calumny and violence, and who can falsely witness, or suborn others so to do, against those whom God signally owns and honours.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 16. Here are two difficulties:—(1) According to Ge. 33. 19 and Jos. 24. 32, the sepulchre of Sychem was bought by Jacob, and not by Abraham. (2) Jacob was buried, not in Sychem, but in Machpelah, before Mamre, Ge. 49. 30; 50. 13. To reconcile the first, it is generally admitted by expositors, that 'Abraham' has, by the oversight of a transcriber, been substituted for 'Jacob'; but while nearly all MSS. have 'Abraham,' and none 'Jacob,' the substitution of 'Jacob' seems totally unauthorized. May not both difficulties be solved by filling up the ellipses thus:—'But Jacob went down into Egypt, and died there, he and our fathers; and they were all carried over (our fathers) to Sychem, and buried (he, Jacob) in the tomb which Abraham had purchased, for a sum of money, and (they the fathers) in the tomb that Jacob had purchased from the sons of Emmor, the father of Sychem.' A similar construction, in which the nouns are all placed in the beginning, and the verbs in the end of the sentences, may still be frequently found in legal documents and in Latin epitaphs. And to the Jews, who were perfectly familiar with the history of their fathers, the statement of Stephen would thus be understood. C.

THE VALLEY OF SHECHEM. [ACTS, vii: 16.]—Set in the midst of olive groves, gardens and orchards, and refreshed and made productive by as many as eighty springs, Shechem enjoys advantages of a natural character hardly equaled by any other town in Palestine. It was to this place that Abram came when he first entered Canaan, For we are told in Genesis xii: 6 that he came "unto the place of Shechem." Thus Shechem is the oldest town in Palestine of which we have any authentic history, dating back in the distant past as far as four thousand years. Here Jacob bought land and took up his abode; here Joseph came in search of his brethren on the occasion when they sold him to the Ishmaelites at Dothan; and here the law was given to Israel. There are about 15,000 inhabitants to-day, and it is a prosperous town for the East.

THE ISLAND RHODA (RODA) --WHERE THE CHILD MOSES WAS CONCEALED.
[Acts, vii: 21.] -- "And when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son." -- Acts, vii: 21. We are told that the mother of Moses took an ark of bulrushes and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put her child into it, and laid the ark with the child in the flags by the brink of the Nile. It has been supposed that this place on the Nile was on the Island of Rhoda. Every tourist who goes to Cairo, will have his attention called to this beautiful island in the Nile as the point in the river where Moses was concealed. The boats we see are wheat boats which have come from far into the interior of Egypt, loaded with wheat to sell in Cairo. The island is in the western suburbs of Cairo.

18 Till<sup>a</sup> another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtilly with our kindred, and evil-entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

20 In<sup>v</sup> which time Moses was born, and was exceeding fair,<sup>2</sup> and nourished up in his father's house three months:

21 And<sup>x</sup> when he was east out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.

22 And<sup>y</sup> Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.<sup>3</sup>

23 And<sup>z</sup> when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 For<sup>4</sup> he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but<sup>a</sup> they understood not.

26 And<sup>b</sup> the next day he showed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didst the Egyptian yesterday?

29 Then<sup>c</sup> fled Moses at this saying; and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 And<sup>d</sup> when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sina<sup>5</sup> an<sup>e</sup> angel of the Lord<sup>6</sup> in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then<sup>f</sup> Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet; for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 I<sup>g</sup> have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.

* Stephen's object here is to show that the great principle which lies at the foundation of the gospel is clearly set forth in the Old Testament. It is not a new or strange dogma, therefore. It was enunciated by the prophets; it was divine in its origin. The unity of revelation in spirit and in fundamental dogma is proved in this speech. In the Old Testament the very same grand truths are developed by symbol, type, and prophecy, which in the New Testament are embodied in historic facts and doctrinal teaching.—P.

35 This Moses, whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush.

36 He brought them out, after that he had showed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the wilderness forty years.

37 ¶ This is that Moses which said unto the children of Israel, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear.

38 This<sup>t</sup> is he that was in the church<sup>8</sup> in the wilderness, with the Angel which spake to him in the mount Sina, and with our fathers; who received the lively oracles to give unto us:

39 To<sup>v</sup> whom our fathers would not obey, but thrust him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt, 40 Saying<sup>y</sup> unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

41 And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 Then<sup>z</sup> God turned,<sup>9</sup> and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts, and sacrifices, by the space of forty years in the wilderness?

43 Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made, to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 ¶ Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking<sup>1</sup> unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen.

45 Which<sup>h</sup> also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus<sup>3</sup> into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David;

46 Who found favour before God, and desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 But<sup>l</sup> Solomon built him an house.

48 Howbeit, the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet,<sup>4</sup>

49 Heaven<sup>o</sup> is my throne, and earth is my footstool: what house will ye build me? saith the Lord: or what is the place of my rest?

50 Hath<sup>p</sup> not my hand made all these things?

51 ¶ Ye<sup>a</sup> stiff-necked, and uncircumcised in wonders for, and giver of laws to, his people. He was prefigured by Moses and Joshua, David and Solomon, their distinguished rulers, and by the tabernacle and temple; and is now exalted to the right hand of God as the object of all religious adoration.—Infinitely faithful is God to his gracious promises: all are fulfilled in their season. But very mixed and mysterious is the conduct of his providence. Great perplexity and distress often usher in the most remarkable deliverances. And God's people are in general tried before they are honoured. It is a distinguishing mercy to be, even in our ancestors, early taken into his love, and to be always under his special direction, government, and care. And thrice happy are they who not only have his ordinances established among them, but are themselves made his meet habitation through the Spirit!—But notwithstanding all his awful or delightful providences towards his church, many hypocritical professors heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost:<sup>5</sup> as your fathers did, so do ye.

52 Which<sup>t</sup> of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 Who<sup>v</sup> have received the law by the disposition of angels,<sup>6</sup> and have not kept it.

54 ¶ When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

55 But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God,

56 And said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God.<sup>7</sup>

57 Then<sup>d</sup> they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, 58 And cast him out of the city, and stoned him: and the witnesses<sup>8</sup> laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul.

59 And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.

60 And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep.<sup>i</sup>

CHAPTER VIII.

1 By occasion of the persecution in Jerusalem, the church being planted in Samaria, by Philip the deacon, who preached, did miracles, and baptized many, among the rest Simon the sorcerer, a great seducer of the people: 14 Peter and John come to confirm and enlarge the church: where, by prayer and imposition of hands giving the Holy Ghost, 18 when Simon would have bought the like power of them, 20 Peter sharply reproving his hypocrisy and covetousness, and exhorting him to repentance, together with John preaching the word of the Lord, return to Jerusalem. 26 But the angel sendeth Philip to teach, and baptize the Ethiopian eunuch.

AND Saul<sup>a</sup> was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; and they<sup>1</sup> were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles.<sup>2</sup>

2 And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.

3 As<sup>d</sup> for Saul, he made havoc of the church, are more fond of rites and ceremonies, or of their own idolatrous inventions, than of either his law or his gospel. Obstinate they revolt from him, resist his Spirit, persecute his servants, and reject him and his salvation, to their own everlasting perdition.—Kindly and honourably Jesus stands by his faithful confessors; fills them with the Holy Ghost, and grants them clear and seasonable manifestations of his glory. If enemies cast them out and murder them, he stands ready to embrace, support, comfort, and carry them to heaven. With the greatest confidence of faith may they therefore commit their departing souls to him; and imploring forgiveness to their murderers, with glory and triumph fall asleep in his arms.

e There is a tradition that the apostles were commanded by our Lord to abide twelve years in Jerusalem; but no value can be attached to it. Much simpler reasons may be assigned for their firmness:—(1) Although they had received the gift of the Holy Ghost, it is probable they expected still something more from the promise of the Father' (ch. 1. 4), and therefore did not judge themselves as yet at liberty to depart. (2) The peculiar courage evinced by Peter and John (ch. 4. 19), and by all the apostles (ch. 5. 29, 41), will fully account for their remaining when others fled. See Ne. 6. 11. entering into every house, and, haling men and women, committed them to prison.

4 Therefore they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.<sup>3</sup>

5 Then Philip<sup>4</sup> went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them.

6 And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For<sup>k</sup> unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

8 And<sup>l</sup> there was great joy<sup>5</sup> in that city.

9 ¶ But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one:

10 To<sup>p</sup> whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God.

11 And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

12 But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

13 Then Simon himself believed<sup>6</sup> also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done.

14 ¶ Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter<sup>7</sup> and John;

15 Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost:

16 (For<sup>x</sup> as yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.)

17 Then<sup>y</sup> laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 ¶ And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, tions, and exhibit the address as neither imprecation nor prediction, but a mere warning of the tendency, and, without repentance, of the result of Simon's trust in deceitful riches:—'Let thy money abide with thyself unto loss.' 'You can gain nothing substantial or permanent by it—above all, it cannot purchase the gift of God. Wherefore, repent, and seek for mercy and pardon.'—'If, perhaps,' &c., does not imply any doubt of the fulness of mercy in God, but a question whether Simon was at all sensible of his sin, or likely to look to Jesus for repentance and forgiveness.—C.

Ver. 26. Desert, is not descriptive of the city, whether the old or new, but of the road to it, which, it is probable, the studious Ethiopian had chosen as comparatively unfrequented. C.

Ver. 27. Candace. This had long been the name of the queens of the African Ethiopia, or Abyssinia, as appears from Pliny, Strabo, and Dio. C.

Ver. 35. He preached Jesus, either from this passage alone, by showing how it agreed with no other, but was perfectly fulfilled in Christ; or by collating this with similar passages in the other prophets, and demonstrating how they all united to describe a suffering Messiah, and how the doctrines, miracles, and resurrection of Jesus established his title to that office and dignity. C.

Ver. 38. From the act of 'going down into (or unto) the water,' no argument can be drawn for immersion, to the rejection of sprinkling, in baptism. That question must be settled by a reference to the use of the word baptize—the customs of the Jews from which baptism was derived—apostolic practice, so far as it can be ascertained from Scripture—and the order of the primitive church, so far as it is not inconsistent with, or evidently derived from, and founded upon Scripture. From all these sources of information combined, it will, most probably, appear evident to the impartial inquirer, that both immersion and sprinkling are authorized by Scripture, and the use of the one or of the other a matter committed to circumstances and the feelings of individuals or churches. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It seems hard and inexplicable that eminent ministers should be murdered when they begin to be remarkably useful. But the wisdom of God makes the blood of martyrs the seed of the church, and overrules the persecution of his servants for the spread of his gospel. And it is wonderful to see sometimes the most noted ministers protected amidst the fury of outrageous persecution; and that, while hell and earth rage against the gospel, Jesus Christ shall thereby convert multitudes to himself. If we believe his truth, we

PILLARS IN SAMARIA—BUILT BY HEROD. [Acts, viii : 5.]—We read in the I. Kings, xvi : 23, 24, that the hill known as Samaria was purchased by King Omri from Shemer. And in this way it doubtless came by its name. Ahab, the son of Omri, lived here with his wife Jezebel, daughter of the King of Sidon. Here Ahab erected a temple on the summit of the hill of Samaria to the Phoenician god Baal.—Kings xvi : 31, 32. This temple was destroyed, we learn from II. Kings, x : 17, 28, by Jehu. Elisha the prophet lived here a part of his life, and many of his wonderful actions are associated with this place. The pillars we see in the picture were built, it is supposed, by Herod, for he built a temple here in honor of Augustus, the Emperor of Rome. The limestone columns stand now in the midst of the wheat fields.

19 Saying, "Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

20 But Peter said unto him, "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

21 Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.<sup>8</sup>

22 Repent therefore of this thy wickedness; and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee:

23 For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness,<sup>9</sup> and in the bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, "Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

25 And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

26 ¶ And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza,<sup>1</sup> which is desert.<sup>2</sup>

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, 28 Was returning; and, sitting in his chariot, read Esaias the prophet.

29 Then the Spirit<sup>3</sup> said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, "Understandest thou what thou readest?

31 And he said, "How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, "He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearers, so opened he not his mouth:

33 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth.

e We are not to regard Simon as a thorough hypocrite. He saw Philip's miracles. He was a thoughtful man, and he concluded that Philip must be in league with some supernatural power. He believed that baptism must be the initiatory rite of this new and powerful sect; consequently he confessed his faith in Jesus, and was baptized. He found, however, that baptism alone did not impart the miraculous powers which he sought; he supposed there was a deeper mystery which the apostles kept secret, and he offered to purchase it. He thus plainly mistook the whole character of the gospel.—P.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Saul, going towards Damascus, 4 is stricken down to the earth, 10 is called to the apostleship, 18 and is baptized by Ananias. 20 He preacheth Christ boldly. 23 The Jews lay wait to kill him: 29 so do the Grecians, but he escapeth both. 31 The church having rest, Peter healeth Eneas of the palsy, 36 and restoreth Tabitha to life.

AND Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high-priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that, if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?<sup>2</sup>

5 And he said, "Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

ought speedily and solemnly to devote ourselves to him and his service. But, alas! through ambition, covetousness, or other vicious inclinations, many profane the seals of his covenant, and publicly pretend to be his when they are not; and from mercenary views, many are too readily admitted as members or officers in the church. Dreadful will it be if a Saviour perceive them at last in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity! in an unconverted state! Yet it is to be feared that many ask, and rely on the prayers of others, who never heartily pray for themselves.—But no awful discovery of hypocrites must discourage ministers from going on with their work. While wrath lights on the heads of dissemblers, the earnest shall be instructed and strengthened in their most holy faith; and by following the means of grace which they have, they may hope to meet with a blessing, or even to receive means more eminent. If we be humble searchers of God's Word, and often call ourselves to an account whether we understand it, he will send us an interpreter. And much of Jesus Christ may be seen in the Scriptures, if our mind be enlightened by his Spirit. Yea, nothing so affects the conscience as the gospel record concerning him.—What strange methods God sometimes takes to send the gospel to nations answerably to his own promises! Short-lived is the delightful fellowship of Christians on earth. But if Jesus and his Spirit go with each, all may go on their way rejoicing.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 29. The Grecians. Paul, upon two accounts, made choice of 'the Grecians' as the special objects of his missionary efforts:—(1) Because they had been his unhappy assistants in the martyrdom of Stephen. (2) Because he was intimately acquainted with Grecian literature, and therefore better fitted to argue with them than any other of the apostles. For while God bestowed supernatural, he always made use of the natural and educational endowments of his servants. C.

Ver. 31. Rest. Rather, 'peace.' This lull in the storm of persecution, so far as natural causes can be assigned, is accounted for by referring it to the time when Caligula attempted to place his statue in the temple at Jerusalem—an event which threw the Jews into such consternation that they ceased to think of the Christians, or perhaps were willing to borrow countenance and aid from them in opposing that image-worship that was equally hateful to both. C.

Ver. 39. Showing the coats and garments, &c. Either the stock of ('outer and inner') garments she had provided for the future comfort of the poor, or the raiment of her providing which they had actually on. It matters nothing which! Blessed be the Lord! Dorcas hath still many daughters who continue to 'make the widows' hearts to sing for joy.'—Note, A religion that does not call forth, or permit, or encourage, the active benevolence of woman, cannot be the religion of the apostles! While ostentation of charity must be avoided, benevolence of heart must be cultivated. C.

GATEWAY TO DAMASCUS. [ACTS, ix : 3.]—"As he journeyed he came near Damascus ; and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven."—Acts, ix : 3. In the picture we have a gateway in the wall of Damascus looking toward Jerusalem. Whether St. Paul entered this city through the same place or not we have no means of knowing. It is true, however, that he entered from the same side. The roadway just before passing through the gate leads over a bridge, under which flows through a canal one of the many streams of the Abana River. It is strange to think that notwithstanding St. Paul entered Damascus nearly two thousand years ago that the city then was two thousand years old. This city has witnessed well nigh all the history the human race has made. The location seems to have been intended for a city.

THE STREET CALLED STRAIGHT—DAMASCUS—INTO WHICH THE LORD COMMANDED ANANIAS TO GO AND INQUIRE FOR SAUL. [ACTS, ix:11.]—The Lord appeared unto Ananias, a good man of Damascus, in a vision and commanded him to go into a street called Straight, that he might inquire at the house of Judas for Saul of Tarsus. This was just after Saul had been stricken down on the road near Damascus, by the great light from heaven, and by the sense of the enormous sin he was committing in persecuting the disciples of the crucified Christ. Just as it probably was two thousand years ago so to-day the street called Straight is the leading one in Damascus. It is one of the streets in the city through which a carriage can pass. It is also the leading street for trade. Along this street St. Paul walked many times.

6 And he, trembling and astonished, said, Lord,<sup>i</sup> what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, <sup>j</sup>hearing a voice, but seeing no man.<sup>3</sup>

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened,<sup>k</sup> he saw no man: <sup>l</sup>but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

10 ¶ And<sup>n</sup> there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight,<sup>5</sup> and inquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul,<sup>o</sup> of Tarsus: for, <sup>p</sup>behold, he prayeth,<sup>6</sup>

12 And<sup>q</sup> hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, <sup>r</sup>how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that <sup>s</sup>call on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for <sup>t</sup>he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel:

16 For<sup>u</sup> I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake.

17 And<sup>v</sup> Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and <sup>w</sup>be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And<sup>y</sup> immediately<sup>7</sup> there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

19 And<sup>z</sup> when he had received meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

20 And<sup>a</sup> straightway<sup>8</sup> he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.

21 But all that heard him were amazed, and said, <sup>b</sup>Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, <sup>c</sup>proving that this is very Christ.<sup>9</sup>

23 ¶ And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews <sup>d</sup>took counsel to kill him.<sup>1</sup>

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall, in a basket.

26 ¶ And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, <sup>f</sup>he assayed to join himself to the disciples: but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple.

27 But <sup>g</sup>Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how he had preached <sup>h</sup>boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

REFLECTIONS.—Often it happens that Christians may have gone to the most fearful lengths before their conversion, yet through grace they are at length led to Christ. Yea, great is their madness, their malice, against the Redeemer; and all at their own infinite hazard. How irrefragable are the proofs of our Saviour's exaltation to his Father's right hand! He has appeared and spoken from heaven with divine majesty and glory; and through an authoritative use of his name, by faith, has healed the sick and raised the dead—even the dead in trespasses and sins. Victorious and divine also is his grace. It leads the most daring sinner into trembling and astonishment; stops his career of wickedness, and makes him all concern, all resignation, all obedience to his will; gives him a heart to pray, and turns the furious persecutor into a zealous preacher of the faith which he had once destroyed. No wonder that both saints and sinners are amazed at the marvellous change. Through great distress and darkness the good are sometimes brought into their blessed state, to their spiritual comforts, and remarkable usefulness in the church. But the miraculous conversion is gradually emboldened and strengthened, to the silencing and confounding of every opposer. With great caution ought church-members to be admitted; but never should those whom Christ has marked with his grace and truth be rejected.—It is impossible for Christ ever to want instruments for carrying on his work. If he find them not here he does there, and can easily take away all their objections and discouraging difficulties. Nor can the most furious malice, nor the most crafty plots, keep them from going forward with their work. It is his desire to turn threatenings against and slaughter of his people into rest and peace, and so fill them with the comforts of the Holy Ghost, that they may be multiplied and edified. Pleasantly, then, do ministers visit churches, and impart benefits in the name of their Master. Thrice happy are they when their faithful ministrations issue in the conversion of multitudes. And it is honourable for saints and their profession when their piety and charity render their life greatly desired, and their death as much lamented.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS.—It is an honour for persons of all ranks to be devout and liberal, and to worship God in their families as well as in secret. And how does this Roman soldier shame many pro-

[ACTS, ix : 36.]—"Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas ; this woman was full of good works and almsdeeds, which she did."—Acts, ix : 36. The site of the house of Tabitha in Joppa is always pointed out to travelers as one of the places of interest. Joppa almost ranks with Damascus in being one of the oldest cities in the world. Pliny says it existed before the Flood, and Josephus says it was founded by the Phoenicians. Strabo says that it was here that Andromeda was exposed to the sea monster, and in Pliny's time the chains were said to be pointed out in the rocks to which she was bound. Joppa is interesting to Christians now, however, because it was the home of Tabitha, whose charity has blessed the world.

Christ maketh thee whole; arise, and make thy bed. <sup>a</sup>And he arose immediately.

35 And<sup>b</sup> all that dwelt at Lydda and Saron<sup>c</sup> saw him, and turned to the Lord.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom, when they had washed, they laid her in an <sup>j</sup>upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa,<sup>9</sup> and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not delay<sup>1</sup> to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose, and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him <sup>k</sup>weeping, and showing <sup>l</sup>the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them.

40 But<sup>j</sup> Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed; and turning him to the body, said, Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, he presented her alive.

42 And<sup>k</sup> it was known throughout all Joppa; and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa,<sup>2</sup> with one Simon a tanner.

CHAPTER X.

1 Cornelius, a devout man, 5 being commanded by an angel, sendeth for Peter: 11 who by a vision, 15, 20 is taught not to despise the Gentiles. 34 As he preacheth Christ to Cornelius and his company, 44 the Holy Ghost falleth on them, 48 and they are baptized.

THERE was<sup>a</sup> a certain man in Cesarea,<sup>1</sup> called Cornelius, a centurion<sup>2</sup> of the band called the Italian band,

2 <sup>A</sup><sup>b</sup> devout<sup>3</sup> man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway.<sup>4</sup>

3 He<sup>c</sup> saw in a vision evidently, about the ninth hour of the day,<sup>5</sup> an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, <sup>d</sup>he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come<sup>e</sup> up for a memorial<sup>6</sup> before God.

5 And<sup>9</sup> now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter:

6 He<sup>h</sup> lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, fessed Christians who, on the most trifling pretences, neglect the worship of their Maker, who scarcely know what it is to observe family devotion, and who take no more pains in the religious education of children and servants than if they were beasts! God takes great delight to increase their knowledge and comfort who sincerely practise what they know, and earnestly ask his further direction. And though our best actions cannot render our persons acceptable to God, yet, if they are agreeable to his perfections and law, he graciously rewards them.—It is by men, not by angels, that we must expect to be taught.—With tender care God removes the conscientious scruples of his servants, and prepares them beforehand for their duty. And never are we more ready to receive his direction than when we are engaged in solemn prayer. Cheerfully therefore ought all, especially ministers, to go whithersoever he, in his providence, calls them, hoping for success, whatever impediments lie in their way. Gospel preachers ought to be gladly received and kindly entertained; and as many friends as we can influence be encouraged to share their instructions. With the deepest whose house is by the sea-side: he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, <sup>i</sup>he sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶ On the morrow, as they went on their journey,<sup>7</sup> and drew nigh unto the city, <sup>j</sup>Peter went up upon the house-top<sup>8</sup> to pray, about the sixth hour:<sup>9</sup>

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready, he fell into <sup>k</sup>a trance,

11 And saw <sup>l</sup>heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been <sup>m</sup>a great sheet, knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth;

12 Whercin were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, <sup>n</sup>Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten any thing that is common<sup>1</sup> or unclean.

16 This was done <sup>p</sup>thrice: <sup>q</sup>and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 ¶ Now while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men <sup>r</sup>which were sent from Cornelius had made inquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate, 18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 While Peter thought on <sup>s</sup>the vision, <sup>t</sup>the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 Arise<sup>v</sup> therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing: for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius, and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22 And they said, <sup>u</sup>Cornelius the centurion, a just man,<sup>3</sup> and one that feareth God, and of <sup>v</sup>good report among all the nation of the Jews,

HOUSE OF ST. PETER, JAFFA—WHERE PETER PRAYED, FELL INTO A TRANCE AND SAW HEAVEN OPEN. [ACTS, x : 32.]—This is called the house of St. Peter here, but it is really the house of Simon, the tanner. "Send therefore to Joppa and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter ; he is lodged in the house of one Simon, a tanner, by the seaside ; who when he cometh shall speak unto thee."—Acts, x : 32. This house of Simon, the tanner, is still pointed out. This, with the house of Tabitha, make up the two most interesting objects of historic interest in Joppa. Here it was that Peter learned the great lesson that God was no respecter of persons, but thought as much of a Gentile as of a Jew. He here learned that in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him was warned from God by an holy angel, to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And<sup>z</sup> on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And the morrow after they entered into Cesarea. And Cornelius waited for them, <sup>a</sup>and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 ¶ And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and <sup>b</sup>worshipped him.<sup>4</sup>

26 But<sup>c</sup> Peter took him up, saying, Stand up; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found <sup>d</sup>many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know <sup>e</sup>how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath showed me <sup>f</sup>that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I <sup>g</sup>unto you without gainsaying, <sup>h</sup>as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting<sup>i</sup> until this hour: and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house; and, behold, a man stood before me in <sup>j</sup>bright clothing,

31 And<sup>k</sup> said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God.<sup>5</sup>

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter: he is lodged in the house of <sup>l</sup>one Simon a tanner, by the seaside; who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee: and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, <sup>m</sup>to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 ¶ Then Peter <sup>n</sup>opened his mouth, and said, <sup>o</sup>Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But<sup>p</sup> in every nation he that feareth him,<sup>6</sup> and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

36 The<sup>q</sup> word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he <sup>r</sup>is Lord of all:)

37 That word, I say, ye know, <sup>s</sup>which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;

38 How <sup>t</sup>God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went<sup>u</sup> about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil: for <sup>v</sup>God was with him.

For had it been a false religion, a 'cunningly-devised fable,' its first propagators would 'have compassed sea and land to make a proselyte,' and like the missionaries of Rome in Paraguay and China, would have yielded every accommodation to the opinions, prejudices, and practices of their pupils, instead of which we find them not only refusing converts upon any but the most stringent terms, and contending with their very leaders, when they appeared to relax their exclusive discipline.—C.

39 And <sup>w</sup>we are witnesses of all things which he did, both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom <sup>x</sup>they slew and hanged on a tree:

40 Him God raised up the third day, and showed him openly;

41 Not<sup>z</sup> to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, <sup>y</sup>even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And<sup>a</sup> he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he <sup>b</sup>which was ordained of God <sup>c</sup>to be the judge of quick and dead.

43 To<sup>c</sup> him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.<sup>7</sup>

44 ¶ While<sup>d</sup> Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

45 And they of the circumcision <sup>e</sup>which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost:

46 For they heard them <sup>f</sup>speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can<sup>h</sup> any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And he commanded them <sup>i</sup>to be baptized in the name of the Lord. <sup>j</sup>Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Peter, being accused for going in to the Gentiles, 5 maketh his defence, 18 which is accepted. 19 The gospel being spread into Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, Barnabas is sent to confirm them. 26 The disciples there are first called Christians. 27 They send relief to the brethren in Judea in time of famine.

AND the apostles and brethren<sup>1</sup> that were in Judea heard that <sup>a</sup>the Gentiles had also received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, <sup>b</sup>they that were of the circumcision<sup>2</sup> contended with him,

3 Saying, <sup>c</sup>Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

4 But <sup>d</sup>Peter rehearsed <sup>e</sup>the matter from the beginning, and expounded <sup>f</sup>it by order unto them, saying,

5 I<sup>e</sup> was in the city of Joppa, praying: and <sup>g</sup>in a trance I saw a vision, <sup>h</sup>a certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came even to me:

6 Upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw <sup>i</sup>four-footed beasts faith in him. Cordially they praise him for his kindness, and desire to be more acquainted with, established in, and edified by his truths.—But O with what astonishing condescension and marvellous operation of providence and grace has God extended his gospel to us unclean and brutish sinners of the Gentiles, and has made of both Jews and Gentiles one gospel church, so making peace!

of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, <sup>i</sup>Arise, Peter; slay, and eat.

8 But I said, <sup>k</sup>Not so, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.<sup>3</sup>

9 But the voice answered me again from heaven, <sup>l</sup>What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

10 And this was done <sup>n</sup>three times: and <sup>o</sup>all were drawn up again into heaven.

11 And, behold, immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Cesarea unto me.

12 And <sup>p</sup>the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover, these six<sup>4</sup> brethren accompanied me; and we entered into the man's house:

13 And<sup>a</sup> he showed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

14 Who shall tell thee <sup>r</sup>words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And as I began to speak, <sup>s</sup>the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning.

16 Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, <sup>t</sup>John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 Forasmuch then as <sup>u</sup>God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, what was I, <sup>v</sup>that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, <sup>w</sup>they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, <sup>x</sup>Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and <sup>c</sup>Cyrene, which, when they were come to

The verbal difference, however, may be easily accounted for, on the principle of verbal inspiration, when it is recollected that the sheet was let down three times, and that one reply of Peter may be accurately given upon one of these occasions—another reply different from the former, yet as accurate, upon a second. Antioch, spake unto the <sup>8</sup>Grecians,<sup>9</sup> <sup>a</sup>preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And<sup>e</sup> the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.

22 ¶ Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and <sup>g</sup>they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch.

24 For he was a <sup>n</sup>good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then<sup>o</sup> departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul:<sup>2</sup>

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year <sup>p</sup>they assembled themselves <sup>q</sup>with the church, and <sup>r</sup>taught much people. And the disciples were called <sup>s</sup>Christians first in Antioch.

27 ¶ And in these days came <sup>t</sup>prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them, named <sup>u</sup>Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar.

29 Then the disciples, every man <sup>v</sup>according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea:

30 Which also they did, and sent it to the <sup>w</sup>elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

CHAPTER XII.

1 King Herod persecuteth the Christians, killeth James, and imprisoneth Peter; whom an angel delivereth upon the prayers of the church. 20 In his pride, taking to himself the honour due to God, Herod is stricken by an angel, and dieth miserably. 24 After his death, the word of God prospereth.

3 And <sup>c</sup>because he saw it pleased the Jews,

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 26. The disciples were called Christians, &c. Hitherto, by the Gentiles, they had been called 'Jews'; and by the Jews, 'Nazarenes,' 'Galileans,' &c. Whether the name was taken by the disciples themselves, or given by others, does not appear. That it was not given in derision seems probable from the use of it by King Agrippa, Ac. 26. 28; and that the disciples were not ashamed of it is evident from its use by Peter, 1 Pe. 4. 16. C.

Ver. 28. The word translated 'world' is one of very indefinite application—sometimes describing the lands inhabited by the Greeks, sometimes those jointly inhabited by Greeks and Romans, sometimes confined to Palestine and its immediate dependencies, as Lu. 2. 1, 3; 21. 26.—Note, Four famines are recorded in the reign of Claudius, but none of them general. Indeed, among the merciful dispensations of Providence, there is one very remarkable, that a famine is seldom, if ever, universal; but while one country is visited with drought or deluged with rain, other, and even neighbouring countries, are blessed with fair weather and fruitful harvests, by which the wants of other lands may be supplied. This seems to have been the case in the present instance, as the people of Antioch were able to afford a liberal collection to relieve their brethren during the famine at Jerusalem. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Delightful are the tidings of sinners receiving and being converted by the gospel of Christ. The salvation of souls, the honour of Christ, and the glory of God are hereby highly promoted. And it is strange that even saints should be sometimes prejudiced, when their enemies, or persons of detested characters, are made partakers of the same spiritual blessings as themselves—that rash censure should so often drop from gracious lips, and godlike charity should be reproached as looseness in religion! But ministers must bear with the weak; and though no unreasonable prejudice should ever hinder the execution of their commission, they should be always ready to clear their conduct to scrupulous minds. And every Christian also ought gladly to hear and receive anything that may tend to remove his prejudices.—What! are we to withstand God, who distributes his favour as is best, and overrules the fury of persecutors for the spread of the gospel and conversion of sinners? Thrice happy are they who show willingly that repentance which manifests spiritual life received, and prepares them for the eternal life promised hereafter.—When his Spirit and power attend the preached gospel, multitudes believe and are turned to the Lord, and cleave to him with fixed purpose of heart. And with alacrity and diligence do ministers then attend their increasing work. Delightful is the name, and great the honour, to possess the privileges and tempers of CHRISTIANS; and especially to act up to the profession and obligations included in the character! Happy had it been for the church if no other character had ever marked the followers of Christ. With harmony in the truth, with holiness and order, ought such to hold fellowship one with another; and with great cheerfulness should they supply one another's wants, none of which can take place without the approval of God. Yea, he sometimes wisely permits calamities to his people, for the trial, exercise, and improvement of their own or others' faith, love, and self-denied obedience, and for the removal of groundless differences among them.

CHAPTER XII. REFLECTIONS.—What'er should he proceeded further to take <sup>a</sup>Peter also. (<sup>e</sup>Then were the days of unleavened bread.)

4 And <sup>9</sup>when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions<sup>5</sup> of soldiers, to keep him; intending after Easter<sup>6</sup> to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer<sup>7</sup> was made <sup>b</sup>without ceasing<sup>8</sup> of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have <sup>i</sup>brought him forth, the <sup>j</sup>same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains;<sup>9</sup> and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, <sup>k</sup>the angel of the Lord<sup>1</sup> came upon him, and a light shined in the prison; and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And<sup>l</sup> his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; <sup>m</sup>and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but <sup>n</sup>thought he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city, <sup>o</sup>which opened to them of his own accord; and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, <sup>p</sup>that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath <sup>q</sup>delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and <sup>r</sup>from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken,<sup>2</sup> named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, <sup>v</sup>Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, It is <sup>w</sup>his angel.<sup>3</sup>

16 But Peter continued knocking:<sup>4</sup> and when

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Paul and Barnabas are chosen to go to the Gentiles. 7 Of Sergius Paulus, and Elymas the sorcerer. 14 Paul preacheth at Antioch, that Jesus is Christ. 42 The Gentiles believe: 45 but the Jews gain-say and blaspheme: 46 whereupon they turn to the Gentiles. 48 As many as were ordained to life believe.

NOW there<sup>a</sup> were in the church that was at Antioch, certain <sup>b</sup>prophets and teachers; as <sup>c</sup>Barnabas, and Simeon that was called <sup>d</sup>Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, <sup>e</sup>which had been brought up with <sup>f</sup>Herod<sup>3</sup> the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 As they <sup>g</sup>ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said,<sup>4</sup> Separate<sup>g</sup> me Barnabas

we here most admire the wickedness of men in promoting, or the wisdom of God in overruling, the persecutions of his church? Alas! what selfishness, pride, rashness, and cruelty, to murder one of the best, the most useful of men! And infernal the malice to take pleasure in it! But men-pleasers will lead themselves at last into the greatest guilt; and success in one sin will embolden them to commit another. The united and fervent prayers of the saints will prove in the end too hard for all that oppose them. If God bestow his Spirit of grace and supplication, to make intercession with groanings which cannot be uttered, deliverance is at hand. And in their extremity, though often not till then, he will rise up for their help. And if ordinary means cannot avail for their preservation, he will work miracles for them. Nay, even by ordinary means, he can hide them from their most inveterate foes. But proud persecutors quickly meet with the living God. The prudent submission of neighbours, and the servile flattery of friends, but lift them up, that their destruction may be the more terrible. God seasonably cuts them off in the midst of their pomp and grandeur, and makes their fall, as well as their fury, subservient to the propagation of the gospel.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 5. Salamis. A city on the east side of Cyprus—not to be confounded with the island of Salamis, so famous in Grecian history as the scene of a memorable sea-fight and victory. This city attained to great eminence, but its very site has been swept away by the sea. C.

Ver. 9. Saul appears to have been his Hebrew, and Paul his Roman name; which, from this time onwards, the evangelist uses, as he had now become a preacher of the gospel to the Gentiles. C.

Ver. 29. And laid him in a sepulchre. This statement seems to disagree with Jn. 19. 38, &c., in which, as well as in the other evangelists, his sepulture is ascribed to Joseph of Arimathea and his other disciples. The difference may easily be removed by the most simple and natural supposition, that some of the Pharisees who took so deep and malignant an interest in securing and watching the tomb, Mat. 27. 62-66, had also taken an insulting and triumphant part in the funeral procession and act of sepulture. C.

Ver. 33. This day have I begotten thee—that is, from the dead, Ro. 1. 4, even as every Christian is said to be 'begotten' on the day of his conversion, of his spiritual resurrection, 1 Co. 4. 15; Phil. 1. 10; 1 Pe. 1. 3; 1 Jn. 5. 1, 18. But the address does not ascribe his Sonship to his resurrection, for he had already been acknowledged as 'Son' by a voice from heaven—by his disciples on earth; and he himself had openly asserted the title before the and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

3 And <sup>h</sup>when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.<sup>5</sup>

4 So they, <sup>i</sup>being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia;<sup>6</sup> and from thence they sailed to <sup>j</sup>Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God <sup>k</sup>in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also <sup>l</sup>John<sup>7</sup> to their minister.

6 ¶ And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos,<sup>8</sup> they found a certain <sup>n</sup>sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jesus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas the soreerer (for so is his name by interpretation) <sup>o</sup>withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,<sup>9</sup>) filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him,

10 And said, <sup>p</sup>O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness,<sup>1</sup> wilt thou not cease <sup>q</sup>to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, <sup>r</sup>the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the deputy,<sup>2</sup> when<sup>s</sup> he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 ¶ Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia;<sup>3</sup> and <sup>4</sup>John departing from them returned to Jerusalem.

14 But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch<sup>4</sup> in Pisidia,<sup>5</sup> and <sup>6</sup>went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and sat down.

15 And after <sup>7</sup>the reading of the law and the prophets, the <sup>8</sup>rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, <sup>9</sup>Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and <sup>10</sup>beekoning with his hand, said, <sup>11</sup>Men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience.

17 The<sup>b</sup> God of this people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, <sup>12</sup>and with an high arm brought he them out of it.

18 And<sup>d</sup> about the time of forty years <sup>13</sup>suffered<sup>7</sup> he their manners in the wilderness.

19 And <sup>14</sup>when he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Chanaan, he divided their land to them by lot.

20 And after that, <sup>15</sup>he gave unto them judges, about the space of four hundred and fifty <sup>16</sup>years, until Samuel the prophet.

21 And<sup>h</sup> afterward they desired a king: and God gave unto them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.<sup>9</sup>

22 And<sup>i</sup> when he had removed him, he raised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will.<sup>1</sup>

23 Of<sup>j</sup> this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus:

Jews, Mat. 3.17; 16.16; Jn. 10.36. Besides which, the eternity of the Father implies the eternity of the Son, he being described as 'that eternal Life that was with the Father,' 1 Jn. 1.2, and to whom (as Son) the Father saith, 'Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever,' Ps. 45. 6, 7, and, 'Thou, Lord (JEHOVAH), in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands,' Ps. 102. 12, 25; He. 1. 8, 10. C.

Ver. 35. Of 'the Holy One of God' (Jesus Christ) it is expressly declared that he 'should not see corruption.' Wherefore, it is impossible the doctrine of transubstantiation can be true: for while that doctrine asserts that a piece of bread becomes, by what is called 'consecration,' the very body, and blood, and soul, and divinity of Christ, it admits that that same transubstantiated bread (body, &c.) may, and often does, see corruption. Wherefore, because it sees corruption, it cannot be the body of Christ. See ver. 37. C.

Ver. 39. Justification by the law of Moses is simply this: 'He that doeth these things shall live by them,' Ro. 10. 5. By that law, therefore, no sinner could ever be justified; that is, pardoned, and accepted as righteous before God. But 'being justified by faith' in Jesus Christ, we have peace with God, 'having redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of our sins,' being made, through grace, 'accepted in the Beloved,' Ro. 5. 1; Ep. 1. 6, 7. C.

Ver. 48. The word translated 'ordained,' or its immediate cognates, occurs also Mat. 28. 16; Lu. 7. 8; Ac. 15. 2; 22. 10; 28. 23; Ro. 13. 1; 1 Co. 15. 16. Taking the examples in order, six unquestionably signify 'appointed,' or 'constituted,' by authority or decision of another, a superior. The last alone appears to signify 'self-devoted,' but that must still be under the power of the Spirit of God, 1 Co. 12. 6, 11; Phil. 2. 13, so that no other conclusion can be drawn but that 'believing' and 'eternal life' are alike the gifts of God, one combined with the act of man, the other absolutely. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Important is the work of preaching the gospel, and absolutely necessary for it is the direction of God's Spirit and providence. He qualifies his servants for it, calls them to it, and directs and succeeds them in it; and with pleasure and courage they may set about it if satisfied of their divine call. But Satan and his instruments will certainly oppose them in it with great warmth and earnestness, especially if great sinners and persons in power appear to be converted by it. Great will be their subtlety and mischievous ardour in opposing the gospel—the right ways of the Lord. All the arts of sorcery and infidelity; all the fury that blind zeal, temporal interests, and envy can inspire; all the powers of this world, are stirred up to oppress it. But no weapon formed against Zion shall prosper; for under the influence of the Holy Ghost the word shall the more spread and be glorified. Very important are the tidings it brings us concerning the promised Saviour; for whose being born, crucified, and raised from the dead, according to the ancient oracles of God, all former dispensations towards Israel but paved the way.—By infinitely wise and seasonable advances has the knowledge of Jesus Christ, and a full redemption through him, spread and prevailed in the world. Thrice happy are they who receive him as the light of life and propitiation for sins. From eternity he was the slain lamb of God. In time they are justified through their living faith, even from crimes for which the ceremonial laws allowed no expiation. They are endowed with the presence, supplies, and consolations of the Holy Ghost, and enabled to continue in the faith, profession, and obedience of the gospel, notwithstanding the most cruel persecution.—If among these converts some be remarkable for sense, others for stupid idolatries, all marks the wisdom and power of gospel grace.—But, alas! great is their sin and danger who, notwithstanding their visible relation to him, reject the Redeemer, and set themselves to reproach his servants, his truths, and ways. They thrust the gospel and eternal life from themselves, and provoke God to cast them off with sorrow into everlasting ruin. Take heed, my soul, to hear only such preachers as the Holy Ghost has qualified and regularly placed in their office. Let no station make me think myself above the gospel; and let no sinfulness make me reckon myself below it. Let reading and hearing of God's Word be my constant delight. And let me carefully observe all providences in connection with Christ. Regarding the word of salvation he hath sent, and receiving the sure mercies he hath given, let me serve my generation according to the will of God, and then fall asleep in the Lord.—If I am justified, let me manifest it by my good works. If I have grace implanted in my heart, let me continue therein. If I am benefited by ministers, let me love and cleave to them. And if for Jesus' sake I am tossed to and fro, let his comforts delight my soul.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—God plainly testifies his own being, life, patience, goodness, power, and wisdom, to the heathen world in the works of creation and providence. And even while, by their perverse manners, they abuse the light of their consciences, he graciously gives them the necessities and delights of outward life. Surely even these his common favours should attract their love to him. And, alas! great is their sin and misery who, being left to their own lusts and imaginations, put vanity and devils as 24 When<sup>k</sup> John had first preached, before his coming, the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel.

25 And as John fulfilled his course, he said, Whom<sup>n</sup> think ye that I am? I am not he. But, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men<sup>o</sup> and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent.

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because<sup>r</sup> they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which<sup>a</sup> are read every sabbath-day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 And<sup>r</sup> though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.

30 But<sup>t</sup> God raised him from the dead:

31 And<sup>u</sup> he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his<sup>v</sup> witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the<sup>w</sup> promise which was made unto the fathers, 33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure merities<sup>2</sup> of David.<sup>3</sup>

35 Wherefore he saith also in another psalm, Thou<sup>a</sup> shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

36 For David, after he had served<sup>b</sup> his own generation by the will of God,<sup>4</sup> fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But he, whom<sup>c</sup> God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 Be<sup>d</sup> it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

39 And by him<sup>e</sup> all that believe are justified from all things, from which<sup>f</sup> ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware, therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the<sup>h</sup> prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish:<sup>5</sup> for I work a work<sup>6</sup> in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 ¶ And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles<sup>7</sup> besought that these words might be preached to them the next sabbath.<sup>8</sup>

43 Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

44 ¶ And the next sabbath-day<sup>i</sup> came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, <sup>k</sup>they were filled with envy,<sup>9</sup> and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should<sup>n</sup> first have been spoken to you: but seeing<sup>o</sup> ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, <sup>p</sup>we turn to the Gentiles.<sup>1</sup>

47 For<sup>q</sup> so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.<sup>2</sup>

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they<sup>r</sup> were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: <sup>s</sup>and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And<sup>t</sup> the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 ¶ But the Jews<sup>u</sup> stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

52 And the<sup>w</sup> disciples were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Paul and Barnabas are persecuted from Iconium. 8 At Lystra Paul health a cripple, whereupon they are reputed as gods. 19 Paul is stoned. 21 They pass through divers churches, confirming the disciples in faith and patience. 26 Returning to Antioch, they report what God had done with them.

AND it came to pass in Iconium,<sup>1</sup> that they went both together<sup>a</sup> into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that<sup>b</sup> a great multitude, both of the Jews and also of the Greeks,<sup>2</sup> believed.

2 But<sup>c</sup> the unbelieving Jews stirred up the objects of worship in his place. Infinite is the mercy that now the door of faith is opened to the Gentiles; the gospel of salvation through Jesus Christ is preached to them. But, alas! while some believe it, others rage against and oppose it. Yea, while heathens believe and are healed, Jews oppose and are hardened, to their eternal ruin. And great is the unanimity of wicked men against Jesus Christ and his faithful ministers.—Inconstant and worthless is the applause of the multitude. To-day they admire preachers as gods; to-morrow they persecute and murder them as miscreants. But God's testimony to his word, in external and internal operations, is sufficient to overcome all opposition. With wisdom, care, and love, he forms his people into a church; and by their own choice provides them pastors and teachers after his own heart, for their further edification and establishment, and in compassion to the snares and troubles through which they must pass into the heavenly state. In the most solemn manner, by prayer and fasting, ought ministers to be set apart to their work. And with pleasure and hope, labour and diligence, should they spend and be spent in the conversion of sinners and edification of saints. And though they ought to avoid suffering as

THE TEMPLE OF JUPITER OLYMPUS, ATHENS. [Acrs, xiv: 12.]—It is almost impossible for us to understand in our time what great obstacles the early disciples had to overcome in preaching the gospel. We can get some idea of the tremendous hold the heathen gods had upon the popular imagination of the time, by considering the magnitude and splendor of the temples erected in their honor, and for their worship. We have in the above picture three columns, one fallen and two standing, which formed a part of the temple of Jupiter Olympus. There were more than a hundred of these splendid Corinthian columns in the original temple. The preaching of St. Paul and of others, however, displaced the heathen gods, and now their temples everywhere are in ruins, while christianity is taking the world.

Gentiles,<sup>3</sup> and made their minds evil-affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord,<sup>4</sup> which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But<sup>5</sup> the multitude of the city was divided: and part held with the Jews, and part with the apostles.

5 And<sup>6</sup> when there was an assault made, both of the Gentiles and also of the Jews, with their rulers, to use them despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They<sup>7</sup> were ware of it, and fled unto Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about:<sup>4</sup>

7 And<sup>8</sup> there they preached the gospel.

8 ¶ And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, <sup>9</sup>being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak: who steadfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had <sup>10</sup>faith<sup>5</sup> to be healed, 10 Said with a loud voice, "Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city,<sup>6</sup> brought oxen and garlands<sup>7</sup> unto the gates, and <sup>14</sup>would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, they <sup>15</sup>rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out, 20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

22 Confirming<sup>4</sup> the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them <sup>5</sup>to continue in the faith, and that we must <sup>6</sup>through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

23 And when they<sup>4</sup> had ordained<sup>5</sup> them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

24 And after they had passed throughout <sup>7</sup>Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25 And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia:<sup>6</sup>

26 And thence sailed to Antioch,<sup>7</sup> from whence they had been <sup>8</sup>recommended to the grace of God for the work which they <sup>9</sup>fulfilled.

27 And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they <sup>10</sup>rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had <sup>11</sup>opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

28 And there they abode long time with the disciples.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Great dissension ariseth touching circumcision. 6 The apostles consult about it, 22 and send their determination by letters to the churches. 36 Paul and Barnabas, thinking to visit the brethren together, fall at strife, and depart asunder.

AND certain<sup>a</sup> men which came down from Judea taught the <sup>b</sup>brethren, and said, <sup>c</sup>Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.

2 When<sup>d</sup> therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they<sup>1</sup> determined that Paul and Barnabas, and far as can be done without sin, yet none must ever deter them from the faithful execution of their office. Till their testimony be finished God will help them in life; nor will upright disciples ever disown them on account of reproach or danger.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 20. Whether this precept, originally delivered to Noah, Ge. 9. 1-7, be still binding upon the Gentiles, is a point upon which much difference of opinion prevails among Christians—some holding the prohibition to be perpetually obligatory as much as the prohibition of idolatry and fornication with which it is associated; others holding the prohibition of idolatry and fornication alone to be perpetually obligatory, as founded on the first, second, and seventh commandments; but the prohibition of 'things strangled and blood' to be mere temporary accommodations to Jewish prejudices (comp. ch. 16. 3, with Ga. 2. 3-5; 5. 1-6); an abstinence from things not unlawful in themselves (1 Ti. 4. 4; Ro. 14. 14), but merely out of tenderness and charity to the prejudices and consciences of weaker brethren, Ro. 14. 15-21. In the midst of this division of opinion—a division among learned, sincere, and godly men—one thing is certain, that 'every man should be fully persuaded in his own mind' that he is following scriptural authority, not led by bodily appetite, 'in that thing which he alloweth,' Ro. 14. 5, 22. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how early a spirit of bigotry, legality, and attachment to ceremonies, began in the Christian church, to the great injury of the pure doctrines of salvation by Christ alone, through faith! And it is a great mercy that the church is now delivered from the ancient burdensome rites of Moses, which never availed to the purification of men's consciences; and that the salvation of sinners, greater or lesser, Jews or Gentiles, is wholly of free grace; for the faith of the gospel powerfully tends to the purification of men's hearts and lives.

—When attempts are made, especially under pretence of apostolic authority, to corrupt the peculiar doctrines of the gospel, and to pervert the souls of believers, it is high time to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. But proud and angry contentions about mere circumstances should never trouble the church, and expose her to confusion, danger, and reproach. It is a mercy that Jesus has appointed courts in proper subordination, and proper regulations, for the happy adjusting of differences. And there is need in all our disputes to adhere closely to the Scriptures, and in all ecclesiastical decisions to manifest a strict regard to the gospel liberty secured by Christ, and to the weakness of tender consciences. If they be made with proper prudence and harmony, they will in certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem, unto the apostles and elders, about this question.

3 And being brought on their way<sup>2</sup> by the church, they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles: and they caused great joy unto all the brethren.<sup>3</sup>

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders, and they declared all things that God had done with them.

5 ¶ But there rose up certain<sup>4</sup> of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

6 And the apostles and elders came together, for to consider of this matter.

7 ¶ And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

9 And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke<sup>6</sup> upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.<sup>7</sup>

12 ¶ Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶ And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:<sup>8</sup>

14 Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

16 After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols,<sup>9</sup> and from fornication,<sup>1</sup> and from things strangled,<sup>2</sup> and from blood.

21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath-day.

22 ¶ Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch, with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:<sup>4</sup>

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles, and elders, and brethren, send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia:

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to send chosen men unto you, with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, 26 Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by month.

28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things:<sup>7</sup>

29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the consolation.<sup>9</sup>

32 And Judas and Silas, being prophets<sup>1</sup> also themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them.

33 And after they had tarried there a space, they were let go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding, it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

general be heartily received by church-members for their edification. And greatly should we rejoice in the success of other churches, and in the union of Jews and Gentiles into one body of Christ; and carefully should all avoid giving offence to their neighbours, even in things indifferent in themselves. But since the gospel is necessary for the confirmation of believers, as well as for the conversion of sinners, not only ought ministers to labour in the ministrations of it, but all to rejoice in their success.—It is an unpleasing reflection that smaller differences should so often occasion sharp contentions between the best of men; and that dear friends should, in ill humour, bid each other adieu for life. It is nevertheless a mercy if God make the weakness of men a mean of spreading his gospel.

FALLS OF BEYROUT. [Acts, xv:41.]—"And he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches."—Acts, xv:41. It is not definitely stated in the scripture when St. Paul entered Beyrout, or the city that stood where the modern Beyrout now stands. He could hardly pass through Syria, along the coast into Cilicia, without passing through the Berytus of the Greeks and the Romans. This was a city of the ancient Jebelites. Herod the Great caused a mock trial to be held here over his two sons. Herod Agrippa adorned this city with baths and theaters. Here Titus came after the destruction of Jerusalem. The silk trade has flourished here from the time of the Romans. The Falls are north of the city. They are at the foot of the Lebauon Mountains and the water is largely melted snow.

36 ¶ And some days after, Paul said unto Barnabas, <sup>1</sup>Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them <sup>2</sup>John, whose surname was Mark.

39 And <sup>4</sup>the contention was so sharp<sup>3</sup> between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto <sup>5</sup>Cyprus:

40 And Paul chose Silas, and departed, being<sup>d</sup> recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.<sup>4</sup>

41 And he went <sup>6</sup>through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Paul having circumcised Timothy, 7 and being called by the Spirit from one country to another, 14 converteth Lydia, 16 casteth out a spirit of divination. 19 For which cause he and Silas are whipped and imprisoned. 26 The prison-doors are opened. 31 The jailer is converted, 37 and they are delivered.

THEN came he to <sup>1</sup>Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, <sup>2</sup>named Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed; but his father was a Greek:<sup>1</sup>

2 Which was <sup>3</sup>well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.

3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and eircumcised<sup>2</sup> him, because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.

4 And as they went through the cities, <sup>4</sup>they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

5 And<sup>e</sup> so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily.

6 Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of <sup>5</sup>Galatia, and were forbidden <sup>6</sup>of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in <sup>7</sup>Asia,<sup>3</sup>

7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia:<sup>4</sup> but the Spirit<sup>5</sup> suffered them not.

8 And they, passing by Mysia, came down to <sup>6</sup>Troas.<sup>6</sup>

9 ¶ And <sup>7</sup>a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man of Macedonia,<sup>7</sup> and prayed him, saying, <sup>8</sup>'Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And after he had seen the vision, <sup>9</sup>immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia,

In everything bearing upon revelation they were under the infallible guidance of inspiration; but in ordinary matters they were not free from the influence of human prejudices and passions. Mark was nephew to Barnabas, hence the desire of the latter to take him on this journey. Paul apparently had right upon his side, for he and Silas were solemnly commended by the church to the grace of God.—P.

assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

11 Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia,<sup>8</sup> and the next day to Neapolis;<sup>9</sup>

12 And from thence to <sup>1</sup>Philippi, which is the chief<sup>1</sup> city of that part of Macedonia,<sup>2</sup> and a colony:<sup>3</sup> and we were in that city abiding certain days.

13 And on the <sup>2</sup>sabbath we went out of the city by a river-side, <sup>3</sup>where prayer was wont to be made;<sup>4</sup> and we sat down, and <sup>4</sup>spoke unto the women which resorted thither.

14 ¶ And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of <sup>5</sup>Thyatira,<sup>5</sup> which worshipped God, heard us: <sup>6</sup>whose heart the Lord opened,<sup>6</sup> that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

15 And when <sup>7</sup>she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye <sup>8</sup>have judged me <sup>9</sup>to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she <sup>10</sup>constrained us.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain damsel <sup>11</sup>possessed with a spirit of divination<sup>7</sup> met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying:<sup>8</sup>

17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These<sup>9</sup> men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the <sup>12</sup>way of salvation.

18 And this did she many days. But Paul, <sup>13</sup>being grieved,<sup>1</sup> turned and said to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour.

19 ¶ And when her masters saw that <sup>14</sup>the hope of their gains was gone, <sup>15</sup>they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the <sup>16</sup>market-place, unto the rulers,

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 4. As they went through the cities. While a local and fixed ministry is undoubtedly sanctioned, because exemplified in the Acts and Epistles (Ac. 20.17, 28, &c.; Tit. 1.5), yet an itinerant ministry appears under equally apostolic sanction. Wherefore it well becomes all churches, however long and firmly settled in the faith, well to consider how far continu-

THESSEALONICA. [ACTS, xvii:1.]—"Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews."—ACTS, xvii:1. The above view shows Thessalonica as it is to-day. Thessalonica has always been a city of note. It was an ancient city of Macedonia and was known as Thernia. A daughter of Philip, King of Macedonia, was named Thessalonica. She was the sister of Alexander the Great and married Cassander. This city was named Thessalonica in honor of King Philip's daughter. There are here about 75,000 inhabitants, among them a great many prosperous Jews. You see the minarets of the Mosques rising in different parts of the city; this indicates that there are Mahometans here also, but they are not influential.

them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.<sup>4</sup>

25 ¶ And<sup>i</sup> at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them.

26 And<sup>j</sup> suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed.

27 And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison-doors open, he<sup>k</sup> drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do<sup>l</sup> thyself no harm; for we are all here.

29 Then he called for a light,<sup>5</sup> and sprang in, and came<sup>n</sup> trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, °Sirs, what must I do to be saved?

31 And they said, °Believe on<sup>6</sup> the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

32 And<sup>a</sup> they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and °was baptized, he and all his, straightway.

34 And when he had brought them into his house, he °set meat before them, and °rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

35 ¶ And °when it was day, the magistrates sent the sergeants,<sup>7</sup> saying, Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and °go in peace.

38 And the sergeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they °feared, when they heard that they were Romans.<sup>9</sup>

39 And<sup>a</sup> they came and besought them, and brought them out, and desired them to depart out of the city.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Paul preacheth at Thessalonica, 4 where some believe, and others persecute him. 10 He is sent to Berea, and preacheth there. 13 Being persecuted at Thessalonica, 15 he cometh to Athens, and disputation, and preacheth the living God to them unknown, 34 whereby many are converted unto Christ.

NOW when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to °Thessalonica,<sup>1</sup> where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, °as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath-days reasoned with them out of the scriptures,

3 Opening<sup>c</sup> and alleging that Christ must needs<sup>2</sup> have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I °preach unto you, is Christ.<sup>4</sup>

4 And<sup>d</sup> some of them believed, and °consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout °Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.

5 ¶ But<sup>g</sup> the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a com-sius; but still more justly celebrated in Christian annals as the first city of Europe in which the gospel was preached. Under Turkish misrule it has long been reduced to the condition of a miserable village; but some remnants of Christianity are still found among its few and impoverished inhabitants—a seed of hope when °the time for favour shall return. C.

REFLECTIONS.—There is need of wisdom from above to direct us when to condescend to men's weaknesses, and when to assert our privileges, religious or civil. God remarkably owns his gospel for the conversion and edification of men when it is faithfully and prudently preached. And in loving wisdom he directs where to preach it, and where not. Marvellous is it that he has not forbidden nor hindered the preaching of it in Britain, where it has been so peculiarly undervalued, rejected, denied, and detested! God °deals with people in very different forms in bringing them to his Son. And some of them, when near to the brink of hell, as well as to the ordinances of grace, are plucked as brands out of the burning. But it is enough if, either in a more kind or a more awful manner, they be deeply convinced of sin and self-insufficiency, and led to receive and rest upon Jesus Christ alone, in all his offices, for salvation, as he is offered in the gospel. And while God, in infinite kindness, becomes at once their God and the God of their seed, they will testify their high regard to the instrument of their conversion, and be deeply concerned for the eternal salvation of their whole family. Satan will turn himself and his agents into very different forms, will become a friend, an angel of light, a witness for Christ, or a selfish, outrageous, persecuting fury, in order to sully the honour and prevent the spread of the gospel. But let them do as they will, Jesus can support, comfort, vindicate, and render victorious his faithful servants. No persecutor is so proud or furious but either the terrors of God can restrain or his grace convert him. And, if possible, Christ's ministers should study to obtain their deliverances with honour as well as with safety; but they must never manifest any selfish resentment. Learn, my soul, carefully to observe providential directions. Always delight in meetings for prayer or religious conference. Never relish dissembled applause, however just. In every distress believe in Jesus Christ; and always rejoice in suffering for his sake.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 11. More noble seems to imply both higher in rank (see ver. 5, of better education, principles, and feelings—more rational, more candid, more thoughtful, more generously disposed, because more acquainted with the Scriptures, and more anxious to study them. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How justly the Holy Ghost had witnessed that bonds and afflictions awaited the apostle in every city! And it is delightful to see ministers preaching the gospel, regardless of all fatigue, contempt, and persecution, counting nothing too dear for Christ and his cause. It is comely when all the sermon is plainly derived from the oracles of God, and when hearers attentively receive the truth, and examine all they hear by the Scripture. Important is the matter of gospel preaching, even Jesus' person, sufferings, and glory; his dying for our sins, and calling us back from our graves to his last judgment. Powerful is its efficacy in the conversion of multitudes, and even of persons of rank, in places the most wicked. Real converts take delight in owning, holding fellowship with, and caring for the safety and comfort of, faithful ministers; while the offscourings of mankind, and the high pretenders to wisdom, readily unite together against Jesus Christ and his gospel. Unhappy is the place where the mob are both judges and executioners. Very false, but common, is the pretence that Jesus' sole headship over his church interferes with lawful civil authority; and yet many magistrates dread danger chiefly from noted believers.—If ministers be persecuted in one city they may flee to another. But they will everywhere meet with as abounding wickedness, and, in consequence thereof, much contempt and hatred. Yet, the nearer Christ's Word lies to their own hearts, they will the more eagerly seize all opportunities of publishing it. Great prudence is necessary in dealing with self-conceited pretenders to wisdom. Nowhere has the gospel less success than among such. They are often ignorant of the plainest doctrines of nature, of the divine perfections, and of our relation to God as our Maker, Preserver, and Disposer. None are more madly set upon the most senseless idolatry, or more given to waste precious moments in mere trifles. Wonderful is the wisdom of God in permitting them to be so blinded by the god of this world; and great his mercy in calling men to repent, in view of the future judgment, whether they will hear or forbear.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 1. Corinth. One of the most illustrious cities of Greece, situated on the isthmus that joins the Peloponnesus, or Morea, to the continent. It is said to have been founded in the year 1514 B.C., and to have been

A THENS, FROM MARS HILL, SHOWING TEMPLE OF THESEUS AS PAUL SAW IT. [ACTS, xvii : 16.]—There is but one building in the panorama before us that was standing, as it stands to-day, when St. Paul looked in the direction you are looking now. That was the temple of Theseus which you see with rows of Doric columns running all the way round it. It is a source of pleasure to be able to look upon a building now that we know absolutely he saw. We can say this of the temple of Theseus. This temple had been here more than five hundred years when Paul came to Athens. The city he saw from Mars Hill was far different from the modern Athens with its electric lights and railroad cars we see to-day from the same sacred height. Athens has now nearly 150,000 inhabitants, and is in all respects a modern city.

MARS HILL, ATHENS, FROM WHICH PAUL ADDRESSED THE SUPERSTITIOUS ATHENIANS. [Acts, xvi: 22.]—From the top of Mars Hill, overlooking the classic and beautiful Athens, was preached perhaps the greatest sermon that was ever uttered by the lips of man. It was delivered in the presence of philosophers and from the top of the rock you see in the picture. It was in this place the ancient Athenians were accustomed to hold their court. Standing on Mars Hill St. Paul was in full view of all the great works of art that made Greece famous. The Parthenon, crowning the Acropolis, was to the east, the temple of Theseus was to the northwest and the rostrum from which Demosthenes thundered was to the southwest. When St. Paul was here all these works of art and historic places had not suffered from the disintegrating effects of time.

pany, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason,<sup>h</sup> and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, 'These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;

7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus.

8 And <sup>k</sup>they troubled the people, and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.

10 ¶ And <sup>l</sup>the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea:<sup>6</sup> who coming thither, went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were <sup>m</sup>more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that <sup>n</sup>they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.

12 Therefore<sup>p</sup> many of them believed; also of honourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

13 ¶ But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, <sup>q</sup>they came thither also, and stirred up the people.

14 And <sup>r</sup>then immediately the brethren sent away Paul, to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens:<sup>7</sup> and receiving a commandment <sup>s</sup>unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶ Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, <sup>t</sup>his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry.<sup>8</sup>

17 Therefore<sup>u</sup> disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them<sup>9</sup> that met with him.

20 For thou bringest <sup>z</sup>certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.

21 (For all the Athenians, and strangers which were there, spent their time in nothing

There is no reason to imagine that Paul, a consummate orator, would commence his address with a description so calculated to excite prejudice and opposition. It should therefore be translated, 'I perceive that in all things' (your temples, altars, sacrifices, &c.) 26 And<sup>h</sup> hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth; and <sup>g</sup>hath determined the times before appointed,<sup>6</sup> and the bounds of their habitation;

27 That<sup>j</sup> they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not <sup>k</sup>far from every one of us:

28 For <sup>l</sup>in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own <sup>m</sup>poets<sup>7</sup> have said, For we are also his offspring.

29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, <sup>n</sup>we ought not to think that the God-head is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device.<sup>8</sup>

AFTER these things, Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth;<sup>1</sup>

GENERAL VIEW OF OLD CORINTH. [1 CTS, xviii: 1.]—"After these things Paul departed from Athens and came to Corinth."—Acts, xviii: 1. Corinth was an ancient city of Greece situated on the middle of the Isthmus of Corinth. It received its name from Corinthus, the son of Pelops. The inhabitants were once very powerful. Corinth was burned to the ground by the Romans in 146 B. C. It is said that during the conflagration all the metals which were in the city melted and mixed together and formed that valuable composition of metals known as Corinthian brass. When St. Paul came to this city in A. D. 51 it was perhaps the most corrupt community on earth. There was a famous temple of Venus here then given up to lasciviousness. The city that St. Paul saw was built by Julius Cæsar. It is about five miles from the new city.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: for by their occupation they were tent-makers.<sup>3</sup>

4 And<sup>e</sup> he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And<sup>a</sup> when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit,<sup>4</sup> and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ.

6 And<sup>9</sup> when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, <sup>b</sup>he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads: I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

7 And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, <sup>c</sup>one<sup>5</sup> that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

8 And<sup>j</sup> Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians <sup>k</sup>hearing, believed, and were baptized.

10 For<sup>n</sup> I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for <sup>o</sup>I have much people in this city.

11 And he continued<sup>6</sup> there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

13 Saying, <sup>q</sup>This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>5</sup> It was customary for Jewish parents in all ranks of life to train their children in trades and handicrafts. Paul was taught tent-making. It is a remarkable fact that tent-making was a staple manufacture of Tarsus his native city, and indeed of the whole province of Cilicia. The plain and mountains then abounded, as they still do, in flocks of goats. From their long black hair a strong cloth was woven, which in the markets of the Levant was called cilicium, and was generally used throughout the pastoral districts of Asia Minor, Syria, and Arabia, in the making of tents. —P.

the judgment-seat. And Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 ¶ And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn his head in Cenchrea:<sup>5</sup> for<sup>u</sup> he had a vow.<sup>6</sup>

19 And he came to Ephesus,<sup>7</sup> and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.

20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not;

21 But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep this feast<sup>8</sup> that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus.

22 And when he had landed at Cesarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, he went down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Galatia and Phrygia in order, <sup>a</sup>strengthening all the disciples.

24 ¶ And<sup>e</sup> a certain Jew named Apollon, born at Alexandria,<sup>9</sup> an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.

25 This<sup>h</sup> man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, <sup>i</sup>knowing only the baptism of John.<sup>1</sup>

26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and <sup>j</sup>exposed unto him the way of God more perfectly.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren <sup>k</sup>wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, <sup>l</sup>helped them much which had <sup>m</sup>believed through grace:

28 For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, <sup>n</sup>showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ.

CHAPTER XIX.

6 The Holy Ghost is given by Paul's hands. 9 The Jews blaspheme his doctrine, which is confirmed by miracles. 13 The Jewish exorcists 16 are beaten by the devil. 19 Conjuring books are burned. 24 Demetrius, for love of gain, raiseth an uproar against Paul, 35 which is appeased by the town-clerk.

AND it came to pass, that, while Apollon was at Corinth, Paul having passed through crying for all the abominations that are round about them, and earnestly inquiring, 'What must we do to be saved?' —Note. Let this statement of the Spirit, who knows the hearts of all men, and who searches and reveals when he will the deep things of God, encourage every effort for the melioration of society through the preaching of the gospel. It is God's means. It succeeded in licentious Corinth, and has never been unsuccessful wherever it has been employed in faith. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are those churches where ministers are so hearty in their work that they will rather labour for their own subsistence than prejudice men against the gospel, or give enemies a handle to reproach them as mercenary! But there is need of divine direction when to condescend and when not. Ministers should take great pains in making known Christ, and persuading men to accept of him as their only Saviour, and in defending the great truths of the gospel, till their hearers manifest themselves incorrigibly wicked and obstinate rejecters of it. And, alas! dreadful is their destruction whose blood faithful ministers stand clear of! But while some despise the gospel to their own undoing, it will become powerful to others, even the most unlikely. His own, whether great or small, shall be ever blessed. If ministers have God's direction, promise, presence, comfort, and protection, they need fear nothing. Success shall crown their labours; yea, even heathens, not very attentive to their duty as magistrates, shall refuse to persecute them. And the more success faithful ministers meet with, they are still the more diligent.—It is comely when old experienced Christians are inclined readily to instruct younger ones. And young preachers, who gladly accept instructions from exercised saints, though of the weaker sex, bid fair to be useful, if not famous, in gathering and edifying the church. There is little hope of such as are too wise to learn. And nothing should preachers more study than to have the Scriptures stored up in their memories and deeply written in their hearts, that all they deliver to others may be plainly marked with the authority of God.

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—Much more clear and glorious is the gospel dispensation which we the upper coasts,<sup>1</sup> came<sup>b</sup> to Ephesus; and finding certain disciples,

2 He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost<sup>2</sup> since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

4 Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

5 When they heard this, they were baptized in<sup>h</sup> the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And<sup>i</sup> when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 ¶ And he went <sup>k</sup>into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing,<sup>3</sup> and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But<sup>l</sup> when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.<sup>4</sup>

10 And<sup>p</sup> this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia<sup>5</sup> heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 And<sup>r</sup> God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

12 So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

13 ¶ Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists,<sup>8</sup> took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?

16 And<sup>v</sup> the man in whom the evil spirit was, leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds.<sup>6</sup>

19 Many of them also which used curious arts<sup>7</sup> brought their books<sup>8</sup> together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.<sup>9</sup>

20 So<sup>a</sup> mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed.

21 ¶ After these things were ended, Paul purposed<sup>b</sup> in the spirit,<sup>1</sup> when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome.

22 So<sup>c</sup> he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

23 And<sup>d</sup> the same time there arose no small stir about that way.

24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines<sup>2</sup> for Diana,<sup>3</sup> brought no small gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover, ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods which are made with hands:

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians!

29 And<sup>e</sup> the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theatre.<sup>5</sup> enjoy than even the ministration of John Baptist. And much better the baptism of the Holy Ghost than that of mere water. But, alas! how many receive the external seals of God's covenant who have no experimental, and very little notional, knowledge of him or his influences! And though baptism is never to be repeated, yet the Spirit is daily to be received. With great boldness and persevering courage ought the gospel to be preached; and dreadful is their fate who put it from them, or attempt to counterfeit its miraculous confirmations. They but fight and labour for the devil that he may reward them with shame and ruin.—But happy are they who are turned to the Lord by a cordial faith and genuine repentance! And hopeful is the case when the peculiar favourites of Satan are made openly to renounce his service, sacrifice their dearest abominations with abhorrence, and remove every temptation of drawing back out of their own and their neighbours' way. How furiously zealous are the most of mankind for a false religion, especially if worldly gain and long custom are on its side. And with such noise and clamour are invincible arguments for the most blasphemous absurdities. When those are so zealous for the devil, it is much to be lamented that many called Christians have so little concern for the glory of God.—Safe are the persons of God's faithful ministers, since he can make heathens earnest advocates for and prudent protectors of them. Fear of men hinders many from wickedness; but much more wise are they who are prevented from it by serious views of their future account to God.

FORUM AND PRISON OF ST. PAUL—EPHESUS. [ACTS, xix: 26.]—"And it came to pass that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul, having passed through the upper coasts, came to Ephesus."—Acts xix: 1. Ephesus was a famous city of Ionia, built, according to Justin, by the Amazons. Here was the great temple of Diana, the most glorious structure ever applied to the uses of pagan religion. The temple of Diana was 425 feet long and 200 feet broad. The roof was supported by 127 columns 60 feet high, which had been placed there by so many kings. It took 200 years to complete the building. This great temple was burnt the night after Alexander the Great was born. But soon the temple was rebuilt with all its former splendor. There is absolutely nothing here now but ruins. In the above picture we have what is left of the Forum and Prison of St. Paul.

31 And certain of the chief of <sup>s</sup>Asia,<sup>7</sup> which were his friends, sent unto him, <sup>t</sup>desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 Some<sup>u</sup> therefore cried one thing, and some another; for the assembly was confused: and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

35 And when the town-clerk<sup>4</sup> had appeased the people, he said, <sup>z</sup>Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper<sup>5</sup> of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell<sup>6</sup> down from Jupiter?<sup>7</sup> 36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and <sup>a</sup>to do nothing rashly.

37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither <sup>b</sup>robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.

38 Wherefore if Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, the law is open,<sup>8</sup> and there are deputies: let them implead one another.

39 But if ye inquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a law-ful<sup>9</sup> assembly.

40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this con- course.

41 And<sup>c</sup> when he had thus spoken, <sup>d</sup>he dis- missed the assembly.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Paul goeth to Macedonia. 7 He celebrateth the Lord's supper, and preacheth. 9 Eutychus having fallen down dead, 10 is raised to life. 17 At Miletus he calleth the elders together, telleth them what shall befall to himself, 28 committeth God's flock to them, 29 warneth them of false teachers, 32 commendeth them to God, 36 prayeth with them, and goeth his way.

AND after<sup>a</sup> the uproar was ceased, <sup>b</sup>Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and <sup>c</sup>departed for to go into Macedonia.

<sup>1</sup> The word defence does not here imply answering accusations with which he was personally charged, but an apology for the Jews. The object of it seems to have been to show that the Jews were not chargeable in any way with this tumult. It would be supposed by the heathen that the Christians were only a sect of the Jews, and the Jews wished to show that they had not been concerned in giving occasion to this tumult, but that it was to be traced to Paul and his friends.—I.

3 And there abode three months. And when the Jews laid wait for him,<sup>3</sup> as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia.

7 ¶ And upon the <sup>o</sup>first day of the week, when the disciples came together <sup>r</sup>to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and <sup>a</sup>continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights in the <sup>r</sup>upper chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into <sup>a</sup>a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.<sup>5</sup>

10 And Paul went down, <sup>t</sup>and fell on him, and embracing him, said, <sup>u</sup>Trouble not your- selves; for his life is in him.

An evident proof that the primitive Christians observed the first (or Lord's) day, and were also accustomed on that day to assemble themselves for hearing the Word and observing the Lord's supper. C.

Ver. 8. Many lights. For what purpose are the 'lights' men- tioned? Partly perhaps to bear record of the perfect visibility of all the acts of Christian worship which the heathen were ready to calumniate, and partly to account for the sleep of Eutychus, from the heat of the room and the exhaustion of the air. C.

Ver. 12. How much more should parents and friends be 'com- forted' when they that have fallen asleep in forbidden pleasures, and have fallen 'dead in trespasses and sins,' are restored again to life through the preaching of the Word and the power of the Spirit. C.

Ver. 21. Repentance toward God. Grief for and hatred of sin, not because it has injured ourselves, but because it has offended a holy and merciful God—hence called 'godly sorrow,' 2 Co. 7, 10, whereby the sinner, by 'faith toward the Lord Jesus Christ,' the only Saviour and way to the Father, turns from his sin to God. C.

Ver. 31. Night. For the avoiding of danger and offence, it would appear that the primitive Christians were much accustomed to meet by night; see ver. 8. Poverty, no doubt, also tended to introduce the practice—some being originally poor, others re- duced by being outcasts from their friends and proscribed in their trade, others ruined by 'the spoiling of their goods' by the hands of their covetous and unfeeling persecutors. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Christ's providence can carry his servants safe through the wildest uproars, and turn mad outrage into calm tranquillity and peace. Parting with Christian friends whom we expect to see no more on earth ought to be very devout and affectionate. And if murderous enemies lie in wait for us, we may cautiously avoid them. If we honour Christ much, he will honour us with good companions. And if min- isters be truly faithful, they will never think they do enough in the service of Christ. They may be often wearied with, but never weary of, their work. Chris- tians who fervently love Christ will make his Sabbath and supper their delight. And it is very unlike a Christian to shorten the one by unnecessary sloth and sleep, and almost forget the other by unfrequency. How criminal and dangerous is it, even at mid-day, to sleep at the worship of God! What if he whom we affront as unworthy of our notice—he whom we con- temn as unworthy to be embraced—should seize the moment, and awaken us in eternal woe! Surely then every sermon should be heard, every sacrament re- ceived, every prayer poured forth, and every farewell of friends taken, as on the brink of eternity, and as before the awful tribunal.—Infinite is the importance of the ministerial work. With deep humility, earnest care, holy fear, self-denial, and candid fidelity, all the duties of it ought to be performed. The truths, the honour of Jesus Christ, and the salvation of immortal souls, are all at stake. And both ministers and people

VATHY, ISLAND OF SAMOS. [ACTS, xx:15.]—"And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios, and the next day we arrived at Samos."—Acts, xx:15. Samos is an island in the Aegean Sea, on the coast of Asia Minor. The island is about eighty-seven miles in circumference, and is known as the birth-place of Pythagoras. The people of Samos assisted the Greeks against the Persians when Xerxes invaded Europe. The people of the island have always been under the influence of Grecian ideas, and while to-day ruled by the Sultan of Turkey they are loyal in thought and feeling to Greece. This is not surprising, for the inhabitants of this island share the glory that belongs to Greece because of her achievements in literature, art and war in ancient times. The people here are seemingly prosperous.

Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia; for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the <sup>x</sup>day of Pentecost.

17 ¶ And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders<sup>3</sup> of the church.<sup>4</sup>

18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, <sup>y</sup>Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,

19 Serving<sup>z</sup> the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations,<sup>5</sup> which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews:

20 And <sup>a</sup>how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, 21 Testifying<sup>b</sup> both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now, behold, <sup>c</sup>I go bound in the spirit<sup>6</sup> unto Jerusalem, <sup>a</sup>not knowing the things that shall befall me there:

23 Save<sup>e</sup> that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me.<sup>7</sup>

24 But<sup>g</sup> none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that <sup>h</sup>I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which <sup>i</sup>I have received of the Lord Jesus, <sup>j</sup>to testify the <sup>k</sup>gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the <sup>l</sup>kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

26 Wherefore<sup>n</sup> I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men.

27 For<sup>o</sup> I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God.

28 Take<sup>p</sup> heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers,<sup>8</sup> to feed the church of God,<sup>9</sup> which <sup>q</sup>he hath purchased with his own blood.<sup>1</sup>

29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous <sup>r</sup>wolves enter in among you, not sparing<sup>s</sup> the flock.

30 Also<sup>t</sup> of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.

31 Therefore<sup>u</sup> watch, and remember, that <sup>v</sup>by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.

3 Now when we had discovered Cyprus,<sup>6</sup> we left it on the left hand, and sailed into Syria,<sup>7</sup> and landed at Tyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And <sup>b</sup>finding disciples, <sup>c</sup>we tarried there seven days: who said to Paul through the Spirit,<sup>8</sup> that<sup>d</sup> he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And when we had accomplished those days, we departed and went our way: and they <sup>e</sup>all brought us on our way, <sup>g</sup>with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and <sup>h</sup>we kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.

7 And when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais,<sup>9</sup> and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8 And the next day, we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto Cesarea:

CHAPTER XXI. REFLECTIONS.—It is delightful to travel about under the special direction and protection of Providence, and in every place to have edifying converse with Christian friends concerning the great things which God has done for us and for his church. And it is comely for Christians to meet and part with cordial affection and solemn prayer. No wonder that loving Christians are averse to think of the sufferings or death of their faithful and useful ministers. But glorious is the fortitude to be ready to suffer anything for Christ, and to be entirely resigned to his will; and yet the tender affections of friends sometimes occasion a greater trial than the fury of enemies.—Entangling

PANORAMA OF JERUSALEM. [ACTS, xxi: 15.]—"And after those days we took up our carriages and went to Jerusalem."—ACTS, xxi: 15. Paul went up to Jerusalem at this time to see the Elders, and to give them some account of his ministry among the Gentiles. As he went up from the seacoast it is probable that he entered through the gate in the western wall. In the above view we are looking at Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives, which is to the east of the city. We see the extreme northern part of the city. The wall which begins at the extreme left of the view is above the golden gate, hence the site of the temple does not appear. It is about two miles and a half all round the walls of Jerusalem. The city is entered by about seven gates. These were formerly closed at night, but for the last few years they are kept open night and day.

and we entered into the house of <sup>1</sup>Philip the evangelist,<sup>1</sup> which was one of the seven; and abode with him.

9 And the same man had four daughters, virgins, <sup>2</sup>which did prophesy.

10 ¶ And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judea a certain prophet, named <sup>3</sup>Agabus.

11 And when he was come unto us, he took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, "Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, <sup>4</sup>besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? <sup>5</sup>for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, <sup>6</sup>"The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages,<sup>2</sup> and went up to Jerusalem.

16 There<sup>7</sup> went with us also certain of the disciples of <sup>8</sup>Cesarea, and brought with them one Mnason of <sup>9</sup>Cyprus, an <sup>10</sup>old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 ¶ And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us <sup>11</sup>gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us unto <sup>12</sup>James; and all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, <sup>13</sup>he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry.

20 And when they heard it, they <sup>14</sup>glorified the Lord; and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, how<sup>a</sup> many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all <sup>15</sup>zealous of the law:

21 And they are informed<sup>3</sup> of thee, <sup>16</sup>that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? <sup>17</sup>that the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: We<sup>e</sup> have four men which have a vow<sup>4</sup> on them;

24 Them take, and purify<sup>5</sup> thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads: and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning

RIVER ROAD, DAMASCUS. [ACTS, xxii:5.]—No one can ever forget even a short sojourn in Damascus. It is created by the River Abana, as completely as Egypt is created by the Nile. Take away the Abana River and Damascus would simply become a part of the great desert which stretches from the Lebanon Mountains to Palmyra. The Abana River, made up of melted snow from the Lebanon Mountains, rushes through a gorge in the mountains about three miles above the city, and is distributed through canals to every part of Damascus. It also makes productive the surrounding country for a circuit of twenty-five miles. After thus refreshing and replenishing a small area in the desert, the Abana loses itself in the lakes of the meadow about twenty-five miles from the city and finally sinks out of sight in the burning plains of Syria.

THE VALLEY OF THE KEDRON—THE MOST FAMOUS VALLEY IN THE WORLD.
[ACTS, xxii : 20]—"And when the blood of the Martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him."—Acts, xxii : 20. Stephen was stoned to death near St. Stephen's gate, and this gate opens out into the Valley of the Kedron. The Valley of the Kedron is the most famous valley in the world, situated as it is between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives. Here are the graves of kings and prophets. Here David walked, and Isaiah meditated and Jeremiah weiled. Here Christ prayed, and here the Garden of Gethsemane bears its nurslings of the sky, the beautiful flowers, to remind us that though Christ suffered and died, He lives again in the grace and beauty and tenderness of the world.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9 And<sup>j</sup> they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not<sup>5</sup> the voice<sup>6</sup> of him that spake to me.

Here there is no mention of their hearing the terrible sound, but merely the fact that they noted not the words of the speaker—in which statement both narratives perfectly coincide.—C.

in a miraculous manner, God leads to the ordinary means of his own appointment to carry it on, and render such persons acquainted with his will and their work. And while baptism solemnly admits them into his church, effectual fervent prayer recommends them to God.—When notorious sinners are converted, their former opposition to Christ sticks fast in their remembrance, and lies heavy on their heart; and sometimes God, in merciful chastisement, returns it on their head. But if Jesus install ministers in their office, he will take care of them, and direct their course where they shall be truly successful, when others would have rejected them. And wonderful is the wisdom of his grace in accepting the most distant and unlikely, while others wilfully harden themselves in their sins.—Great is their wickedness who are enraged at the extending of God's redeeming kindness, even to the most despicable and infamous sinners, and who shut their eyes against the most evident appearances of God's Word and Spirit.—Seasonably he raises up protectors where his servants are in imminent danger.—And for their own safety saints ought to insist on their civil privileges, that, while they stand up for his truth, God may own them, and give them further opportunities of defending his and their righteous cause.

CHAPTER XXIII. REFLECTIONS.—Happy are they who can appeal to God, that, by his grace, they have lived soberly, righteously, and godly before him.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said, Yea.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, But I was free born.<sup>2</sup>

29 Then straightway they departed from him which should have examined him:<sup>3</sup> and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

30 ¶ On the morrow, <sup>k</sup>because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he loosed him from his bands, and <sup>l</sup>commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear, and brought Paul down, and set him before them.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 As Paul pleadeth his cause, 2 Ananias commandeth them to smite him. 7 Dissension among his accusers. 11 God encourageth him. 14 The Jews' laying wait for Paul 20 is declared unto the chief captain. 27 He sendeth him to Felix the governor.

AND Paul, earnestly beholding the council, said, <sup>a</sup>Men and brethren, <sup>b</sup>I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.<sup>1</sup>

2 And the high-priest Ananias commanded them that stood by him <sup>c</sup>to smite him on the mouth.

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee,<sup>2</sup> thou <sup>d</sup>whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and <sup>e</sup>commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?

4 And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's high-priest?

5 Then said Paul, I wist not,<sup>3</sup> brethren, that he was the high-priest: for it is written, <sup>f</sup>Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.

6 ¶ But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I<sup>h</sup> am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 For<sup>i</sup> the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, <sup>j</sup>We find no evil in this man: but<sup>k</sup> if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.

10 ¶ And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should <sup>2</sup> The fact of Paul's being a 'free-born citizen of Rome,' did not arise from his having been born in Tarsus, for though it was a free city, yet it was not a colonia or municipium, and consequently its inhabitants were not Roman citizens. In all probability one of Paul's ancestors had rendered important services to the state, and had received as his reward the status of citizenship. It was of immense advantage to the apostle. A Roman citizen could not legally be fettered or imprisoned without open trial; neither could he be scourged. Any infringement of his rights subjected the magistrates who were guilty to severe punishment.—P.

<sup>3</sup> This declaration of ignorance, compared with the special promise, Mat. 10. 19, has been urged as an evidence that Paul was not inspired. But can the objectors prove that Paul was really ignorant? The ignorance is their own. Ananias was not the high-priest. He had been deprived of that office by the Romans, and succeeded by Jonathan, after whose murder by Festus there occurred a period of vacancy anterior to the elevation of Ishmael. During this vacancy Ananias usurped the office from which he had been formerly expelled on account of his crimes. When Paul, therefore, 'wist not that he was the high-priest,' he declares an historical fact; for though his partisans and flatterers called him so, they could not invest him with the office. claration be reconciled with the facts recorded, ch. 22. 4, 20; Ga. 1. 13; and the guilt admitted, 1 Co. 15. 9; 1 Ti. 1. 15? Some suppose that the apostle referred merely to his conduct since his conversion—his conduct as a Christian being the only subject of question or trial. It seems, however, more natural to understand him as speaking of his whole life, and declaring that as a Jew, when his mind was darkened and his conscience misled (see Jn. 16. 2), still he had walked according to his light—sincere, though mistaken, Ac. 26. 9, 10, and that now, as a Christian, when light had shined into his dark heart, and his conscience had been purged from dead works, he had, with equal sincerity, disinterestedness, and zeal, devoted himself to the work to which the Lord had miraculously called him. The whole amounts to a solemn assertion that his life as a Jew would furnish a public test of his integrity in embracing the religion of Jesus.—C.

11 And<sup>l</sup> the night following, the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 ¶ And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, <sup>m</sup>and bound themselves under a curse,<sup>4</sup> saying that they would neither eat nor drink <sup>n</sup>till they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

15 Now<sup>a</sup> therefore ye,<sup>5</sup> with the council, signify to the chief captain that he bring him down unto you to-morrow, as though ye would inquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come near, are <sup>p</sup>ready to kill him.

16 And<sup>s</sup> when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then<sup>t</sup> Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain; for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the <sup>q</sup>prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

19 Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him, What is that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said, <sup>r</sup>The Jews have agreed to desire thee that thou wouldest bring down Paul to-morrow into the council, as though they would inquire somewhat of him more perfectly.

21 But<sup>u</sup> do not thou yield unto them: for <sup>v</sup>there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an oath,<sup>6</sup> that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now are they ready, looking for a promise from thee.

22 So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou hast showed these things to me.

23 ¶ And he called unto him two centurions, saying, Make ready two hundred soldiers to go to Cesarea,<sup>7</sup> and horsemen threescore and ten,

And it is base in judges to abuse any honest man for avowing his own integrity. He who knows their heart and way will vindicate his faithful servants, to the confusion of their enemies, however great; and proud persecutors will quickly feel themselves unable to stand before the storm of his judgments.—In ordinary cases we must not speak evil of our rulers whom we know and own as such.—But we may join the wisdom of the serpent with the simplicity of the dove. We may divide the counsels of our enemies, though we may not revile their persons; and by maintaining some particular article of truth, set one part of them against another. If one party be enraged, the other will probably favour us.—If we be upright followers of that which is good, God can make the secular powers to protect us, and can overrule our dangerous circumstances to gain their favour. And if Jesus assure us of his presence and support, and of our future useful-

17. 1 Tertullus is a Roman name, but he speaks as a Jew, and hence it has been conjectured he was a proselyte. But it is not much more probable, that as a pleader, he employs the term 'we' as a mere legal phrase, whereby the advocate is fictitiously identified with his client? For it is by no means likely that the Jewish priests, who were deeply acquainted with the ways and feelings of the world, would present before their heathen governor a proselyte to Judaism, whom he, as a heathen, would consider at once both an apostate and a fool.—C.

* The desperate measures of the Jews no doubt confirmed Lysias in his determination to protect his prisoner; but, by keeping him at Jerusalem, insurrections might have been excited, and some opportunity might have been afforded to his vigilant enemies of murdering him. He therefore resolved to send him to Felix the Roman governor, who resided at Caesarea, which is computed to have been about seventy miles from Jerusalem. The body of Roman soldiers appointed to escort him, consisting of two hundred legionary soldiers, two hundred light-armed soldiers, and seventy horsemen, might have sufficed to repel any tumultuary assault of the Jews; but to prevent bloodshed, they were ordered to set off about three hours after sunset, that they might be out of the reach of the zealots before morning. This prudent precaution was accompanied by one equally humane. Paul was not required to walk with the soldiers, who had been accustomed to long and speedy marches; but they were ordered to provide beasts, mules or horses, changing them when necessary, that he might be conducted safely & conveniently to Caesarea.—P.

3 We accept it always, and in all places, most noble Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 Notwithstanding, that I be not further tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldest hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5 For<sup>a</sup> we have found this man a pestilent fellow,<sup>2</sup> and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 Who<sup>e</sup> also hath gone about to profane the temple: whom we took, and would have judged according to our law.

7 But<sup>d</sup> the chief captain Lysias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands, 8 Commanding<sup>h</sup> his accusers to come unto thee: by examining of whom<sup>3</sup> thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things whereof we accuse him.

9 And<sup>i</sup> the Jews also assented, saying that these things were so.

10 ¶ Then Paul, after that the governor had beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years<sup>4</sup> a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully <sup>k</sup>answer for myself:

11 Because<sup>l</sup> that thou mayest understand that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem for to worship.

12 And<sup>n</sup> they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city:

13 Neither<sup>o</sup> can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, <sup>r</sup>that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers,<sup>5</sup> believing<sup>a</sup> all things which are written in the law and in the prophets;

15 And<sup>r</sup> have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.<sup>6</sup>

16 And<sup>s</sup> herein<sup>7</sup> do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now after many years,<sup>8</sup> I came to bring <sup>t</sup>alms to my nation, and offerings.

18 Whereupon<sup>u</sup> certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult:

ness, it should entirely remove all our disquieting fears, let our enemies do what they will.—Abandoned are those miscreants, and especially those judges, who, contrary to the law of nature or nations, combine to murder such as they cannot convict of any crime. No pretence of religion can sanctify, but greatly aggravates, such horrible villainy. To bind ourselves under a curse to work iniquity, is but to insnare our souls into fearful damnation.—But watchfully God marks the most secret plots of his people's enemies. Easily he discovers and disappoints them in favour of his faithful servants. And he will avenge wickedness on the wicked, and will even turn their intended mischiefs to the good of his servants, and for promoting their further usefulness in the world.

CHAPTER XXIV. REFLECTIONS.—Profane clergymen and abandoned lawyers stick at nothing to gain their own vile ends. Falsehood, flattery, and slander go hand in hand. The purest innocence will not protect men from the most abominable aspersions; and the most infamous characters will not render some men ashamed of flattery. Spiteful malice generally represents faithful ministers as enemies to the state. And as it is in the power of every villain to propagate falsehood, and lay the heaviest charges against the noblest characters, it becomes the innocent meekly to vindicate themselves and their doctrines from invidious reproach, and that with due deference to the magistrates who give them an opportunity. But in vindicating ourselves it becomes us to own the truths of God, particularly the general resurrection of the dead, in which ruin.—But watchfully God marks the most secret plots of his people's enemies. Easily he discovers and disappoints them in favor of his faithful servants. And he will return wickedness on the wicked, and 20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil-doing in me, while I stood before the council, 21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, <sup>x</sup>Touching the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question by you this day.

22 ¶ And when Felix heard these things, having more perfect knowledge<sup>9</sup> of that way, he deferred them, and said, When <sup>y</sup>Lysias the chief captain shall come down, I <sup>z</sup>will know the uttermost of your matter.

23 And<sup>a</sup> he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, and to let him have liberty, and that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

26 ¶ He<sup>i</sup> hoped also that money should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.<sup>4</sup>

27 But after two years, Porcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, <sup>j</sup>willing to show the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.<sup>5</sup>

CHAPTER XXV.

NOW when Festus was come into the province, after three days he ascended from Cesarea to Jerusalem.

2 Then<sup>a</sup> the high-priest and the chief of the Jews informed him against Paul, and besought him,

3 And desired favour against him, that he would send for him to Jerusalem, <sup>b</sup>laying wait in the way to kill him.<sup>1</sup>

4 But Festus answered, that Paul should be kept at Cesarea, and that he himself would depart shortly thither.

5 Let<sup>c</sup> them therefore, said he, which among you are able, go down with me, and accuse this man, if there be any wickedness in him.

6 And when he had tarried among them more than ten days,<sup>2</sup> he went down unto Cesarea; and the next day, sitting on the judgment-seat, commanded Paul to be brought.

<sup>9</sup> Few things seem more unlikely than that a man of the disposition and habits of Felix should become an accomplished adept in Jewish jurisprudence and theology. By his 'more perfect knowledge of that way' cannot well, therefore, be understood any extensive knowledge of Judaism derived from his long residence in Cesarea. Neither could he have learned much of Christianity from all that Paul had yet said; though by 'that way,' some understand the knowledge of Christianity he had acquired from Paul's expository defence.

Is it not better to render the passage thus—But when Felix had heard these things, he adjourned the cause, saying, 'When I shall have acquired a more perfect knowledge of that way (which you, the Jews, condemn, and you, Paul, justify), and when Lysias the tribune shall have come down, I shall decide upon your cause.'—C.

It is said of Albinus, who, at a later period, was governor of Judæa, that he encouraged bribery to such an extent, that no malefactors remained in prison, except such as were too poor to purchase their liberty. Paul was most unjustly imprisoned; he was, without a shadow of reason, detained for two years, yet his Christian principles forbade his using any such means for securing his liberation.—P.

He was anxious on the one hand to act uprightly as a Roman magistrate, and yet, on the other, as far as possible to gain favour with those over whom he was so recently placed. He therefore asked Paul whether he was willing to be tried at Jerusalem under his own immediate presidency, but yet according to Jewish law. Had Paul consented the sentence would have been final. But Paul, though not afraid of a fair trial, knew well that the Jews would attempt his life by treachery. He, therefore, exercised his right to decline the procurator's offer, and appealed to Rome.—P.

7 And when he was come, the Jews which came down from Jerusalem stood round about, and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove.

8 ¶ While he answered for himself, <sup>e</sup>Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cæsar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Festus, <sup>g</sup>willing to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?<sup>3</sup>

10 Then said Paul, I stand at Cæsar's judgment-seat, where I ought to be judged:<sup>4</sup> to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 For<sup>h</sup> if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, <sup>i</sup>no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal<sup>5</sup> unto Cæsar.

12 Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, Hast thou appealed unto Cæsar?<sup>9</sup> unto Cæsar shalt thou go.

13 ¶ And after certain days, king <sup>6</sup>Agrippa and Bernice<sup>7</sup> came unto Cesarea, to salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, <sup>k</sup>There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, <sup>l</sup>the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, <sup>n</sup>It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore,<sup>9</sup> when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment-seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom, when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 But<sup>p</sup> had certain questions against him of their own superstition,<sup>8</sup> and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because I doubted of such manner of questions,<sup>9</sup> I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

offence towards God and towards men. And it is very shameful when infamous heathens manifest more regard to common equity, and more awe of God's truth, than high-flown professors.—Amazing is the power of divine truth. Uttered by a prisoner, it makes a wicked heathen judge to tremble, though his wife, an abandoned Jewish professor, feels it not. But if sharp convictions be stifled, the love of this world, and the deceitfulness of sin, ordinarily prevent their return.

HOUSE OF TIBERIUS, ROME. [ACTS, XXV:21.]—Tiberius was Emperor of Rome from A. D. 14 to A. D. 37. His house on the Palatine hill helped to form the manifold and massive series of structures which all together constituted the palaces of the Cæsars. When Tiberius ascended the throne of Rome Christ was ten years old, and was crucified just a few years before Tiberius died. His house on the Palatine is built of brick and is one of the ruins that inspired a part of Byron's celebrated poem "Childe Harold." Tiberius was the Roman Emperor who from his resort near the city of Pompeii wrote to the Roman Senate the despairing words: "May all the gods and goddesses, damn me a thousand times worse than I am damned, if I know what to write to you." All the emperors of Rome were called Cæsar. The emperor referred to in Acts XXV:21 is Nero.

manded him to be kept till I might send him to Cæsar.

22 Then Agrippa said unto Festus, 'I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 ¶ And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Festus' commandment Paul was brought forth.

24 And Festus said, King Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying that he ought not to live any longer.

25 But when I found that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himself hath appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

26 Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto my lord.<sup>3</sup> Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and specially before thee, O king Agrippa, that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write.<sup>4</sup> 27 For 'it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes laid against him.

CHAPTER XXVI.

2 Paul, in the presence of Agrippa, declareth his life from his childhood, 12 and how miraculously he was converted, and called to his apostleship. 24 Festus chargeth him to be mad, whereunto he answereth modestly. 28 Agrippa is almost persuaded to be a Christian. 31 The whole company pronounce him innocent.

THEN Agrippa said unto Paul, 'Thou art permitted to speak for thyself. Then Paul stretched forth the hand, and answered for himself:

Many who have been once terrified by convictions die slaves to their lusts. And a sinful desire to please men makes many, to no purpose, act contrary to their own conscience, and injure the people of God.

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS.—No length of time can wear out, or repeated disappointments subdue, inveterate malice against Christ and his servants: no sentence is so unjust but it will insist upon it; no murder so horrid but it will attempt it.—By secret springs God sometimes, for the preservation of his servants, restrains the most easy and selfish compliance of judges. And when men prudently insist on their just rights, his providence overrules all for the accomplishment of his promises. But it is hard when a righteous cause must be referred from those who enjoy divine revelation to barbarous and blood-thirsty heathens. And it is shameful when a man can scarcely get a fair hearing before he be condemned. Alas! how ignorant and unconcerned are many great men with respect to the one thing needful! Yea, many have the means of instruction always near, and never profit by them. And multitudes are eternally lost for making the gospel an object of mere curiosity.—The faithful followers and ministers of Christ easily stand clear of being enemies to the peace and order of civil societies. And judges ought to be very tender and exact in representing the case of the accused.

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 14. Pricks. Kivrega may be rendered 'goads,' but more correctly 'military spurs.' The figure is taken from a horse whose 'obstinacy of temper resists the spurs' of his rider.—Note, In ch. 8. 7 it is said his fellow-travellers * With great oratorical skill the apostle here connects the fundamental principles of the Pharisees with the true doctrine of the Messiah. His object is to show that as a true Pharisee he must believe the Old Testament promises, and believing them he must believe in Jesus. P.—By 'the hope of the promise' some understand the hope of the resurrection of the dead; but as Messiah, and not the resurrection, was the great object of revelation and promise, it seems more natural to understand the apostle as speaking of 'the hope' of a Saviour first, and of the resurrection to life and glory through him.—C.

2 I think myself happy, king Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews:

3 Especially because I know thee to be expert<sup>2</sup> in all customs and questions which are among the Jews: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

4 My manner of life from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation at Jerusalem, I know all the Jews;

5 Which knew me from the beginning, if they would testify, that after the most straitest sect of our religion, I lived a Pharisee.

6 And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers:<sup>3</sup>

7 Unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews.

8 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 Which thing I also did in Jerusalem: and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them.

11 And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

12 Whereupon, as I went to Damascus, with authority and commission from the chief priests,

13 At mid-day, O king, I saw in the way a

'stood speechless;' here it is said, 'we were all fallen to the earth.' True; but the passages present neither difficulty nor contradiction. Either Paul, who heard and understood the words spoken, fell down first, while his companions, who merely heard the sound, stood for a time, and afterwards fell down; or they all fell down together; and his fellow-travellers, who were merely affrighted with the suddenness of the light, but not conscience-stricken by the accusation, rose first and 'stood;' while Paul, whose conscience was awakened to a deep sense of his guilt, remained prostrate upon the ground, in earnest prayer for mercy. C.

Ver. 23. That he should be the first that should rise from the dead. Now, from 2 Ki. 13. 21; Mat. 9. 25; Lu. 7. 15; Jn. 11. 41, it appears that several had risen from the dead previously to the resurrection of Jesus. How therefore may these facts be reconciled with Paul's statement? Without having recourse to the doctrine that as he was 'the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world,' in the purpose of God, the prophecies, the promises, and the types—so, in like purpose, prophecy, promise, and types (see Le. 14. 6. 7; 16. 22), was he, the Saviour, raised from the dead—the difficulty may be solved by a more literal translation; to wit, 'that he should be chief (head over all things to the church) after his resurrection from the dead.' C.

Ver. 28. Almost thou persuadest me. Upon that fatal rock 'almost,' how many thousands have suffered shipwreck! O, my soul! why not 'altogether' persuaded? Hast thou not need of a Saviour? Is not Jesus such a Saviour as thou needest? What more evidence of his mission, grace, or power can reason suggest or demand? Halt then no longer between two opinions, but give thyself wholly to the Lord! 2 Co. 8. 5. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Jesus remarkably fulfils his promise in enabling his servants to speak when brought before rulers and kings for his sake. And it is delightful to see the cause of Christ defended with all the grace and faithfulness of a Christian, and yet all the good manners of a courtier. It is a high honour to be chargeable with nothing but an avowed dependence on God's promises, and belief of his performances, relative to the resurrection of Christ, and the eternal life of believers through him, and the general judgment of all by him.—But dreadful is their enmity against Christ who think his followers deserve everything cruel and barbarous for holding the fundamental truths of the gospel. Yea, devilish is their temper who can gratify themselves by forcing them, contrary to their conscience, to blaspheme their Saviour. And very distressing is it, though candid, to call to mind such things in our conduct. Amazing is that grace which changes such monsters into distinguished saints and eminent preachers, which honours them as noted instruments in winning multitudes to Christ, and preserves and protects them long in that honourable work. And happy are those ministers that make God's Word the standard of all their ministrations, in matter, manner, and end.—Dreadful is the condition in which the gospel and Spirit of Christ find sinful men; and marvellous the change they make, the infinite and everlasting blessings they confer, and the happy end to which they conduct. Alas! that these should ever be esteemed madness! that many who hear the gospel should be no more than almost Christians, and never experience the power and pleasures of religion! But it is delightful when Christians wish better to others than to themselves, and make even those who hate their cause avow their innocence.

CHAPTER XXVII. Ver. 16. We had much work to come by the boat. The boat, among the ancient navigators, was generally towed after the ship; for before the discovery of the mariner's compass, navigation being merely coasting, it was important to have the boat always ready for communicating with the shore. The storm being now high, they found great difficulty in getting their boat on board. C.

FALLS OF THE ABANA, DAMASCUS. [Acts, xxvi:20.]—What a refreshing and lovely picture! So thought the writer on the early morn of the 16th of May, 1894. The soft, invigorating air was coming in gentle breezes from the top of the Lebanon Mountains, lifting their snow-covered heads to the clouds in full view. The birds were singing in the groves of black walnut and poplar which thickly shaded the ground, on the right and on the left, while over the rock the clear, sparkling waters of the River of Damascus fell in spray to gladden the hearts of the flowers which grew in profuse abundance at the bottom of the fall. In that country, where the sun shines so hot and where the water is so rare, the water-fall represented by the picture is a perpetual benediction.

light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me and them which journeyed with me.

14 And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in <sup>the</sup> Hebrew tongue, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

15 And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest.

16 But<sup>r</sup> rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, <sup>to</sup> make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear<sup>o</sup> unto thee;

17 Delivering<sup>t</sup> thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, 18 To<sup>u</sup> open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and <sup>from</sup> the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive <sup>for</sup> forgiveness of sins, and <sup>in</sup>heritance among them which are <sup>san</sup>ctified by faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king Agrippa, <sup>I</sup> was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:

20 But<sup>b</sup> showed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, <sup>that</sup> they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance.

21 For these causes <sup>the</sup> Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me.<sup>7</sup>

22 Having therefore <sup>obtained</sup> help of God, I continue unto this day, <sup>witnessing</sup> both to small and great, saying <sup>none</sup> other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come.<sup>8</sup>

23 That<sup>i</sup> Christ should suffer, and that he should be <sup>the</sup> first that should rise from the dead, and should <sup>show</sup> light unto the people, and to the Gentiles.

24 ¶ And as he thus spake for himself, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.

25 But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness.

26 For <sup>the</sup> king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am per-

sation against Paul was that he had spoken against the law, and endeavoured to bring it into disgrace; his defence is at once wise and bold. Instead of opposing the law, he was doing all in his power to develop its fundamental truths and principles; instead of attempting to overthrow it, he was, in his teaching, fulfilling it to the letter. Such sentiments enunciated in the presence of a learned Jewish monarch must have produced a deep impression. They did so, as Agrippa's confession proves. Festus could not comprehend them. He, too, was impressed, but it was only with the learning, eloquence, and earnestness of Paul.—P.

<sup>1</sup> The meaning of Agrippa's words in ver. 28 has been variously interpreted.
Recent critics represent them as spoken ironically, signifying,
'I am not so easily to be made a Christian of as thou supposest.'
Philologically they may be so interpreted,
but the meaning attached to them in the English version may also be correct.
There can be no doubt, however, in what sense Paul understood them. He represents them as having been spoken in earnest, and he gives the noble reply contained in ver. 29.

27 King Agrippa, believest thou <sup>the</sup> prophets? I know that thou believest.

28 Then Agrippa said unto Paul, <sup>Almost</sup> thou persuadest me to be a Christian.

29 And Paul said, <sup>I</sup> would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these <sup>bonds</sup>.

30 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them:

31 And when they were gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying, This man <sup>doeth</sup> nothing worthy of death or of bonds.

32 Then said Agrippa unto Festus, This man might have been set at liberty,<sup>2</sup> if he had not <sup>appealed</sup> unto Cæsar.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Paul, shipping toward Rome, 10 foretelleth of the danger of the voyage, 11 but is not believed. 14 They are tossed to and fro with tempest, 41 and suffer shipwreck, 22, 34, 44 yet all come safe to land.

AND, when it was <sup>determined</sup> that we should sail into Italy, they delivered Paul and certain other prisoners unto one named Julius, a centurion<sup>1</sup> of Augustus' band.

2 And entering into a ship of <sup>Adramyttium</sup>, we launched, meaning <sup>to</sup> sail by the coasts of Asia; one <sup>Aristarchus</sup>, a Macedonian of Thessalonica, being with us.

3 And the next day we touched at <sup>Sidon</sup>. And Julius <sup>courteously</sup> entreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go unto his friends to refresh himself.

4 And when we had launched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus,<sup>3</sup> because the winds were contrary.

5 And when we had sailed over the sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia.<sup>4</sup>

6 And there the centurion found a ship of Alexandria<sup>5</sup> sailing into Italy; and he put us therein.

7 And when we had sailed slowly many days, and scarce were come over against <sup>Cnidus</sup>, the wind not suffering us, we sailed under Crete,<sup>7</sup> over against Salmone;<sup>8</sup>

Ver. 17. Sail. The word translated 'sail' is of uncertain signification, and has also been rendered 'mast or yard.' Bloomfield holds it to have been the mast; and observes, that by the ancients masts were constructed with a kind of socket, so that they could be lowered at pleasure. And this construction is no doubt still common with European vessels prepared to pass under bridges, but is by no means probable in vessels intended for the open sea, and capable of carrying 276 souls, ver. 37. Neither is it likely that in such weather there would be any sail set; but if any, there would certainly be no more than would enable the vessel to steer, with a view to keeping off the coast, which the mariners believed to lie to leeward. The σκιος is therefore more probably the gigantic 'yard,' such as appears in some of the paintings of Pompeii, with the main-sail brailled around it, or some close-reefed sail which the violence of the storm compelled the mariners to take in. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The passage of saints through this world is often extremely tempestuous. Yet frequently the Lord gives them repeated favours from whom they might have expected the hardest usage. Kindly he communes with and comforts them when terrors prevail all around them. By them he sends his warnings of danger and messages of peace. And he not only preserves them, but others for their sakes, from raging seas and bloodthirsty men. God can exactly foretell events that are to happen in time to come; and whatever be his means, whether winds, waves, or mariners, their influence is necessarily connected with the end which he has seen and foretold.—Thrice happy are they who can speak of him as their Proprietor, Master, and Friend. Great confidence may they repose in his promise, and may expect safety and comfort from his hand. While they who trust to their fancied wisdom rather than to his Word most surely plunge themselves into mischief and shame. We owe great thanks to him for our daily bread, as well as for our hopes or enjoyment of remarkable deliverances. Yet how tasteless is our necessary provision when all hope of life is taken away, and there is like to be no more occasion for it; and insignificant is all the wealth of this world when a storm of raging elements may make us glad to part with it for our own preservation.—Sailors had need to live in union to Christ and fellowship with God, who alone can preserve them from the jaws of destruction. And it is proper that all should sympathize with them that do business in great waters.—But thrice happy are those souls which are made to renounce the broken covenant of works, and their own

CITADEL AT CORFU. [Acts, xxvii: 40.]—We have no record in the Acts of the Apostles that St. Paul was ever at Corfu. But it was in the track of his voyage and was then an important island, so that he doubtless passed and stopped there. It was customary for trading vessels such as he sailed on, as he made his way to Rome, to stop at the leading points of commercial interest. Corfu is one of the islands now under control of the King of Greece. When George I. ascended the throne of Greece Great Britain made over to him the Island of Corfu, one of the loveliest places in the Mediterranean sea. We have before us a view of the Citadel as it appears from the sea. This picture was taken from the deck of the Italian steamer upon which we sailed. Viewed from the steamer the island looks like some fairy land.

8 And, hardly passing it, came unto a place which is called the Fair Havens; nigh whereunto was the city of Lasea.<sup>9</sup>

9 Now when much time was spent, and when sailing was now dangerous, because the fast<sup>1</sup> was now already past, Paul admonished them,

10 And said unto them, Sirs, <sup>9</sup>I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt<sup>2</sup> and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 Nevertheless, the centurion <sup>h</sup>believed the master and the owner of the ship, more than those things which were spoken by Paul.

12 ¶ And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phenice,<sup>3</sup> and there to winter; which is an haven of Crete, and <sup>4</sup>lieth toward the south-west and north-west.<sup>5</sup>

13 And when the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, <sup>6</sup>loosing thence, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But<sup>k</sup> not long after there arose<sup>6</sup> against it a tempestuous wind, called Euroclydon.<sup>7</sup>

15 And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, we let her drive.

16 And running under a certain island which is called Clauda,<sup>8</sup> we had much work to come by the boat;

17 Which when they had taken up, they used helps,<sup>9</sup> undergirding the ship; and fearing lest they should <sup>l</sup>fall into the quicksands,<sup>1</sup> strake sail, and so were driven.

18 And we being exceedingly <sup>n</sup>tossed with a tempest, the next day they lightened the ship;

19 And the third day <sup>o</sup>we cast out with our own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And<sup>p</sup> when neither sun nor stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope that we should be saved was then taken away.

21 ¶ But after <sup>q</sup>long abstinence, Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, <sup>r</sup>and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss.

22 And now <sup>s</sup>I exhort you to be of good cheer: for there shall be <sup>t</sup>no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship.

24 Saying, <sup>y</sup>Fear not, Paul; <sup>z</sup>thou must be brought before Cæsar: and, lo, <sup>1</sup>God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.

25 Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: <sup>2</sup>for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me.

<sup>9</sup> Lasea. A city on the south-east coast of Crete, not mentioned by any ancient geographer. C.—The direct course from Myra to Italy would have been to the north of Crete; but it seems the ship was met by strong north-westerly gales which drove her to the south of Crete. The ruins of Lasea have been recently discovered, about 5 miles to the east of the roadstead of Fair Havens, still bearing its ancient name.—P.

26 Howbeit, we must be cast upon <sup>a</sup>a certain island.

27 But when the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in <sup>2</sup>Adria, about midnight the shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country;

28 And sounded, and found it twenty fathoms: and when they had gone a little further, they sounded again, and found it fifteen fathoms.

29 Then fearing lest they should have fallen upon rocks, they cast four anchors<sup>3</sup> out of the stern,<sup>4</sup> and <sup>5</sup>wished for the day.

30 And as the shipmen were about to flee out of the ship, when they had let down the boat into the sea, under colour as though they would have cast anchors out of the foreship,

31 Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, Except<sup>5</sup> these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved.<sup>6</sup>

32 Then the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.<sup>7</sup>

33 And while the day was coming on, Paul besought them all to take meat, saying, This day is the fourteenth day that ye have tarried, and continued fasting, having taken <sup>8</sup>nothing.

34 Wherefore I pray you to take some meat; for this is <sup>9</sup>for your health:<sup>9</sup> for<sup>k</sup> there shall not an hair fall from the head of any of you.

35 And when he had thus spoken, he took bread, and <sup>1</sup>gave thanks to God in presence of them all: and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were they all <sup>2</sup>of good cheer, and they also took some meat.

37 And we were in all in the ship two hundred threescore and sixteen souls.

38 And when they had eaten enough, <sup>3</sup>they lightened the ship, and cast out the wheat<sup>1</sup> into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they discovered a certain creek with a shore,<sup>2</sup> into the which they were minded, if it were possible, to thrust in the ship.

40 And when they had <sup>3</sup>taken up the anchors, they committed themselves unto the sea, and loosed the rudder-bands,<sup>4</sup> and hoised up the mainsail to the wind, and made toward shore.

41 And falling into a place where two seas met,<sup>5</sup> they<sup>1</sup> ran the ship aground; and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmoveable, but the hinder part was broken with the violence of the waves.

42 And<sup>n</sup> the soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape.

43 But the centurion, <sup>o</sup>willing to save Paul, kept them from their purpose; and commanded self-righteousness and strength, that, through Jesus' merits and grace, they may, through much tribulation, get safe to the celestial country.

And richly are they here rewarded of God with the healing of their sick, and no doubt much instruction for the salvation of their souls. We must never hastily

PUTEOLI—WHERE ST. PAUL LANDED. [ACTS, xxviii: 13.]—"And from thence we fetched a compass and came to Rhegium; and after one day the south wind blew and we came the next day to Puteoli." We have in full view the place on the sea where St. Paul landed when he touched the Italian shore. When he landed on the quay at Puteoli, he was again on classic grounds. He was near Virgil's tomb and in the midst of scenes about which Virgil has sung. He was close to the luxurious winter home of Tiberius, and in sight of the region where he had been committed the unnatural crime of Nero, who attempted to drown his own mother, which failing to do he had her put to death by the hand of one of his hired assassins. This was the Roman emperor before whom Paul was to be tried, in the city of Rome.

that they which could swim should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land:

44 And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass, that <sup>1</sup>they escaped all safe to land.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

AND when they were escaped, then they knew that the <sup>a</sup>island was called <sup>1</sup>Melita.<sup>2</sup>

2 And the <sup>b</sup>barbarous<sup>3</sup> people <sup>c</sup>showed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold.

3 ¶ And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand.

4 And when the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, <sup>a</sup>No doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

5 And<sup>e</sup> he shook off the beast into the fire, and felt no harm.

6 Howbeit, they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and said that <sup>g</sup>he was a god.

7 ¶ In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius; who received us, and lodged us three days courteously.

8 And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever, and of a bloody flux: to whom Paul entered in, <sup>h</sup>and prayed, and laid his hands on him, and healed him.

9 So when this was done, others also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed:

10 Who<sup>i</sup> also honoured us with many honours; and when we departed, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

11 ¶ And after three months we departed in a ship of <sup>j</sup>Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle, whose sign was Castor and Pollux.<sup>4</sup>

12 And landing at Syracuse,<sup>5</sup> we tarried there three days.

13 And from thence we fetched a compass, and came to <sup>k</sup>Rhegium:<sup>7</sup> and after one day the of the rudders.<sup>7</sup> And there can be no question that ancient vessels used two, or even more, rudders. See Elian, Var. Hist. iv. 40; Athen. b. v.; and Suidas in voce Διζόγος. Some ancient paintings exhibit a rudder on each side of the stern.—Bands. Ropes by which the rudders were lashed, to keep them steady while the ship was at anchor; or, perhaps, as would appear probable from one of the paintings at Pompeii, a tackle by which the outer part was altogether raised out of the water, and the inner end made fast to the deck.—C.

2 Some think the island was Melita, on the coast of Dalmanatia; others, the modern Malta. And the sailing first to Syracuse in Sicily, and then to Rhegium in Italy, seems to settle the question in favour of Malta. For had the vessel come from the Gulf of Venice, Rhegium would have been the first port, and Syracuse totally out of her course. C.—The scene of the shipwreck is still well known, and is called St. Paul's Bay. Its general features answer in all respects to the few incidental notes of Luke. the round a vessel makes when beating or tacking against an adverse wind. The scope of the passage indicates that Rhegium was not on the direct route of the ship from Syracuse to the Straits of Messina. It lay a little to the east, and the ship meeting a north wind blowing down through the straits was unable to make way against it, and consequently put into the harbour of Rhegium. As soon, however, as the wind veered round to the south, they put out again, and ran through to Puteoli.—P.

south wind blew, and we came the next day to Puteoli;<sup>8</sup>

14 Where we found brethren, and were desired to tarry with them seven days:<sup>9</sup> and so we went toward Rome.

16 And when we came to Rome,<sup>3</sup> the centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guard: <sup>n</sup>but Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, that after three days Paul called the chief of the Jews together: and when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, though <sup>n</sup>I have committed nothing against the people, or customs of our fathers, yet was I delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans:

18 Who,<sup>2</sup> when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me.

19 But when the Jews spake against it, <sup>r</sup>I was constrained to appeal unto Cæsar; not that I had ought to accuse my nation of.

20 For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you; because that for the hope<sup>4</sup> of Israel I am bound with this chain.

21 And they said unto him, We neither received letters out of Judea concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came showed or spake any harm of thee.

22 But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for <sup>s</sup>as concerning this sect, we know that every where it is spoken against.

23 ¶ And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging; to whom <sup>t</sup>he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And<sup>v</sup> some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, <sup>x</sup>Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers,

26 Saying, <sup>y</sup>Go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive:

27 For the heart of this people is waxed judge of the external dispensations of Providence, nor run from one extreme to another. There is great danger in thinking uncharitably of the distressed, or too honourably of the prosperous. And it is God's will, not idols or charms, that can render our attempts successful. If we sincerely aim at honouring God, he will procure sufficient honour, comfort, and kindness for us, go where we will. But awful is the enmity of carnal minds against Christ, that his religion, notwithstanding all its purity, dignity, and benevolence, should be everywhere spoken against, and that any should be loaded with chains on his account.—And for the advantage of souls, ministers should be careful to prevent, avert, or remove whatever groundless prejudices can be conceived against them. But let them do what they will, the gospel will be to many a savour of death unto death. And dreadful indeed is the experience of this. But it is a great mercy if any are made to believe; and if ministers can be useful, even under persecuting restraints, and can devote their house, as well as their heart, lips, and hands, to the service of Jesus Christ.

THE APPIAN WAY, NEAR ROME—OVER WHICH THE APOSTLES WALKED IN CHAINS. [ACTS, xxviii:15.] —We see the road in the above picture along which the tired and persecuted apostles walked in chains from the coast at Puteoli to Rome. At the point represented in our view of the Appian Way St. Paul was about five miles from the city of the Cæsars. Now amid tombs which lined either side of the Appian Way, he was slowly making his way to the imperial capital of the world. While he walked amid the tombs of the great men who had reigned and died in Rome, he was also moving along the most fashionable boulevard, for the Romans built their tombs beside their gayest driveway, and thus he slowly entered the city where he was to be beheaded. This road now is strewn with the wrecks of tombs.

gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

The 'ACTS OF THE APOSTLES' possesses all the characteristics of other scriptural histories—brevity; impartiality; selection of what is valuable for instruction; neglect of what is merely curious; tenderness towards the persons of the wicked, but unflinching condemnation of their sins; a continuous reference of all events to God, with an overwhelming desire to promote his glory by the conversion of sinners. The whole book presents, not so much a history as a specimen of the primitive church; but that specimen amply sufficient, not merely to attest the miraculous origin of Christianity, but also to exhibit those moral qualities—those graces of the Spirit—by which, as 'outward and ordinary means,' the gospel was originally propagated; and by which alone it can continue to be propagated, where miraculous powers are not bestowed—graces of the Spirit, more or less common to all true believers, and without which, even the eye of the prophet penetrating the depths of futurity, the tongue of inspiration expounding all mysteries, with the arm of faith miraculously removing mountains—are all 'nothing,' 1 Co. 13. 2. Accordingly it will be seen that one of the first moral qualities—one of the first graces—of the primitive church was absolute dependence upon God, evidencing itself in an earnest desire for his Spirit, and in continued waiting upon his promise and providence in prayer, ch. 1. 4, 14, 24; 2. 46; 6. 4-6; 9. 11; 10. 9; 12. 5; 16. 16. A second distinguishing feature of the primitive church appears in the spirit of liberality of the rich towards the poor, and their personal indifference, as individuals, to the acquirement and accumulation of wealth, ch. 2. 44, 45; 5. 4; 8. 18-20. A third characteristic may be seen in the order and efficiency with which their temporal affairs were conducted, as manifested in that most difficult department, the comfortable support of the poor, ch. 6. 1-6. This part of primitive Christianity was, most probably, derived from the Mosaic institutions, in which provision for the widow, the fatherless, the poor, and even the stranger, occupied a conspicuous place. And, in this characteristic, had the modern imitated the primitive churches more, the interference of human law on behalf of the poor would have been quite unnecessary; and although it is certain pauperism would not have been annihilated, there is little question that it would have been diminished; and the unexpensive machinery of the deaconship would have been amply sufficient for distinguishing between the really necessitous and the indolent impostor, and collection and outlay of the ample finance of benevolence. A fourth characteristic of the primitive church may be seen in the profound respect with which the apostles regarded, in things temporal, 'the powers that be,' and the faithfulness and courage with which, in things spiritual, they declared their determination to 'obey God rather than man,' ch. 4. 13-20; 16. 37; 25. 11. A fifth speciality in the primitive church is founded in the coexistence of a fixed and itinerant or superintendent ministry. The fixed ministry lay in the hands of the deacons managing the temporalities, and of the elders labouring in the spiritualities, ch. 6. 1-6; 14. 23; 20. 17, 28; the itinerant or superintendent in the hands of the apostles and their companions, as qualified and designated by the Holy Spirit, and prayerfully appointed by their brethren, ch. 11. 22, 23; 13. 2, 3; 15. 36-41; 16. 4-13. Upon this characteristic there is immediately ingrafted a sixth—the primitive was essentially, if not totally, a missionary church—a church of missionaries. But there is a speciality in this characteristic not to be overlooked—the primitive church did not intend to become missionary—the very apostles did not at first understand either the nature, object, or extent of their original commission. And when the eyes of an apostle were opened, as it were, by light from heaven, the body of the church took offence, and he was necessitated to justify himself for obeying a heavenly vision, and preaching the gospel to the Gentiles, ch. 10. 9-16, 34, 35, 45; 11. 1-3, 18. Christianity alone has been able to grapple with and overcome the prejudices of caste and colour. Christianity alone infuses a heaven-born ambition—an ambition that aims at universal conquest and universal monarchy—a conquest of truth over error, of love over enmity; and a monarchy of which the meek and lowly Jesus is the sole King and Head. Among the many internal evidences of Christianity, the early eradication of national prejudices, and the cordial reconciliation and fellowship of the Jews with the Gentiles, presents one, in the form of a moral transformation, never to be accounted for by any power inferior to that of him in whose hands are the hearts of all men, and who turneth them (if they will) as the rivers of water in the valleys. The last characteristic of the primitive church specially demanding notice is presented in the humility of its rulers, and the simplicity of its government. This is no place for any discussion of the comparative merits of mere forms of church government. But one fact every true Christian will admit—that whatever form approaches nearest to that historically depicted in the Acts of the Apostles, must be acknowledged as the true model by all who seek and find their religion in the Bible, and the Bible alone. But to whatever conclusion Christians may come concerning the original form of the church and its binding nature as a model to future times, one thing they will do well to observe—that no outward form can supply the lack of truth and charity, 1 Co. 13. 1-6; a world renounced and self-denied, Mat. 16. 24; Ro. 12. 1, 2; of Christ crucified before the eyes, and of Christ reigning in the heart, Ga. 3. 1; Col. 1. 27; that heart renewed by the indwelling Spirit of God, and thereby rendered an abiding place for the Father and the Son, 1 Co. 3. 16; Jn. 14. 23. Without these, ministers and churches are 'nothing;' with these, they either have all that they need, or, if anything be wanting, or anything superfluous, God will assuredly reveal it to them in his own time, Phi. 3. 15.

Before closing our remarks on the Book of Acts, let us direct a moment's attention, not to the whole, but to a few peculiar features in the character of Paul. (1) One of the first features of his character, as exemplified in his actions, is that perfect and undivided energy with which he devoted himself to one object. As a Jewish persecutor he did nothing but persecute; as a Christian apostle he did nothing but journey, visit, pray, preach, and write. Even when by a necessity arising from the poverty of a persecuted church, he was compelled to labour for his daily bread, he still continued to 'reason in the synagogue every Sabbath, and persuade both the Jews and the Gentiles,' ch. 18. 4. And when this interval was past, with what undivided purpose and energy he again devoted himself to his one work, the brief notices in the 'Acts,' and the cursory review in one of his epistles, will sufficiently demonstrate. Hear his own account, the truth of which was right well known to the churches:—'In journeyings often—in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Besides those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches,' 2 Co. 11. 26. (2) Immediately connected with the foregoing trait of character, or rather intimately and inseparably blended with it, appears that endurance of fatigue which seems to imply an iron-like constitution of body, with that endurance of insults, injuries, and ingratitude which depends upon a crucified spirit. (3) It is unnecessary to record more than a passing remark upon the personal courage with which he was endowed, which, in prophetic view of 'bonds and imprisonments,' could easily reply to all the dissuasion of his friends, 'None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself.' (4) With similar brevity may be noted that remarkable decision by which he was distinguished. When even Peter vacillated, Paul remained unshaken; when Peter 'was to be blamed,' Paul 'withstood him to the face.' A truth once confirmed, he never doubts; a prejudice once uprooted, he never suffers to be replanted; a purpose once formed, no obstruction can induce him to relax his efforts for its accomplishment. He uniformly acts as one who has 'set the Lord before him,' and therefore, whatever may betide him, can never be unduly moved. (5) The last characteristic we shall select from among many may be discovered in that perfect readiness with which he meets the difficulties of every emergency in his laborious and eventful life. No doubt this, like every other quality noticed, was 'the gift of God,' in fulfilment of his gracious promise to his disciples of a 'strength' sufficient for 'their day.' Still we are not the less, upon that account, to note or admire the gift; in fact, our admiration should only be the greater, when to the worth of the possessor is superadded the grace of the donor. Every remarkable incident of his life exemplifies the readiness of the apostle—take the examples of his use of the Greek tongue with Lysias (ch. 21. 37), his immediate transition to Hebrew when he addresses the Jews, who, be it observed, did not generally speak the Hebrew, but who nevertheless honoured it above all languages. Note also the readiness with which he justly put forward his faith in the resurrection, whereby he roused the Pharisees against the Sadducees, while he engaged the Pharisees themselves to a more attentive consideration of the evidences of the resurrection of Jesus, ch. 23. 6. Mark again the readiness and graphic accuracy with which he distinguishes between Felix and Agrippa, seizing at a glance the distinctive peculiarities of each, flattering neither, but conciliating both, ch. 24. 10; 26. 2, 3. With similar readiness he appeals to Cesar (ch. 25. 11); for the time had now arrived when, had he willingly returned to Jerusalem, he had been guilty of his own death. But the most striking example of this wonderful readiness for all emergencies appears during his voyage to Rome, a readiness the more wonderful, that there appears no trace of his previous acquaintance with maritime affairs; nevertheless we find him (ch. 27. 9) admonishing the captain of the ship and officers of the imperial army of the future disasters of the voyage. When the cowardly sailors are about to become the first to desert their ship, we find him detaining them on board as the agents and securities of the general safety; and when crew and passengers were alike exhausted with labour and fasting, we find him again, by precept, example, and promise, cheering their drooping spirits; and when they had escaped from shipwreck, with the same characteristic readiness he 'gathers a bundle of sticks, lays them on the fire;' and, when bitten by a viper—the emblem of Satan's enmity when God's dear children escape from the moral storms he is permitted to raise—we find him, unmoved, cast the venomous creature back into the fire—the emblem of that judgment 'prepared for the devil and his angels.' Now in all these instances—and many others might easily be adduced—Paul certainly stands assimilated to the character of our Lord beyond any other apostle. Our Lord, it may be justly said, was never taken unawares or unprepared. He alone fully realized the words of the psalm (Ps. 16. 8), 'I have set the LORD always before me; because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved;' and Paul, in an eminent degree realized his promise (Mat. 10. 19), because, in an eminent degree, he was filled with his Spirit. C.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANS.

Rome was, and is, the chief city of Italy, and was long the mistress of the then known world. To the Christians there, though not converted by his ministrations, Paul, as the apostle of the Gentiles, about A.D. 60, wrote this epistle, in order to establish their minds in the leading principles of the gospel, and direct them to a suitable improvement of it. After an introduction, asserting his own apostolic mission, and commending their faith, ch. 1. 1-17, he represents both Gentiles and Jews as being so sinful, that they could not possibly be justified before God by their own works, ch. 1. 18; ii.; 3. 1-20: how God's free grace reigns, through Jesus Christ's righteousness, to the justification of the greatest sinners, ch. 3. 21; iv.; v.: what obligations to holiness in heart and life are laid upon believers, by the happy freedom and rich privileges which they enjoy in him, ch. vi.-viii.: and while he traces up all heavenly blessings to the eternal and wise purpose of God as their true original, he points out how the just rejection of the Jews for their unbelief, and the gracious calling of the Gentiles by the gospel, because of their repentance and good works, was exactly answerable thereto, ch. ix.-xi.: and finally, exhorts to a multitude of personal and relative duties, incumbent on these Romans as members of the commonwealth, and especially of the church, ch. xii.-xvi.

[Letter-writing upon sacred subjects was an ancient practice among the prophets of the Lord. Thus Elijah not only wrote (2 Ch. 21. 12-15) to warn Jehoram to flee from the wrath to come; but he appears to have written the letter before his translation to heaven, that it might come as with all the solemnity and sanction of one sending a message from the world of spirits. Thus, again, we find Jeremiah (ch. xxix.) writing a letter to the captives in Babylon, exhorting them to quietness, to beware of false prophets, and promising their return after seventy years. Other portions of the prophecies seem also to have been written and sent as letters—such as several of the 'burdens' of particular countries or cities, of which the chief use must have lain in their speedy communication to the parties addressed. See for example Is. 13. 1; 15. 1; 17. 1, &c.; Je. 36. 1-10, 18, 32; 44. 1-14; Eze. 28. 1, 2, &c. Thus also the prophecy of Haggai, ch. 1. 1, seems to have been a letter to Zerubbabel and Joshua; and Malachi, the last of the prophets, seems to have written his 'burden,' ch. 1. 1, first as a general epistle to all Israel, and then as a special lesson of rebuke and instruction to the priests, ch. 2. 1.

Of the New Testament a large portion is composed of letters, some to individuals and some to communities. Among these the epistle to the Romans occupies a conspicuous place. By consent of all historic antiquity it is ascribed to Paul. It appears to have been the fifth of his apostolic letters, but is placed at the head of the collection, either because Rome was the imperial city, or because it is the longest and most comprehensive of his epistles, embracing the case both of Jews and Gentiles, and presenting the general doctrines of Christianity in a regular and systematic form.

This epistle has always attracted the peculiar attention of interpreters; 'yet no considerable difference of interpretation (observes Haldane) has ever been given of its contents by those who have renounced their own wisdom, and have determined to follow implicitly the obvious meaning of the Word of God.' In the first chapter, after declaring his own rank and authority in the church, the apostle proceeds by directing attention to the Son of God, in his incarnation in time, and his divine nature from eternity, as the great object of the gospel which he was commissioned to proclaim. Then, after an affectionate Christian salutation to the church, he proceeds to announce the doctrine he intends to inculcate and establish, viz. that the gospel is 'the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth;' and then presents the reason and the means, because 'therein is the righteousness of God revealed;' and that unless such righteousness had been brought in and rendered available, all men must have perished, because 'the wrath of God (has been) revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men.' Accordingly, in the first chapter, the apostle proceeds, by an appeal to facts, to establish the charge of 'ungodliness and unrighteousness' against the Gentiles, who had outraged reason in rejecting the Creator, and adopting the creatures as their gods, while they violated even the fragments of the law written in their hearts, disregarded the admonitions of their own consciences, and took their pleasure in sin and sinners, though aware of the righteous judgment of a holy God against all the workers of iniquity. In the second chapter the Jews, who would have lent a ready ear to the indictment and condemnation of the Gentiles, are themselves to be arraigned. But before they could well be aware of what was to follow, like David before Nathan, they pronounce their own doom, by concurring in a sentence by which an indefinite character is pronounced 'inexcusable' when he himself condemns another, and yet is guilty of the same crimes. The Jews are then proved guilty of violating the law delivered at Sinai, and instructed in the vanity of trusting to outward ceremonies and ordinances, while the heart is polluted with sin, and alienated from God. In the third chapter, the apostle proceeds to arraign both Jews and Gentiles under one common indictment, and draws from the Old Testament, and especially from the Psalms, that anatomy of the human heart, a fearful picture of their common depravity and guilt. Thus having proved, by an undeniable appeal to facts, that every man in his natural state lies under the just condemnation of God, because a rebel against him, whether as revealed in the visible creation, in the hearts and consciences of men, or in the positive ordinances and eternal principles of a written law, he arrives at the inevitable conclusion, that by obedience to the law no living man shall be justified; for that so far from justifying him, each form of this threefold revelation proves him to be a transgressor, and therefore worthy of condemnation.

The way is thus prepared for the grand display of the grace and mercy of God announced in the gospel. What the law could not do, not from any deficiency in itself, but owing to the depravity of man, God has fully accomplished. Man has no righteousness of his own, but God has provided a living way for him, a living way provided solely by grace and received solely by faith; it is placed to the account of the believer, when he repents of his sins and receives Christ as his Savior. Yet so far from being contrary to the justice of God, this method of justification 'freely by grace' illustrates his justice, and vindicates his former dealings with men. So far from making the law void, it establishes the law in all honour and authority. This way of salvation equally applies to all, both Jews and Gentiles, men of every nation and of every character; there is no difference here, for all, without exception, are sinners.

In the fourth chapter the apostle proceeds to obviate certain objections. First, that drawn from Abraham's alleged justification by works when he delivered up his son at the commandment of God, see Ja. 2. 21-24. Now this he admits, with James, to be a justification before men, a thing capable of being shown outwardly by one to another, comp. Ro. 4. 2 with Ja. 2. 18, but demonstrates to be no justification before God, because no present obedience, however conspicuous, can possibly obliterate past sin, and because this is a work to which grace alone is adequate. Secondly, he obviates the Jewish objection against the justification of the Gentiles, who, because 'salvation was of (began with) the Jews,' would have confined it to them, or to proselytes of circumcision. This the apostle obviates, by showing that the promise of God was made, the faith of Abraham professed, and the righteousness of God bestowed before circumcision, when Abraham was still as a Gentile, and that circumcision was a mere seal of that righteousness received by faith, which he already had; that so, being of God, pronounced a 'father of many nations,' he might become the representative and fountain-head of all upon whom God, by his Spirit, should confer like precious faith in the Saviour. While thus obviating objections, the apostle casts much additional light upon his great topic, and in order to complete his view, describes in the fifth chapter the blessed effects connected with a state of justification, especially peace with God, access to the throne of grace, hope of glory, ability for all trials, deliverance from wrath, joy in God, eternal salvation and reign in glory through the Lord Jesus Christ. But now, as free grace in the justification of a sinner might be supposed to set aside the necessity of obedience to God, the apostle proceeds in the sixth and seventh chapters to prove, that so far from this being the case, his

ROME FROM ST. NICHOLAS. [ROMANS, i.]—The Church of San Nicola di Tolentine stands in the grounds of the villa Massimo Rignano, the site of the famous gardens of Sallust. After the death of Sallust this place was purchased for the Emperor, and was a favorite place of abode with Aurelian. The view of Rome we have in the above picture is modern. And one thing is to be remembered in looking at modern Rome, that, while it is a splendidly built city, it does not begin to compare with the magnificent Rome of the Cæsars St. Paul saw. So strong and massive was the Rome of Nero that many parts of it have defied all the changes of time, and stand out as the most splendid structures to be found in the modern city. One never tires of looking over Rome from the tops of her hills. There is infinite interest about the city.

doctrine establishes the only sufficient grounds of a cheerful, loving, and holy obedience. This foundation is union with the Redeemer, through that faith by which the believer is justified. Whereas the law, instead of sanctifying, operates by its restraints to stimulate the corruptions of the human heart, and rouses them into action; while, at the same time, it condemns all who are under it. But, through their union with Christ, believers are delivered from the law; and being under grace, which produces love, they are enabled to bring forth fruit acceptable to God. The law, however, is holy, just, and good, and is employed by the Spirit of God to discover the nature and extent of sin in the heart, and thereby to demonstrate the value of the remedy by which this disease is to be healed. As a general conclusion, the believer's entire freedom from condemnation, through union with his glorious Head, and his consequent sanctification, are both asserted in the eighth chapter,—effects, neither of which could ever have been accomplished by the law. The doctrine of God's sovereignty occupies the greater part of the ninth chapter; in the end of which, and throughout the tenth, the error of the Jews in seeking righteousness by the law, and refusing the righteousness which is by faith, is clearly exhibited. After which he propounds the freeness of salvation through the Redeemer, and the certainty that all who accept it shall be saved. And since faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God, the necessity of preaching the gospel to the Gentiles is inferred and asserted. In the eleventh chapter the doctrine of election is resumed, and affirmed to be wholly of grace. Upon which is founded a most consolatory view of the issue of the present dispensation, in the final ingathering of the Jews with the fulness of the Gentile nations. He then proceeds to vindicate the providence of God, both toward Jews and Gentiles; showing that God was acting upon a plan which would finally issue in the fullest manifestations of the divine attributes of wisdom, justice, and mercy. While, as it were, lost in the height and depth, and length and breadth of his subject, the apostle prostrates himself in humble adoration, and summons all to join him in ascribing the glory of salvation to God alone! As the natural result of correct views of God's providence and grace, the apostle, in the twelfth chapter, proceeds to inculcate the moral duties of the Christian life. These he founds on the mercies of God through Jesus Christ, and sums up in two points,—the body for a sacrifice, the spirit for renewal. And here it may be proper to observe that, as in the visible world, we infer that nothing short of divine wisdom and power could have produced the heavens, Ps. 19. 1, so nothing short of divine inspiration could have produced the morality of the Scriptures. The whole array of philosophers can produce no such gem of morality as the twelfth chapter of this epistle. So many ideas in so few words are nowhere, unless in Scripture, again to be found. Paul was either the prince of all philosophers, or he was inspired. Philosophers will not acknowledge the first point; in denying it, however, they establish the second. He was inspired; and the superiority of his moral system to all that unassisted reason could produce, or human depravity tolerate, furnishes an internal evidence to the fact that infidelity, if it could reason, could neither gainsay nor resist. In the thirteenth chapter the apostle proceeds to inculcate the political relations and duties of Christians. They are subjects of a kingdom which is 'not of this world,' and lest they should conclude that they are, therefore, not also subject to the kingdoms which are 'of this world,' he inculcates obedience, in things lawful before God, to 'the powers that be,' without any distinction whatsoever as to mere forms of government. In the fourteenth, and to the thirteenth verse of the fifteenth chapter, he inculcates the duty of mutual forbearance among Christians, in relation to things indifferent; such as observance of days, with abstinence from, or use of, certain meats. These were subjects of keen and irritating discussion in the days of the apostle, though the questions concerning them may now, for a time, have gone to rest; but other things equally indifferent may arise, and have arisen, to occupy their room, and the doctrine of forbearance inculcated by the apostle may still find ample room for its patient and charitable exercise. In the succeeding portion of the fifteenth chapter he offers up earnest prayer for the believers at Rome, recounts his apostolic labours, and declares his purpose and hope of visiting them in due time. And in chapter sixteenth, he concludes with sundry personal notices, with salutary warnings against divisions, and earnest commendations to the grace of God. C.

We have internal evidence both of the date of this epistle, and of the place where it was written. In ch. 15. 25 Paul says, 'But now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.' From 1 Co. 16. 1 we learn that the contribution to which he refers was given by the church at Corinth; and from Ac. 24. 17 we learn that Paul with others went from Corinth to Jerusalem, bearing the offerings. In ch. 16. 1 Paul mentions Cenchrea, the port of Corinth. In ver. 23 of the same chapter he mentions Gaius, his host, who was a native of Corinth, 1 Co. 1. 14, and Erastus, 'the chamberlain of the city.' It appears, therefore, that the epistle was written from Corinth, when Paul was about to leave that city for Jerusalem, in the spring of A.D. 58. P.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1. I, Paul, who was formerly a bitter enemy of Christianity, and a furious persecutor of its professors, being now graciously honoured to be an obedient and devoted servant of Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of sinful men; converted by his wonderful grace; and by his immediate authority, since his exaltation to heaven, appointed one of his distinguished messengers for founding his gospel church, particularly among the Gentiles; and, in consequence of God's choice of me in his divine wisdom, separated and furnished by him;—and by my own voluntary act devoted to publish his intimations of his mind and will concerning the free, the rich, and eternal salvation of Jews and Gentiles through Christ. 2. And which especially reveal, hold forth, and offer to men, Jesus Christ, his eternal and only begotten Son, and our only anointed Saviour, and Lord of our faith, worship, and obedience, who, with respect to his human nature or fleshly descent, is, according to the promises, sprung from David, the renowned favourite of God and king of Israel. 4. And as to his divine, absolutely spiritual, and infinitely holy nature, is constantly avowed, openly proclaimed, and convincingly demonstrated, to be the only begotten Son of God, by the resurrection of his dead body through his own power, and the power of the Holy Ghost, to a glorious state of immortality. 5. Through whose merits and intercession, and by whose free gift, I and others have been graciously enriched with special communications of divine favour, saving graces, and ministerial gifts, and honoured with an apostolic office, that, through our labours, multitudes of all nations, Gentiles as well as Jews, might be made obediently to give up their understandings, consciences, and wills to the authority of God, in believing on and receiving his Son, and spiritually and holily

7 This expression seems, as Afford says, to be suggested and called forth by the mention of Rome. Among which highly favoured multitude, ye, who dwell in the chief city of the Gentile world, have, by the grace and power of Christ, been called even to the knowledge, faith, and fellowship of the gospel.) 7. To you therefore, as objects of my particular care, as the apostle of the Gentiles, and as manifested, by the effects of the gospel upon you, to be objects of God's special love, and not only reputed to be, but by your divine calling rendered holy in your qualities, tempers, and conversation, I, in an earnest and affectionate manner, wish, and authoritatively declare, that the riches of divine grace shall abound, and be delightfully manifested, in your receiving freely and extensively all manner of peace, prosperity, and blessings, from God, as our living God and Father, as the original spring and designer of them; and from the Lord Jesus Christ, as the only Mediator, who secured them by his blood, and conveys them by his Spirit. 8. As what I hear of the work of God among you is great matter of gladness to my soul, though a stranger to you, I cannot forbear offering up the most hearty praises and thanksgivings on your behalf to your and my gracious God, through Jesus Christ as our only Mediator, that your ready reception of the gospel, and your remarkable faith in Christ, manifested by the good fruits of it, notwithstanding the manifold temptations and great opposition you meet with, are spoken of with religious wonder and joy, and with high commendations, among all the churches in the Roman empire. 9. And I can solemnly appeal to that all-seeing and heart-searching God, whom I serve, not in mere outward appearance, or with bodily labours, but, as renewed by his grace, sincerely, affectionately, faithfully, and with full bent of my heart, in publishing, maintaining, recommending, and enforcing the glorious gospel of salvation, of which his Son is the subject and author—that, in my stated and occasional addresses to him, in a particular manner, I plead that may ye be more and more abundantly filled with all the gifts and graces of his Spirit. 10. And I often entreat that, if it be for his own glory and your spiritual advantage, he would by his providence remove all hindrances out of the way, and give me a safe and favourable opportunity of coming to and personally conversing with you; 11. That, by his blessing upon my instructions, some of you may be furnished with ministerial gifts, and all of you confirmed in the doctrines of the gospel and in your most holy faith, in opposition to all the temptations which you meet with from Satan, seducers, or persecutors; 12. That you and I may rejoice together in the love of God manifested toward us, and in affectionately expressing our mutual love to each other; and may be delightfully satisfied in comparing our spiritual experiences, which manifest the same faith wrought by God in both you and me.— 13. Now, my dear brethren in Christ, think not these words are mere compliment, or only expressive of a present blaze of affection; for I have long and often seriously intended and endeavoured to visit you, in order that among you, as well as among other Gentiles, I might be useful in the conversion and edification of many souls; but I have been hitherto hindered by opposition, hardships, or necessary services in other places. 14. For, having freely received my apostolic office and qualifications for it, I look on myself obliged, in point of duty and gratitude, to improve them, as the Lord shall enable me, for the spiritual advantage of my fellow-sinners of mankind, Jews or Gentiles, polite or rude, learned or unlearned, sagacious or stupid. 15. And gladly would I hazard my reputation, ease, or even my life, to preach to you at Rome the blessed tidings of salvation through Jesus Christ, in the face of all possible opposition, contempt, and danger, as I have already done at Antioch, Philippi, Thessalonica, Athens, and Corinth. 16. For however great men or others may contain and set themselves against the gospel, on account of the debasement of its author and principal subject, and of the meanness of such as profess it; or of the artless dress or sublimity of its doctrines, and their contrariety to their own lusts and prejudices; and however they may reproach and ridicule me for espousing and publishing it, I account it my highest honour to avow, preach, and defend it as an illustrious scheme, in which the glory of all the divine perfections is brightly displayed; and which God, by spiritual application of it to men's hearts, renders powerful for their conversion and eternal salvation, be of what nation or rank they will. 17. For in it the transcendently excellent obedience and sufferings of the Son of God in our nature, which God appointed, provided, approves, accepts, gladly for sinful men, for their full and complete justification to eternal life, is clearly revealed, exhibited, and offered, on the ground of God's faithful testimony, to be received by a living active faith, whether weak or strong, or among Jews or Gentiles. And thus, as the prophet Habakkuk hinted, men become righteous, and live for ever, not by their own good works, but by believing in and receiving Christ.— 18. And indeed it is impossible for either Jews or Gentiles to obtain pardon or justification by any other method; for, to begin with the Gentiles, though God has not favoured them with his inspired oracles, he has, in the awful events of his providence, and by the inward convictions of their consciences, warned them that his just and holy nature determines him to punish all their iniquity, whether immediately against himself or against their fellow-creatures; especially as they wickedly and unrighteously stifle, confine, and suppress whatever notions of right and wrong they have, and will not act according to them. 19, 20. For by the light of reason in their souls, and the works of creation and providence thereby discerned, God has given them such plain manifestations of his infinite perfections, absolute eternity, almighty power, supreme dominion, unbounded wisdom, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth, as renders their contempt of him, and rebellion against him, altogether inexcusable. 21, 22. For when they could not but have some discernment of his being and attributes, they neither conceived of him, nor worshipped him answerably thereto, nor were thankful for the knowledge which they had, or the benefits which they received, but indulged their own groundless and pernicious fancies concerning his nature and the worship due to him, till, through the depravity of their wills and affections, their inconsiderate minds became infatuated with ignorance and error; so that they, and especially their Greek philosophers, amidst the highest pretences to uncommon learning and wisdom, became really stupid and senseless in everything pertaining to God and his service. 23. And under the influence of this wilful blindness and depravity of their minds, they debased his honour, in ascribing godhead to the most mutable, perishing, and contemptible creatures, and in representing him by such creatures, as if he had been of the same corporeal and contemptible form. 24–27. To punish their thus setting up false objects of worship, and representing him in so unjust, false, and shameless a manner, and regarding and worshipping the basest of creatures more than himself, God, their infinitely glorious and blessed Creator, Preserver, and Governor, in his righteous judgment, withdrew his abused light and restraints, left them to themselves, and gave them up to their own vicious inclinations, which hurried them, both men and women, into such shocking, lustful, disgraceful, and unnatural abuse of their bodies, as cannot be thought of or mentioned without shame and horror. 28. And because, out of mere enmity against God, they refused to retain, cultivate, or improve what just notions of him they had, or to search after the knowledge of or fellowship with him, he, in righteous judgment, delivered them up as persons disapproved and rejected, to their own careless, undiscerning, and disaffected mind, till, under its darkening and malignant influence, they committed the most unnatural, injurious, dishonourable, and detestable enormities. 29. Inwardly filled with the most wicked and abominable inclinations, they abounded in every sinful practice; they abandoned themselves to every form of uncleanness, fornication, adultery, incest, and unnatural lust; to a base and devilish malignity of temper, doing mischief for mischief's sake; to an eager and insatiable desire after earthly enjoyments; and, together with an inclination to, and doing of, injuries out of mere malice, they no less abandoned themselves to an envious grudging and repining at the welfare or prosperity of others; to an unjust, wilful, illegal, malicious, or wanton destroying of men's lives; to strifes, contentions, and quarrellings; to overreach, defraud, and impose on their neighbours by subtle contrivances and falsehoods; to a habitual practice and custom of doing evil to all around them; and to defame others by sly and artful methods, or under pretences of pity and friendship; 30. Or openly to slander them behind their backs, or while they could not vindicate themselves.— They were also stated and open enemies to the authority, justice, holiness, laws, and government of God, as contrary to their beloved vices; and revilers of men, or outrageous, insolent, or vexatious in their words and deeds towards them. Puffed up with a conceit of their own attainments and enjoyments, they vainly pretended to more than they really had. Not contented with common methods of sinning, they industriously contrived new forms of wickedness; and behaved perversely, disrespectfully, and undutifully to their parents, paying no regard to their authority, counsels, warnings, or commands. 31. Amidst all their skill in doing evil, they behaved like persons destitute of common sense, reason, or conscience, in everything religious or moral. They were so perfidious that no promises, contracts, oaths, or engagements, to God or men, could hold them; they had quite defaced or extirpated the common sentiments of humanity towards their fellow-creatures, parents or children. If once offended, they could never be reconciled on the most reasonable terms. And instead of pitying and relieving the miserable, they delighted in cruelty and oppression. 32. And what exceedingly aggravates their complicated and atrocious wickedness, is, that though the light of nature, their own consciences, and the dictates of their philosophers, teach them that such vices expose them to the just disfavour of God, they not only continue and abound in the practice thereof, but even encourage, abet, and delight in such as dare to be as wicked as themselves.

Ver. 1. Separated. Selected and appointed, Ac. 13. 2; Ga. 1. 15. Separated from Judaism as taught by the Pharisees; from his dearest kindred, who now held him an apostate; from the world, with all its pleasures, hopes, and honours; and set apart to the propagation of 'the truth as it is in Jesus.' C.

Ver. 4. The Spirit of holiness. Not the Holy Spirit, but the Divine Spirit; or, in other words, the divine nature of our Lord, which is here placed in contrast to 'the flesh.' In his human nature he was Son of David; in his divine nature he was Son of God; and he was shown—proved to be 'the Son of God with power,' by the fact that he rose from the dead. He laid down his life and took it again, and thereby manifested his divinity. P.

Ver. 5. 'We have received.' Paul speaks of himself only, as in 1 Th. 2. 17, 18, using the plural—a practice not uncommon with writers.—For obedience, &c. 'In order to produce, or bring about, obedience to the faith among all nations.' This was the grand object of his apostolic calling and mission. P.

Ver. 17. Righteousness of God. The word here translated 'righteousness' is the same as in ch. 3. 21, 22; 4. 3, 6, 9, 11, 13; 5. 17; 10. 3, 4, 5, 6, &c., and may be translated either 'justice' or 'righteousness.' When the subject relates to administration of the law, it must be translated 'justice'; when it implies obedience to the law, 'righteousness.' The phrase 'righteousness of God' forms the key to Paul's epistles—indeed to the whole gospel. Wherefore, the following definitions are selected, as presenting a brief review of the minds of several distinguished expositors, ancient and modern:—'God's attribute of justice' (Origen). 'The divine clemency' (Chrysostom). 'The justice or rectitude of the divine nature—a system of morality—a pure scheme of morality,

18 For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold<sup>9</sup> the truth in unrighteousness;<sup>1</sup>

19 Because<sup>p</sup> that which may be known of God is manifest in<sup>2</sup> them; for God hath showed it unto them.

20 For<sup>r</sup> the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are<sup>3</sup> without<sup>s</sup> excuse.

24 Wherefore<sup>9</sup> God also gave them up<sup>4</sup> to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonour their own bodies between themselves:

25 Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more<sup>5</sup> than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.

26 For this cause<sup>b</sup> God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature:

27 And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet.

28 And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind,<sup>7</sup> to do those things which are not convenient;

29 Being<sup>d</sup> filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, truly of God' (Campbell). 'A righteousness belonging to faith, and not that conveyed and received by faith. Because God has enjoined faith as the righteousness he will count to sinners, and will accept and reward it as righteousness' (Macknight). 'God's method of justification' (Newcome). 'God's method of constituting men righteous, though in fact they are criminal, and obnoxious to punishment' (R. Watson). 'Not the essential righteousness of God's nature, but the manner of becoming righteous which God has appointed and exhibited in the gospel—the method which God has contrived and proposed for becoming righteous, by believing his testimony, and casting ourselves on his mercy' (Doddridge). Now, it is of the highest importance that every Christian should be aware of the insufficiency of these several definitions, but especially of the two latter, because they constitute the staple of a large amount of popular theology, and the doctrine which they would eventually overturn is that by which, as Luther truly declared, the church of God must either stand or fall. And surely it will be admitted that if such arbitrary modes of definition were followed out with other words and phrases, the Scriptures would be deprived of all certain meaning. For if 'the righteousness of God' do not mean simply his 'righteousness,' but merely 'a manner or method in which he renders believers righteous,' then the love, the mercy, the grace, the truth, the justice of God, do not mean those very attributes as essential to God, but so many methods or manners of their exercise. In fact, such arbitrary definition outrages the first principle of all interpretation, which ever must be, to search out the meaning of words or phrases, not in the judgment of the expositor, but in the use and wont of the author. Accordingly the phrase 'righteousness of God,' if thus sought, by comparing Ro. 1. 17 with 5. 19, will be found to mean—the obedience of one, by which 'many are made righteous;' that righteousness or obedience to the law, taken in its requirements and penalty, which has been yielded to it by our Lord Jesus Christ. This is indeed 'the righteousness of God,' for it has been provided of God (He. 5. 10; Job 33. 24; Mat. 20. 28), and, from first to last, has been effected by his Son, who is 'the mighty God, the Father of eternity' (Haldane)—'God manifest in the flesh,' who being, as the incarnate Word (Jn. 1. 1, 14), 'made under the law' (Ga. 4. 4), 'became obedient unto death' (Phi. 2. 8)—death, the penalty of a broken law, inclusive; and thus 'brought in an everlasting righteousness' (Da. 9. 24), which is 'unto all (as a gift, Ro. 3. 22; 5. 17), and upon all (as a garment (Is. 61. 10) who believe' in his name for justification of life. C.

Ver. 23. The apostle justly represents idolatry as the root of all abominable immoralities; indeed the heathen deities ever have been at once the examples and patrons of licentiousness. See ver. 28. C.

Ver. 28. A reprobate mind. A mind judicially condemned to be given up to itself, and, consequently, blinded by its own imaginations, and hardened by its own habits. C.

Ver. 30. Inventors of evil things. Such as the 'inventors' of the orgies of Bacchus, the horrors of the arena, the mysteries of Ceres, in ancient times; with the debasing cruelties of the cockpit, the abominations of the theatre, the ruinous fascinations of the gaming-table, and such like, among the moderns. C.

Ver. 31. Without understanding. He does not deny them high intellectual cultivation and acquirement, for that they possessed, as their arts, sciences, and literature will witness; but he pronounces them 'stupid' concerning God, the knowledge of whom is the only genuine wisdom. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What a great, a full, a suitable Saviour is God in our nature! For the only begotten Son of God is clearly manifested in our promised, our risen Redeemer. And blessings of grace and glory proceed from him equally as from his Father. How ancient, how excellent, is that gospel which exhibits him and his fulness to us sinful men! While he is its author and subject, its great design is to bring both Jews and Gentiles everywhere to faith in and obedience to him. Therein his grace, as our hope, is revealed and bestowed, and thereby men are led to Jesus Christ. And marvellous is their honour, and great their happiness, who share its saving effects. It is delightful and edifying to hear of the remarkable grace and holiness of others, and for Christians to communicate their spiritual experiences one to another. Inexpressible is the honour to be divinely called, qualified, diligent, and successful ministers of Christ. And indispensable is their obligation to a faithful, bold, and laborious preaching of the gospel. Nor ought any opposition or contempt from men to render them ashamed of their work. God's existence and perfections are manifestly marked in his works all around and in us. And inexcusable then is our rebellion against him, or stifling the natural intimations which he has given us of himself. But, alas! what monsters men become when left to themselves, and abandoned to their own hearts' lusts! There is nothing too absurd for them to intend, or too idolatrous, brutish, unnatural, or shocking for them to practise. And diabolical is their temper who can take pleasure in wickedness for itself.—Great is the mercy to have the wickedness of our heart restrained, and especially to have it subdued by God's grace. And surely it is impossible for men to whom such wickedness is natural to be justified by their own works, or by anything less than a living and active faith in Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. Since then God has given to all men knowledge sufficient to render them inexcusable if they abandon themselves to wickedness, ye Jews, and all who are disposed to censure others, must be still more inexcusable and incapable of being justified by your own works; for your censuring and condemning their faults is a practical condemnation of yourselves, who, notwithstanding your greater light, knowledge, and conviction, do the same things, or worse. 2. But from what we know of God's infinite holiness, equity, wisdom, and goodness, we are certain that all his threatenings, condemnations, or punishments which he will execute upon such, be of what nation, character, or rank they will, are exactly right and just, and according to the declarations which he has made, and answerable to the true state of things and eternal rule of righteousness. 3. Dare then any one of you who are endued with common sense and reason, and altogether dependent on and accountable to God for all your thoughts, words, and deeds, absurdly and injuriously imagine that you shall escape his just condemnation and wrath, when ye are so forward and dogmatical in arraigning and condemning others for crimes in which ye indulge yourselves? 4. Or, are ye so sordidly ungrateful as to slight, abuse, or pervert, not only the common bounties of his providence, but even his distinguished favours, marvellous patience, and long-suffering, as encouragements to wickedness; never seriously considering that the obligation, tendency, and design of his multiplied favours, is to overcome your obstinacy, and to make you, with grief and hatred of your sins, turn from them to God in Christ? 5. But according to the natural and wilfully contracted stubbornness and insensibility of your perverse hearts, are, by your persistence in unbelief and other wickedness, secretly preparing for yourselves the most fearful condemnation and punishment, to be inflicted in that great and terrible day of the last judgment. 6. For then God will impartially assign and distribute rewards and punishments to all mankind, Jews or Gentiles, small or great, not according to their fallible, mistaken, censorious, or self-flattering judgment, but according and in proportion to the good or evil nature or degree of every one's works. 7, 10. Bestowing immortal glory and honour, sweet harmony and delight, and perfection of blessedness in every form upon such, whether Jews or Gentiles, as, from a principle of faith in and love to Christ, have patiently persevered in good works, and earnestly sought after be adjudged according to their knowledge; but they heaping the most dreadful and tormenting, but just, punishments upon such as contentiously quarrel with his doctrines, laws, and providential dispensations; and instead of believing and practising what he has revealed to them, give up themselves willingly to a course of unbelief, hatred of him, and other like conduct. 11. For in passing the final decision, and distributing rewards and punishments in the last judgment, he will exactly and impartially proceed according to his own unerring knowledge and righteous rule of judgment, regarding none for their outward circumstances, privileges, professions, or pretences, and disregarding none for that ignorance or wickedness of which they have sincerely repented. 12. The Gentiles, who have sinned merely against the light of nature, without having the benefit of revelation to instruct and reform them, shall these great blessings of his kingdom. 8, 9. And who have contemned and rebelled against the clear light of revelation, and have refused Christ and his

CHAPTER II.

1 They that sin, though they condemn it in others, cannot excuse themselves, 6 and much less escape the judgment of God, 9 whether they be Jews or Gentiles. 14 The Gentiles cannot escape, 17 nor yet the Jews, 25 whom their circumcision shall not profit, if they keep not the law.

—C. f A law by which they will be judged—not by which they can be justified. For every law, whether revealed or natural, is a law of condemnation, because every law has been broken.—C.

9 Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, <sup>k</sup>of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile;<sup>3</sup>

10 But<sup>l</sup> glory, honour, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile:<sup>3</sup>

11 For <sup>m</sup>there is no respect of persons with God.

12 For<sup>o</sup> as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law;

13 (For <sup>p</sup>not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law<sup>4</sup> shall be justified:

14 For when the Gentiles, <sup>q</sup>which have not the law, <sup>r</sup>do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves.<sup>5</sup>

16 In the day when <sup>u</sup>God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to <sup>v</sup>my gospel.<sup>9</sup>

17 Behold, <sup>w</sup>thou art called a Jew, and <sup>x</sup>restest in the law, and makest thy boast of God,

18 And<sup>y</sup> knowest his will, and approvest the things that are more excellent,<sup>1</sup> being instructed out of the law;

19 And<sup>z</sup> art confident that thou thyself art a guide of the blind, a light of them which are in darkness,

20 An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, which hast <sup>aa</sup>the form of knowledge and of the truth in the law:

21 Thou<sup>b</sup> therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?

22 Thou<sup>c</sup> that sayest a man should not com-salvation, shall, in proportion to the heinous nature of their crimes, come to deeper despair because having more light. 16. In that great and awful day, in which God will exactly search out not only the open acts, professions, and pretences, but even the most secret thoughts, dispositions, principles, motives, and ends of all mankind; and pass decisive, irreversible, and eternally-effective sentences upon them, by Jesus Christ his Son, and our Mediator, as is plainly declared and testified in that gospel which I preach by his revelation and appointment. 13. Since then it is not men's having or hearing the revealed law, or their perfect fulfilment of all its demands, that can justify any on that occasion, the Jews, however they boast of their own righteousness, will need an infinitely better. 14, 15. And the Gentiles, though not privileged with the revealed oracles of God, manifest, by the small remains or semblances of morality in their practice, that the law of nature, with respect to some general notions of good and evil, truth and falsehood, right and wrong, remains written in their natural rationality, and their consciences accuse, check, and reproach them when they act contrary thereto, and acquit or excuse them when they do well in any respect—a sure token that they also must have a better righteousness than their own to justify them before God.—17-20. Ye Jews pride yourselves in being the descendants of Abraham, and the professed people of God, and in having his oracles and ordinances, as if these could justify you before him. Ye boast of your profession of the true God, and his peculiar covenant relation to your people, as if these could secure you from his wrath, and entitle you to all the blessings of time and eternity. Ye pretend to understand the revelations which God has given you, and to be expert in distinguishing truth from error, and right from wrong, and to be fully acquainted with and firmly attached to the most excellent points of religion taught you by the law of Moses. In your attempts to convert the Gentiles to your religion, ye assume high-sounding titles, and presumptuously looking on them as poor, foolish, stupid, and ignorant wretches, ye pretend to be distinguished leaders, enlighteners, and masterly instructors, while ye have nothing but a merely apparent or notional knowledge of God and his laws, without any answerable practice. 21-24. Think therefore, for your conviction of the insufficiency of your own righteousness, how shamefully and inexcusably your practice contradicts your pretensions to knowledge and your instruction of others. While, according to the law, ye declaim against fraud and dishonesty in the Gentiles, ye indulge yourselves therein; while ye loudly inveigh against adultery in them, ye commit it yourselves; while ye profess a high detestation of heathenish idolatry, which ye have especially done since your return from Babylon, ye indulge yourselves in sacrilegiously robbing God of his offerings, obedience, and worship, and pretend to fulfil his law by hypocritical and imperfect performances; while ye boast of your knowledge of God's law, as your distinguished privilege, high honour, and infallible security for eternal life, ye dishonour his authority and holiness by your manifest and voluntary violations of his law.—For your notorious wickedness, committed in plain contradiction to your laws, professions, and privileges, brings a reproach on his perfections and government, word and ways, and tempts the very heathens to think or speak of him as if he allowed, encouraged, or connived at it, or could not hinder it among his own favourite people. 25-27. And with respect to circumcision, in which ye chiefly glory, and on which ye depend as your security for eternal happiness, it will indeed effectually seal and confirm God's covenant with you, if your natures be truly renewed, and ye sincerely study holiness of life, proceeding from union to and fellowship with Christ; but if ye live in your sins, your circumcision will render you no more acceptable to God than if ye were heathens. And if Gentiles, being renewed in their hearts, sincerely observe the law, they will be as highly valued by God as if they had been Jews, and will rise up in judgment against and condemn you, who, depending on your having the letter of the divine law, and being outwardly circumcised, presume to violate the obligations of the moral law. 28, 29. For it is not natural descent mit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?<sup>22</sup>

23 Thou<sup>a</sup> that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law<sup>3</sup> dishonourest thou God?

24 For<sup>e</sup> the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.

25 For<sup>o</sup> circumcision verily profiteth, if thou keep the law: but if thou be a breaker of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision.

26 Therefore<sup>h</sup> if the uncircumcision keep the righteousness of the law, shall not his uncircumcision be counted for circumcision?

27 And shall not uncircumcision which is by nature, if it fulfil the law, 'judge thee, who by the letter and circumcision dost transgress the law?

28 For<sup>k</sup> he is not a Jew which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh:

29 But<sup>l</sup> he is a Jew which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, 'in the spirit, and not in the letter; 'whose praise is not of men, but of God.

CHAPTER III.

1 The Jews' prerogative: 3 which they have not lost: 9 howbeit the law convinceth them also of sin: 20 therefore no flesh is justified by the law, 28 but all, without difference, by faith only: 31 and yet the law is not abolished.

WHAT advantage<sup>a</sup> then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision?

from Abraham, nor external covenant relation to God, nor profession of his truths, that will make a true child of Abraham; nor, in God's reckoning, is that external circumcision available to any saving purpose, which is only a mark of distinction imprinted on the body. But he is a true Israelite, one of Abraham's spiritual and believing seed, and an heir according to the promise, who, whether he be Jew or Gentile, is regenerated and sanctified in his inward nature, tempers, and disposition, and turned to God through Christ; and that is true circumcision, highly acceptable, not to carnal men, but to an all-seeing God, which consists not in any external cutting of the flesh, but in the renewing of the mind by the Holy Ghost, and purifying of the heart by faith in Christ.

Ver. 4. Goodness. The mercies so freely extended to the Jews, in their calling, deliverance, preservation, institutions, and settlement, De. 7. 7. C.

Ver. 7. This verse describes the principle of divine judgment; but to the character described no one has ever attained, save 'Jesus Christ the righteous.' Even he who, at least in his own opinion, came up to the full requirement of the law, received this for answer—'one thing thou lackest,' Mar. 10. 21. But who will dare to say, 'I lack nothing?' C.

Ver. 12. Without law—that is, without an audible or visible law.—Shall perish. Shall be condemned, not by a law which speaks from God, but by nature, ver. 14, or an appeal to themselves. As they have felt, desired, and judged in their own case, condemning those who injured them, so shall they be judged and condemned of God, where they have offended him. C.

Ver. 17-20. In these verses the apostle enumerates the advantages of the Jews. (1) They are called Jews, which, though now a name of contempt, yet contains within it the most glorious recollections and anticipations, both spiritual and temporal. (2) Having received the law in all its ordinances. (3) Having Jehovah for their God. (4) Knowing his will. (5) Discerning the superiority of right over wrong. (6) And that by means of a scriptural education, ver. 18, 'being instructed (catechised) out of the law.' (7) In being guides, lights, instructors, teachers. (8) In possessing the form or model of knowledge and truth into which they might mould themselves and their pupils. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is base and criminal to condemn sin in others while we indulge it in ourselves; or to continue workers of iniquity under high professions of godliness. And desperate is their condition who harden themselves in sin from the mercies of God apprehended or experienced. Certain and awfully exact is the future judgment of men by Jesus Christ. And correspond<sup>ent</sup> to their qualities and works shall be the eternal punishments or gracious rewards of men. All the means of illumination and grace which they have received will come into the account. And very unavailing is it, nay, dangerous, to have external privileges, extensive knowledge, and an orthodox profession, without real holiness in heart and life. None give a deeper stab to the cause and honour of God than they who sin against the light, and prove false to their profession.—What a rare, a hard, an inward work is real Christianity! Highly is it esteemed by God, who alone knows its worth, or can immediately discern its existence. And it is infinitely dangerous to rest in anything short of Jesus Christ and his sacrifice, as the only ground of our salvation.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1, 2. Nevertheless, the Jewish descendants of Abraham, who have been marked as the peculiar people of God by circumcision, have thereby their distinguished advantages; chiefly that God, as eminently present with them, has given them various types, promises, and predictions of the Messiah, and salvation through him, and granted them his inspired oracles, for their spiritual instruction and ground of faith and hope. 3. And though many of them have not believed in Christ the promised Messiah, or the gospel revelation of him, their ungrateful infidelity cannot defeat God's faithful accomplishment of his promises to Abraham and his spiritual seed. 4. Nay, though all men should prove liars and deceivers, God will always appear just and faithful; and men's rebellion against his law, and presumptuous arraignment of his conduct, will, in the issue, tend to vindicate and clearly manifest his equity and faithfulness. 5, 6. But let not carnal Jews imagine that he, the righteous Judge of the world, cannot justly punish their wickedness and unbelief in rejecting the promised Messiah, and his righteousness and salvation, since, by his overruling providence, he makes use of it as a foil to set off, enhance, and give opportunity for brighter displays of his glory. 7, 8. Let them not imagine that, if God make their unbelief, which is so contrary to his truth and to their own profession, a mean of the spread and success of the gospel, they, as some blasphemously charge us apostles and Christians with saying, may abandon themselves to their own lusts, and practise all manner of wickedness, that he may thereby take occasion to glorify his own faithfulness and infinite grace. Nothing can be more detestable, or more justly damnable, than such conduct. 9. But whatever peculiar privileges we Jews possess, we are no more able to justify ourselves before God by our own works than the worst of heathens; nay, our sins are the more aggravated, as being committed against greater light and mercies, means and obligations. And it has already been proved, by notorious facts, that both Jews and Gentiles are in themselves chargeable with, and condemned on account of, their sins before God. 10-12. And this the oracles of God, which were given to and immediately respected us Jews, harmoniously attest, representing all men in general as sinful in their nature and practice, ignorant of themselves and of God, the method of salvation, and every other spiritual object; as careless of all knowledge of and fellowship with God, and neglecters of his worship and service; as apostates from God and his Christ, his law, and everything good; and as altogether vile and useless before God; unfit and unable of themselves to do anything truly and spiritually good. 13-15. Their heart being wholly defiled with sin, all their members are ready instruments of unrighteousness. Their mouths, wherewith they ought to glorify God and edify one another, they employ to vent the most offensive, loathsome, and injurious language, flattery, falsehood, deceit, malignant slander and reproach, or even hideous oaths and curses, and bitter provocations and revilings. Their feet, which should carry them to every good work, they employ in running about to perpetrate mischief and murder. 16-18. By these means they bring calamities and destruction, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, on themselves, and all they are connected with; they are utter strangers to the true method of peace with God or their own consciences, and of promoting solid tranquillity and friendship among men; they have no serious sense or holy reverence of God's perfections or their own accountableness to him; no fear of offending him; no principle of real religion to direct their views, restrain them from evil, or influence them to good. 19. Now, whatever charges the law of God, manifested in the light of nature or revelation, lays against men, must be extended to all that are under that law, that every man be convinced in his own conscience that his works are not excusable, far less justifying, before God; and that he is chargeable with many crimes, and legally obnoxious to his righteous will. 20. And if the law, by its holy and just commandments, thus charge all men with, and convince them of, sin in their dispositions, thoughts, words, and actions, it is clearly manifest that none of them, in their present state of degeneracy, can ever be justified at the awful tribunal of an all-seeing, heart-searching, just, and holy God. 21-23. Nevertheless, this deplorable state of mankind is not desperate; for in the gospel is now clearly manifested that divine righteousness, fulfilled by the Son of God in our nature, which the moral law neither provided nor exhibited, but which has been all along represented in the typical ceremonies and the writings of the Old Testament prophets, as the designed ground of the justification of sinful men; even the righteousness of our divine Redeemer, which he wrought as our Saviour, consisting in his holiness of human nature, obedience of life, and satisfactory sufferings and death, in our stead; which, being freely offered in the gospel, to all men, and by faith received by, all who will, weak or strong, Jews or Gentiles—all of them having lost his image, and being incapable of glorifying him, recommending themselves to his favour, or procuring any title to the enjoyment of him. 24-26. And all of them have their sins pardoned, their persons accepted, and are entitled to eternal life, merely by the ever gracious and tender love of God, without any desert of their own, but only on account of that infinitely valuable eternal sacrifice which Jesus Christ endured through his infinite obedience and sufferings, which is lodged in him as an inexhaustible fund of merit to be offered to them; and which God, from his love to them, accepted as their ransom, and offers to all who will, and enables them to receive through faith in his Son.—Him, in his eternal compassion and infinite love, he delightfully set apart as a fit Mediator between God and man, and has clearly manifested and exhibited in the types and predictions of the Old Testament, in his incarnation and public ministry, and in the declarations and offers of the gospel, as a propitiatory and reconciling sacrifice, on account of which every one that believes therein may have free access to God. Herein he demonstrates the glory of his own justice, and the perfection of that righteousness of Christ which he offered freely and gladly for the sins of the whole world; and through this he was honoured in pardoning the Old Testament offences before the incarnation, as well as in now pardoning the Gentiles who had long continued in their sins, and in freely justifying every one, Jew or Gentile, who, however guilty in himself, by faith receives and depends on Jesus Christ as his only Saviour. 27, 28. And as this doctrine of justification by the free grace of God, through the willing sacrifice of Christ, leaves no room for any man to boast, as if he had either in whole or in part recommended himself to the divine favour, it ought to be openly avowed, for the honour of God and humiliation of men, as a thing most plain and evident, that whatever Jew or Gentile, greater or lesser sinner, is pardoned and accepted by God, obtains this privilege merely through the sacrifice of Christ received by faith, without any dependence on his own good dispositions or works. 29, 30. And it is no less manifest, that now God is, in every saving respect, the God of the Gentiles as well as of the Jews, and that he justifies

2 Much<sup>b</sup> every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God.

3 For<sup>c</sup> what if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?

4 God forbid: yea, <sup>d</sup>let God be true, but every man a liar; as it is written, That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.

5 But<sup>e</sup> if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, <sup>f</sup>what shall we say? Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? (I speak <sup>g</sup>as a man)

6 God<sup>i</sup> forbid: for then <sup>h</sup>how shall God judge the world?

7 For<sup>k</sup> if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto his glory, why yet am I also judged as a sinner?

8 And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) <sup>l</sup>Let us do evil, that good may come? whose damnation is just.

9 What then? <sup>m</sup>are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before proved<sup>1</sup> both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin:

10 As it is written, <sup>n</sup>There is none righteous, no, not one:<sup>2</sup>

11 There<sup>p</sup> is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.

12 They<sup>q</sup> are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

13 Their<sup>r</sup> throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; <sup>s</sup>the poison of asps is under their lips:

14 Whose<sup>t</sup> mouth is full of cursing and bitterness:

15 Their<sup>u</sup> feet are swift to shed blood:

16 Destruction and misery are in their ways;

17 And the way of peace have they not known:

18 There<sup>v</sup> is no fear of God before their eyes:

19 Now<sup>w</sup> we know that what things soever

<sup>v</sup> Paul appears to have feared that the Jews might say the words he had quoted did not apply to them, but only to those who had not, and who could not therefore keep the law (by the law is here meant the whole of the Old Testament). He meets the objection in this verse by showing that the words must apply to the Jews, inasmuch as they are found in the Jewish Scriptures. In fact he states that they are of universal application.—P.

<sup>c</sup> Not 'our father according to the flesh,' but 'what advantage or means of justification' shall we say Abraham our father hath found pertaining to (resulting from) the flesh? That is, from circumcision or sacrifice. For, if he, the father, were not justified by these fleshly ordinances, how much less shall his children be justified by them?—C.

the law saith, <sup>it</sup> saith to them who are under the law; <sup>that</sup> every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.<sup>4</sup>

20 Therefore <sup>by</sup> the deeds of the law there shall no <sup>flesh</sup> be justified in his sight: for <sup>by</sup> the law is the knowledge of sin.

21 But now <sup>the</sup> righteousness of God without the law is manifested, <sup>being</sup> witnessed by the law and the prophets;

22 Even the righteousness of God, which is <sup>by</sup> faith of Jesus Christ <sup>unto</sup> all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference:

23 For <sup>all</sup> have sinned, and come short of the glory of God;

24 Being<sup>i</sup> justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus:

25 Whom God hath set forth<sup>5</sup> to be a propitiation <sup>through</sup> faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission<sup>6</sup> of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;

26 To declare, I say, at this time <sup>his</sup> righteousness: that <sup>he</sup> might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

27 Where<sup>n</sup> is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay: but by the <sup>law</sup> of faith.

28 Therefore we conclude that <sup>a</sup>man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.

29 Is<sup>a</sup> he the God of the Jews only? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also:

30 Seeing<sup>r</sup> it is one God which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.

31 Do<sup>s</sup> we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the <sup>law</sup>.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Abraham's faith was imputed to him for righteousness, 10 before he was circumcised. 13 By faith only he and his seed received the promise. 16 Abraham is the father of all that believe. 24 Our faith also shall be credited to us for righteousness.

WHAT shall<sup>a</sup> we then say that Abraham, our<sup>b</sup> father<sup>1</sup> as pertaining to the flesh, hath found?

men, whether circumcised or uncircumcised, upon the same sacrifice of his Son, and by the same instrumentality of faith. 31. And no less manifest is it, that our believing renunciation of our own works in the matter of justification, and receiving the glorious sacrifice of Christ as the only ground of our pardon and acceptance, are so far from invalidating or setting aside the moral law, that hereby we greatly confirm and approve its authority, regard it as a mean of conviction, present it with a complete magnifying fulfilment of all its demands as a covenant, and are tenderly influenced and enabled to love, regard, and cheerfully obey it as a rule of life.

Ver. 2. Much every way—as exhibited ch. 2. 17-20; and afterwards enlarged ch. 9. 4. 5.—Chiefly: primarily.—Oracles: words of the mouth. The Scriptures are so called to signify that they are altogether the very words which God spake, and not merely a paraphrase or meaning of what he revealed, C.

Ver. 4. Yea, let God be true, &c. 'Yea, let God be (found) true (faithful to his promise), though every man (here, every child of Abraham) be found a liar'—unfaithful to the covenant.—When thou art judged. When God is judged, his promises and faithfulness being called in question. C.

Ver. 5. I speak as a man. I object in the irreverent and cavilling language of infidels, not as adopting their principles. C.

Ver. 6. How shall he judge in righteousness, if, according to the objection, ver. 5, he himself were found unrighteous? C.

Ver. 7. 'For if the truth (faithfulness of God in his promise to Abraham and his seed) hath abounded (been extended to myriads of Gentiles) through my lie (through the unfaithfulness and disobedience of the Jews), how am I (a Jew) judged as a sinner,' seeing I have been the means of magnifying the grace of God? C.

Ver. 8. As we. The apostle here speaks in his own person, and in conjunction with the Christian church, whose doctrine of justification by faith was, and still is, equally slandered by Jews and Gentiles; and his words furnish an answer to the preceding objection of the Jew, by showing that they are the legitimate but shocking consequence of his perverse reasoning in the preceding verse.—Whose damnation is just. That is, not necessarily of our calumniators, who may ignorantly think what they say, but of those who say, 'Let us do evil that good may come.' C.

Ver. 9. Are we (the Jews) better than they? Better than the Gentiles, in virtue of our national and ecclesiastical privileges? ch. 2. 17-20. The most eminent commentators consider this a return to the question in the first verse; and Bloomfield considers it another objection. Is it not rather the conclusive appeal of the apostle himself, as if he had said, 'Are we better than they,' by a perfect improvement of our greater advantages? C.

Ver. 20. In the present fallen state of man, the law's office is not, and indeed could not be, to effect justification; its office is humbler, but still essential—it is to convince man of sin, to show him his guilt and his helplessness, and thus, as a monitor and teacher, to lead him to Jesus. P.

Ver. 27. By the law of faith. Literally, 'by law of faith,' not by a law requiring faith, as if the gospel were a law, or, as it has been called, a new law, a remedial or mitigated law. For if the gospel were in any sense a law, then faith would, in that sense, be a 'deed of law.' But 'by deeds of law shall no flesh be justified.' The meaning must therefore be sought in a form of speech common in the Scriptures—common in all languages—the antanaclasis, or allusion to a preceding word. See, for example, Jn. 1. 10; 4. 31, 32, where the word 'world' in the one, and 'meat' in the other, is changed from the literal sense in the first occurrence to the figurative in the second. So Paul calls 'faith' a law, not because it literally is so, but because law was considered by the Jews as the ground of their salvation. But if salvation were by obedience to law, whatever that law might be, boasting could not be excluded. Boasting, however, is excluded, because Jews and Gentiles have alike been found under sin. Salvation by faith, then, is the only principle that can exclude boasting; for there can be no merit in believing a testimony and trusting to another. See Glossii Philol. Sac., Amstel. 1711, p. 929; and Carson on Figurative Language, p. 80. C.

Ver. 31. We establish the law in its condemning power, ver. 19, which the Jews, in their own case, never did, and also in its utmost moral requirements, when we show that by faith we receive that perfect righteousness by which the law was fulfilled by Christ. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is an invaluable privilege to enjoy the word and ordinances of God, and yet very dangerous to rest in them. It is impossible to defeat the purposes or promises of God. The faithful shall obtain salvation, and the unfaithful fail. It is very common for ministers, especially if faithful, to be virulently reproached. And just is their eternal undoing who abuse the doctrines of grace to encourage themselves in licentiousness. How universal and fearful is the depravity of mankind! It discovers itself

2 For 'if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; but not before God.

3 For what saith the scripture? <sup>a</sup>Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness.

4 Now<sup>e</sup> to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.

5 But to him that worketh not,<sup>2</sup> but <sup>g</sup>believeth on him that justifieth <sup>h</sup>the ungodly, his faith<sup>i</sup> is counted for righteousness.

6 Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God <sup>j</sup>imputeth righteousness without works, 7 Saying, <sup>k</sup>Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.

9 Cometh<sup>l</sup> this blessedness then upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.<sup>3</sup>

10 How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? <sup>n</sup>not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised; that he might be <sup>o</sup>the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; <sup>p</sup>that righteousness might be imputed unto them also:

12 And the father of circumcision to them who<sup>q</sup> are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.

13 For<sup>r</sup> the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to brought forward in proof of the general principle the apostle has laid down in the preceding verse, that Abraham is the spiritual father of all the faithful. His seed is co-extensive with faith in God. Here again Paul shows equal tact and logical acumen. The Jew judice, withstand the power of his logic;

his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.<sup>4</sup>

14 For<sup>s</sup> if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect:

15 Because<sup>t</sup> the law worketh wrath: <sup>u</sup>for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore<sup>v</sup> it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,

17 (As it is written, <sup>w</sup>I have made thee a father of many nations,<sup>5</sup>) before him<sup>6</sup> whom he believed, even God, who <sup>x</sup>quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were.

18 Who<sup>y</sup> against hope believed in hope, that he might become <sup>z</sup>the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.

19 And being not <sup>aa</sup>weak in faith, <sup>bb</sup>he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sara's womb:

20 He <sup>cc</sup>staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

21 And being fully persuaded that what he had promised <sup>dd</sup>he was able also to perform.

22 And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.<sup>7</sup>

23 Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him:

24 But<sup>ee</sup> for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, <sup>ff</sup>if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; in unnumbered forms of thoughts, words, and actions, in things dishonourable to God, and injurious to men. The divine law makes fearful work upon men's consciences when it charges all their sins home upon them. And it is absurd to expect happiness by that law which so deeply accuses us of crimes.—But how amazing is it that Jesus' sacrifice, and salvation through it, should be prepared for, offered and given to, such monsters of guilt, Jews or Gentiles! And yet it is exactly suited to our need, fully manifested and attested in Scripture; and highly and delightfully all the perfections of God, particularly his justice and mercy, are glorified in our redemption thereby. Yea, the reign of his grace, through Jesus' glorious sacrifice received by faith, effectually humbles our pride, establishes God's relation to us, honours his law, and promotes our holiness of heart and life.

25 Who<sup>gg</sup> was delivered for our offences,<sup>8</sup> and <sup>hh</sup>was raised again for our justification.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1-3. Nay, even our natural father Abraham, notwithstanding his circumcision and remarkable piety, had no ground to glory before God, as if his own works had contributed to his justification; for the Scripture expressly declares that he believed the promise of the Messiah as the price and mean of blessing to all nations; and that what he believed concerning him was graciously placed to his account, as if he had done and suffered what the Messiah would do and suffer in his stead. 4, 5. Now, it is plain that if a man fulfil the law himself, by his own personal good works, in order to justification, his acceptance with God and eternal happiness cannot properly be by grace, but what he has a claim to as his due wages by the covenant of works; but if, conscious of his utter inability to yield any acceptable obedience to the law as a covenant, he renounces all his own works, as to their being any part of his justifying righteousness, and by faith receives what is freely given to him in the gospel promises by that gracious God who justifies sinners through faith in Christ his Son, it is certainly that which he receives by faith which must be accounted to him for righteousness. 6-8. Accordingly the Holy Ghost, by David, has declared blessed, not the men who fulfil the law in their own persons, but the sinners to whom God, because of faith in his Son which he gave as our Savior, has freely, fully, and irrevocably forgiven all their sins, and whose persons he hath graciously accepted and entitled to eternal life. 9-12. It is no less manifest also that this privilege of free justification through faith alone belongs as much to the uncircumcised Gentiles as to the circumcised Jews; for what Abraham believed on was accounted to him for righteousness, not after, but long before he was circumcised; and many years afterwards he received circumcision, in order to mark the sinful corruption of his nature, distinguish him and his seed for the peculiar people of God, bind them to act answerably to this character, and to assure him of his being already a partaker of the blessed righteousness of the Messiah, and an heir of all the promised blessings of the new kingdom—all which tended, through the infinite wisdom of God, to render him a noble pattern of faith, an eminent example of free justification through it, and a distinguished mean of conveying spiritual benefits to all true believers in after ages, whether Gentiles or Jews. 13. For the promise, that he should be the renowned chief of the believing world, Jews and Gentiles; and in the Messiah, his promised seed, be the prime heir and possessor of the blessings of this world and of that which is to come, was given to him and his spiritual seed, not through any law, natural or ceremonial, or his personal obedience to it, but through the sacrifice of Christ which is received by faith. 14, 15. And indeed, if men could become heirs of such blessings by their own personal obedience to any law, natural or revealed, the doctrine of justification by faith, and the free promise of God, must be entirely set aside; but in our present degenerate state, the law of nature and revelation condemns every man to punishment, irritates our sinful corruption to acts of wickedness, and awakens our consciences to expect the eternal wrath of God, and that because of our transgressing his commands. 16, 17. It being therefore absolutely impossible that any man can be entitled to spiritual or eternal blessings by his obedience to the law, moral or ceremonial, God has wisely as well as graciously provided that they should be bestowed merely by infinite grace, and received by faith, that so his promises might, notwithstanding all our unworthiness and sinfulness, be absolutely certain and infallibly accomplished to all the truly believing seed of Abraham, who is constituted the common pattern of faith and mean of blessing to us all, Jews or Gentiles, who believe after his example, before that almighty Object of his faith who invigorates men's bodies, or raises them when dead, or even spiritually quickens men who are dead in trespasses and sins, and

CHAPTER V.

1 Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, 2 and joy in our hope, 8 that since we were reconciled by his blood, when we were enemies, 10 we shall much more be saved being reconciled. 12 As sin and death came by Adam, 17 so much more righteousness and life by Jesus Christ. 20 Where sin abounded, grace did superabound.

THEREFORE being<sup>a</sup> justified by faith,<sup>1</sup> we<sup>b</sup> have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:

2 By<sup>c</sup> whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

3 And not only so, but we<sup>d</sup> glory in tribulations<sup>2</sup> also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience;

4 And<sup>e</sup> patience, experience; and experience, hope;

5 And<sup>f</sup> hope maketh not ashamed;<sup>3</sup> because the love of God is<sup>h</sup> shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us.

6 For<sup>i</sup> when we were yet without strength, in due time<sup>4</sup> Christ died for the ungodly.

7 For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet<sup>j</sup> peradventure for a good man<sup>5</sup> some would even dare to die.

8 But<sup>k</sup> God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

9 Much<sup>l</sup> more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.

10 For if, when we were enemies, <sup>n</sup>we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we <sup>o</sup>shall be saved by his life.<sup>6</sup>

11 And not only so, <sup>p</sup>but we also joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement.<sup>7</sup>

12 Wherefore, <sup>q</sup>as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that<sup>8</sup> all have sinned:

13 (For <sup>r</sup>until the law, sin was in the world: <sup>s</sup>but sin is not imputed when there is no law.

14 Nevertheless, <sup>t</sup>death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, <sup>u</sup>who is the figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, <sup>v</sup>so also <sup>w</sup>is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many who, being anxious to produce them, speaks of things that are not with as much distinctness and certainty as if they actually existed. 18-21. In view of which, notwithstanding all the difficulties and high improbabilities arising from the condition of his own and his wife's body, Abraham was firmly confident, without any discernible doubts or staggerings of unbelief, that God, who had promised to make him the father of many nations, would certainly exert his almighty power in performing it. 22. And his faith, thus going out towards the Messiah, and receiving and resting upon him and his righteousness, that which he received and rested upon was accounted to him as his justifying righteousness before God. 23-25. Now the inspired account of this matter is transmitted to us, not chiefly to honour Abraham, but to direct and encourage us to believe that the very same righteousness which was credited to him for his justification shall in like manner be credited to us, if we truly and cordially trust in that same almighty and gracious God who, that we might be blessed in him with all his spiritual blessings, hath raised from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ, who was, by himself and his Father, delivered up to servile obedience, sufferings, and death, to make atonement for our sins and secure our salvation, and was raised again to immortal life and glory, that he might become as our public Head and Representative, and that, in consequence hereof, we might, if we receive him, be delivered from condemnation, accepted into God's favour, and entitled to eternal life through the impartation of his sacrificial life to us in believing.

Ver. 11. That righteousness might be imputed unto them also. How can a sinner be made righteous? Paul answers, by faith in Christ. The doctrine of sacrifice being fundamental in truth, and most essential to the assurance of understanding (Col. 2. 2), faith (He. 10. 22), and hope (He. 6. 11), may be established by the three following steps of evidence:—(1) Some righteousness, whatever it may be, is imparted: see ver. 6, 11. (2) There is no human righteousness of any kind: see ch. 3. 10. (3) The only righteousness revealed in the gospel is the righteousness of God, ch. 1. 17; 4. 22-24: therefore the conclusion is inevitable that the believer is justified by faith in Christ who fulfilled the righteous law. C.

Ver. 15. For where no law is, there is no transgression. Consequently, where 'transgression' is, there must be 'law.' But Jews and Gentiles have alike been proved guilty, ch. 3. 9, 22; therefore, under law—under wrath—and so, by law, not justified, but condemned. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The best of men can obtain nothing but emptiness by their own works. But justification through the obedience of Christ opens a door of hope to the most heinous transgressor who receives it by faith. This method at once delightfully secures the highest glory to God and happiness to every believer. And the death and resurrection of our Redeemer harmoniously concur to promote our full salvation and comfort. Here we have a sure foundation for the most unshaken faith in the promises of a faithful, almighty, and unchangeable God, notwithstanding all the obstructions and discouragements in ourselves or others which stand in the way of their fulfilment. And great is the mercy that now righteousness, grace, and salvation are extended to believing Gentiles equally as to Jews—as to Abraham; and that whatever is recorded concerning him or David, is granted to us, to encourage our faith and hope. And it is very necessary, for our instruction and comfort, everywhere in Scripture to observe accurately what relates to the justification of a sinner before God.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1. Therefore, being thus justified by faith, we are received into peace, favour, and friendship with God, and enjoy a pleasant serenity of soul towards him, through the sacrifice, resurrection, and intercession of Christ. 2. By whom, as our Mediator, Peace-maker, and spiritual Husband, we, under the direction and influence of the Holy Ghost, have a free and open access into this excellent state of favour and acceptance with God, and into the actual enjoyment of all saving graces implanted in our heart; in which we, with great honour, stand on the sure foundation of God's perfections and promises, and of Christ's person, offices, and work, remaining firmly thereon, and rejoice in the assured hope that God will quickly and exceedingly manifest the glory of his own perfections, counsels, and operations, in making us partakers of the glorious and immediate enjoyment of himself: 3. In the exercise of which hope we triumph over and glory in all the distressing afflictions and persecutions which befall us in life, being persuaded, by the Word and Spirit of God, and our own observation and experience, that they are all wisely ordered, overruled, and blessed by God, to beget in us a calm submission to his will, and patient bearing of whatever hardships he thinks fit to lay upon us. 4. And this patience produces much useful experience and proof of the truth of our graces under trials, and of the emptiness of worldly things, and the excellency of things spiritual and heavenly; and of God's wise, powerful, and gracious care over us, and of his seasonably helping and supporting us, and sanctifying his providential dispensations to us.—And this experience contributes to wean our affections from the things of this world, and raise them to things above, and to encourage our hopes of their eternal enjoyment. 5. And this well grounded hope, we certainly know, will never shamefully disappoint us, as it rests on the compassion of God, abundantly manifested to our souls; and has an earnest of its fulfilment in that ardent love to God nurtured in them by the Holy Ghost, whom he has given to abide constantly in us, as our counsellor, comforter, and sanctifier, and as a witness and pledge of his full and constant love to us. 6. For when we were in the most sinful and miserable condition, utterly incapable of appeasing the wrath of God, or recovering ourselves from ruin and danger, nay, profanely unmindful of and contemning God, Jesus Christ, in the most proper season, when our guilt, wickedness, and need were increased to the highest, died for us impotent, wretched, and ungodly creatures. 7. Among men scarcely could any be found who would willingly sacrifice their life for the redemption of a harmless or upright man; and but few that would have enough of courage, gratitude, or friendship to do it for the sake of a public-spirited, bountiful man, who had been, and might continue to be, an uncommon blessing to his family, friends, and country. 8. But God has, in the most transcendent and astonishing manner, manifested his love towards us, in that while we were, by nature and practice, highly injurious to him and to one another, and justly condemned by his law to utter destruction, Jesus Christ, his only-begotten Son, according to his appointment, died a most accursed, tormenting, and shameful death, to secure our forgiveness and eternal life. 9. Now, if God so loved us when we were under the power and guilt of sin, much more may we hope that, having all our sins pardoned and our persons accepted, through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, we shall certainly be delivered from all punishment through faith in him. 10. For if, when we were not only weak, sinful, and ungodly, but even malicious enemies, rebels, and traitors against God, he had, in his Word and providence, and our own consciences, declared his just indignation against us, Jesus' obedience and suffering as our sacrifice for sin triumphantly opened a way for communicating his grace and favour to us, much more coming into a state of favour and friendship with God, shall we be actually delivered from all sin and misery, and advanced to perfect blessedness in the immediate and eternal enjoyment of God. 11. Having, then, these views, we not only rejoice in hope of receiving spiritual and eternal blessings from God, through a living faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who loved us and gave himself for us, who thus made it possible for us to be justified before God; by faith in whom, we, Jews or Gentiles, have now, under gospel discoveries, approved of, accepted, rested upon, and taken comfort in his sacrifice, as the only atoning sacrifice that can really redeem us from sin, and recommend us to the favour of God.—12. The fall of all mankind in the first Adam further proves the universal necessity and illustrates the nature of a free jusbe dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.

16 And<sup>c</sup> not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification.

17 For if by one man's offence<sup>9</sup> death<sup>y</sup> reigned by one; <sup>z</sup>much more they which receive abundance of grace, and of the gift of righteousness, shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.)

20 Moreover, <sup>d</sup>the law entered, that the offence might abound. But <sup>e</sup>where sin abounded, grace did much more abound.<sup>5</sup>

21 That as sin hath reigned unto death,<sup>6</sup> even so might <sup>g</sup>grace reign, through righteousness, unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER VI.

1 We may not live in sin, 2 for we are dead unto it, 3 as appeareth by our baptism. 12 Let not sin reign any more, 18 because we have yielded ourselves to the service of righteousness, 23 and for that death is the wages of sin.

WHAT shall<sup>a</sup> we say then? <sup>b</sup>Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?<sup>1</sup>

2 God<sup>c</sup> forbid. <sup>d</sup>How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

3 Know ye not, that <sup>e</sup>so many of us as were<sup>2</sup> baptized<sup>3</sup> into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?

wholly by grace—if works have no part in it—if it be so that the more heinous the transgression the more abundant becomes the grace of pardon; then may we not go on in our sinful career so that the grace of God may in the end become the more conspicuous? y Jn. 8. 34. 2 Pe. 2. 19. Mat. 6. 24, with ver. 13, 19, 21-23.

4 Therefore we are <sup>a</sup>buried with him by baptism into death; that <sup>b</sup>like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so <sup>c</sup>we also should walk in newness of life.

5 For<sup>d</sup> if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection:<sup>4</sup>

6 Knowing this, that <sup>k</sup>our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin

7 For<sup>e</sup> he that is dead is freed<sup>5</sup> from sin.

8 Now<sup>n</sup> if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:

9 Knowing that Christ, <sup>o</sup>being raised from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.

10 For<sup>p</sup> in that he died, he died unto sin once: <sup>q</sup>but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11 Likewise<sup>r</sup> reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

12 Let<sup>s</sup> not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof.

13 Neither<sup>t</sup> yield ye your members as instruments<sup>6</sup> of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

14 For<sup>u</sup> sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace.

15 What<sup>v</sup> then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.

16 Know ye not, that <sup>w</sup>to whom ye yield yourtification, through the great sacrifice of Christ, for both Jews and Gentiles; for sin by him, as our common parent and federal head, broke in upon all men, from his eating the forbidden fruit; his first sin opened the way, and this wilful, awful disobedience, and the corruption of nature attending it, being spread among them, and a sentence of death, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, being passed upon them, because of sin, death, in all its hideous forms, in and through him as their public head, spread over all mankind, as persons descended from him. 13, 14. And it is manifest that, by virtue of some law, sin was charged, and its penalty inflicted, in the world before God gave the law to the Jewish nation by Moses. Nay, for 2500 years before, all along from Adam's fall, death, the inseparable attendant of sin, had reigned over mankind, cutting off one generation after another, leading men to the most outrageous acts of violence and bloodshed. Instead of pity and love, men were controlled by self-interest and hate. 15. But though Adam, as the federal head of his natural posterity, was a remarkable type of Jesus Christ, the gracious benefit which comes through the righteousness of the one is more than answerable to the mischievous effects of the first sin of the other; for if, through the sinful fall of a mere man, sentence of death was brought upon all his natural posterity as the just wages of his sin, much more must that God, who delighteth in mercy, cause his rich and undeserved favours and blessings to abound, through the glorious sacrifice of Christ, to all mankind, in bestowing upon them greater happiness than they lost by the fall. 16. And not only does the gracious favour of God, through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, remove the guilt and curse of that one offence of Adam's eating the forbidden fruit, which brought the sentence of condemnation upon all mankind, but procures a complete forgiveness of that and innumerable other personal transgressions, and a full acceptance unto eternal life. 17. And therefore if, by the destructive fall of one mere man as their representative, death, in all its forms, has invaded, subdued, and exercised dominion over all men, through their natural connection with him, much more they who become partakers of the rich abundance of God's love and favour through Christ, and have his infinitely valuable sacrifice imparted to them, and are interested in all the superabundant blessings secured by it, shall enjoy a glorious freedom from sin and death, and reign honourably in grace and glory, in union to and in fellowship with Jesus Christ. 18. But notwithstanding such circumstantial differences, the manner of conveying Adam's guilt and Jesus' righteousness is the very same in substance; for as by one offence of Adam, sin, and through it condemnation to death, spiritual, temporal, and eternal, came upon all his natural posterity, so, by the righteousness of our one Mediator and Surety Jesus Christ, and by that alone, pardon of all sins, past, present, and to come, and an acceptance unto life, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, came to all who accepted Christ. 19. For as by the influences of Adam's sin of eating the forbidden fruit, all his natural posterity are legally charged with it, and so judicially constituted sinners, and being condemned as such, are brought under the punishment of an unholy and sinful nature, prone to all evil, so, by the impartation of Christ's holiness of nature, obedience of life, and sacrificial sufferings, all the world is put into such relations with God that it becomes possible for him to save all who believe in Christ. 20. For God never gave the law, moral or ceremonial, to mankind in expectation of their obtaining justification and life by it; but the covenant of work was made with Adam, and the entrance of sin was occasioned by it, as an intended mean of glorifying the exceeding riches of his grace; and the moral law was afterwards solemnly published, and the ceremonial established, in order to manifest the dreadful nature and effects of man's fall; but in his infinite, free, universal, and unparalleled love, favour, and mercy, God took occasion, from the extensive spread, outrageous prevalence, and high aggravations of sin, to exert and manifest the most illustrious, extensive, and superabounding power of his grace, in pardoning not only the first, but all transgressions, if only those who committed them would repent of their sins and trust in Christ. 21. That as sin, through the offence of Adam, had prevailed and cruelly tyrannized over mankind, triumphantly rendering them obnoxious to temporal, spiritual, and eternal death, so the free favour and mercy of God might prevail and triumph over sin, however powerful or aggravated, in pardoning and subduing it, and spreading abroad the blessings of salvation among sinful men, saving them through a life of faith to God here, and immediate and eternal enjoyment of him hereafter, through the sacrifice and by the mediation of Jesus Christ.

Ver. 4. Experience. Rather, 'proof,' such as metals undergo by chemical or mechanical tests, and by which their genuineness and purity are demonstrated.—Note, The real power of faith and the privileges of grace can never be thoroughly known till the hour of sickness, danger, losses, disappointments, bereavements, and sorrows. It is the night that reveals the real glories of the heavens. C.

And if any sceptical objector ask, How could these things be so? it is replied, Was not Adam's life as truly the life of every one of his posterity as it was his own? Were not his posterity as truly in him when he received and violated the commandment of God, as Levi was in Abraham when he paid tithes to Melchisedec? REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy is the state into which believers are brought by the gospel! A delightfully free justification, peace with God, spiritual establishment, comfort, and well-grounded hopes of eternal felicity, come to us through Jesus' person and blood. And all things amazingly work together for our spiritual and everlasting welfare. Transcendent and unbounded is the love of God manifested in Jesus' obedience and death for us, who were so unholy, wicked, and wretched. And certain and full is our everlasting salvation through him. Since all mankind are descended from Adam, who partook of the forbidden fruit and thereby brought his posterity under the condemnation of the law, God in his mercy gave his Son, who kept the law and thereby made it possible to save all who believe in Christ. And much greater and more effectual are the blessings brought in by Jesus, our new federal head, to all who believe, than all the loss and want entailed by Adam on his natural posterity. O my soul, contemplate, believe, admire, and share these glories, these blessings of redeeming grace!

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1, 2. But if our justification thus wholly depend upon the free grace of God through the impartation of Jesus' righteousness, and God's free favour superabound where sin had abounded, should we thence take encouragement to continue in and more eagerly practise wickedness, that God's grace may be the more illustriously displayed in pardoning and saving us? Nothing could be more detestable and horrid, or even more unnatural, to a renewed heart; for though we cannot be justified by our own works, yet how could we, who are delivered from the guilt and dominion of sin, and whose affections are mortified to it, in any consistency with our state and character, or any sense of duty or gratitude, or with any conscience, hope, or peace, allow ourselves to continue in or practise any known iniquity? 3. Know ye not that our baptism with water, by the authority and into the profession, faith, and obedience of Jesus Christ, signified and sealed our spiritual union to him, as members of his mystical body; and the mortification as well as the remission of our sin, through the influence of his death; and our federal obligation to concur with the end of his death, to redeem us from all iniquity? 4. It is therefore not only incumbent on us to be conformable to Christ's death in the crucifixion of our sinful lusts, but to give continued proofs thereof, in conformity to his lying in the grave; that as he was raised from the dead by the glorious power and operation of his Father, and in order to receive with him the reward of his glorifying him on earth, we, by virtue derived from him as our living and quickening Head, being quickened to a spiritual and heavenly life, should, with freedom, constancy, and in a progressive manner, daily live in all holy obedience, from new principles and motives, and by a new rule, and to new ends—the praise and glory of God. 5. For if, as is represented in baptism, we are so united to Christ as our mystical Head that we receive from him gracious influences to render us conformable to him in his death, by the mortification of sin and separation of our souls from it, we shall certainly receive influences from him as our risen Saviour to enable us to live like him in holiness, till we are admitted into immediate fellowship with him in his heavenly glory. 6. For from the principles of the gospel we know that the subtle corruption of our nature derived from Adam, and spread into all the members of our body and faculties of our soul, is mortally wounded through Jesus Christ's death, he having died for this very end, that its whole frame, power, and authority should be gradually but powerfully mortified, subdued, and utterly destroyed, that from this very time we should never willingly yield ourselves to its inclinations and influence, or serve its interests and designs. 7. For whosoever is thus dead to the reign and love of sin, through conformity to his crucified Head and Saviour, is freed from its domineering power and command over him, and is delivered from all allowed inclinations and desires to serve it. 8. Now if, through the merits and influence of Christ's death, we, by virtue of union to and fellowship with him, are thus conformed to him in an effectual death unto sin, we are assured, from God's Word and by his Spirit, that, through virtue derived from him as our risen Redeemer, we shall be enabled to live a spiritual, holy, and heavenly life here, till we are raised to an eternal life of immediate fellowship with him hereafter. 9, 10. For we are certain that Christ, our risen and exalted Head, will never more die, or be obnoxious to death; but having, by his one death on the cross, fully because of our faith in Christ, pardoned our sins, he is raised from the dead to a life heavenly, immortal, and divine, wholly calculated to promote the glory of his Father's perfections. 11. If he then, by dying once, made possible the pardon of sin through faith in him, and so destroyed the power of it, that he now lives in eternal honour to the glory of God, it becomes you to reckon yourselves dead, and actually to be dead, to the reign, love, and practice of sin, through union to and fellowship with him; but spiritually alive in your hearts and affections, loving and serving God in thought, word, and deed, as under the power of gracious principles and influences derived from him as our common Saviour and Lord. 12, 13. Take heed therefore that ye never suffer sin so to prevail in either your souls or your frail, corruptible, and mortal bodies, as to make you yield any voluntary obedience to the corrupt desires and solicitations of those sinful lusts which still remain in you, or at any time to make you willingly employ your bodily members, or the affections of your souls, as instruments of warfare against God, or of serving the cause or gratifying the perverse inclinations of sin; but with full consent, and without reserve, give up your whole selves, soul and body, to God through Christ, your only rightful Sovereign, to whom all your obedience is due, that ye may therein act as persons delivered from condemnation and quickened by his regenerating Spirit; and cheerfully employ all the members of your body and powers of your soul as instruments of warfare with sin, and of serving God in holiness and righteousness. 14. To encourage you in which, know assuredly that, however your inward corruptions may trouble, perplex, and wound you, and strive for the mastery in you, yet they shall never regain their allowed and uncontrolled power over any who accept Christ; for ye are not now under the covenant of works, which, however severely it forbids and condemns for sin, affords no pardon of it or effectual assistance against it; but ye are under the covenant of grace, which secures full forgiveness of, redemption from, and assistance against sin, and affords every powerful motive and help to holy obedience; and under the influence of God's sin-subduing and heart-sanctifying favour; and under the government of a gracious principle of grace implanted in your hearts. 15. Now nothing can be more contrary to the perfections of God, the design of the gospel, or your gracious character and state, than to pervert such a gracious deliverance and state as an encouragement to sin. 16. Ye cannot but know that it is impossible for you to divide your chosen services between opposite governors, but ye must be the proper servants of whatever you voluntarily give up yourselves to the habitual obedience of, whether it be to sin, the service of which is deadly, and issues in eternal death, or whether it be to holiness in the obedience of faith, for bringing forth the fruits of righteousness to the glory of God. 17. But blessed be God that though all of you who are real Christians were once the voluntary servants and slaves of your sinful lusts, ye have, by his almighty and gracious influences, and through your faith in Jesus Christ been made to receive and obey those evangelical doctrines and commands which have been communicated to you by Christ and his ministers, and which, by their powerful impression on you, have formed you after his own image. 18. And being set at liberty from the tyrannical dominion and lordship of sin in your wills, affections, and conversation, ye have through your faith in Christ, ye have been brought to holiness which God has implanted in your hearts in conformity to his own righteous law. 19. In condescension to your weak capacities, enfeebled by the present frailties of nature and remains of a sinful nature, I use this common similitude of master and servant, and I affirm that, as in your unregenerate state ye resigned and employed all the members of your body and powers of your soul in the voluntary service of unclean, unrighteous, and ungodly principles and habits of sin, which cruelly reigned and tyrannized over you, and rendered you more guilty, vile, and miserable, by adding sin to sin,—so ye should now, when brought into a state of grace, act up to the dignity, obligation, and holiness of your character, earnestly employing all your members and faculties in the exercise of your faith in Christ, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and living soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. 20. For when ye were the willing servants and slaves of your sinful lusts, ye were wholly estranged from and disaffected to every principle of holiness, insensible of all obligations to piety or virtue, and even pleased with an unrestrained inclination to wickedness. 21. But what real profit, honour, or satisfaction did ye ever find, or could you expect to find, in your former sinful courses? Were they not attended with remorse, defilement, reproach, trouble, disappointment, loss, and mischief to yourselves? And are ye not now filled with holy confusion, self-abasement, and shame in every review of them, as things foolish and unworthy, highly ungrateful, offensive, and dishonourable to God, and no less ruinous and destructive to your own souls and bodies in time and eternity? 22. But now that, by the mighty power and grace of God in assisting you by his love in Jesus Christ and giving other principles and habits to you, ye are set at liberty from the reign and love of sin, as well as from the guilt of it, and made the willing and obedient servants of God in Christ, ye grow in grace, and bring forth the fruits

CHAPTER VII.

1 No law hath power over a man longer than he liveth. 4 But we are dead to the law. 7 Yet is not the law sin, 12 but holy, just, good, 16 as I acknowledge, who am grieved because I cannot keep it.

KNOW ye not, <sup>brethren</sup>, (for I speak to them that know the law,) <sup>how</sup> that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he <sup>liveth</sup>?

2 For <sup>the</sup> woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to <sup>her</sup> husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of <sup>her</sup> husband.

3 So<sup>a</sup> then if, while <sup>her</sup> husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: <sup>but</sup> if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.

4 Wherefore,<sup>3</sup> my brethren, <sup>ye</sup> also are become dead to the law<sup>4</sup> by the body of Christ; that <sup>ye</sup> should be married to another, <sup>even</sup> to him who is raised from the dead, <sup>that</sup> we should bring forth fruit unto God.

of sins, which were by the law,<sup>6</sup> did<sup>k</sup> work in our members, to bring forth fruit unto death.

6 But<sup>l</sup> now we are delivered from the law, that being dead<sup>7</sup> wherein we were <sup>held</sup>; <sup>that</sup> we should serve in newness of spirit, and not <sup>in</sup> the oldness of the letter.<sup>9</sup>

7 What shall we say then? <sup>Is</sup> the law sin? God forbid. <sup>Nay</sup>, I had not known sin but by the law: for I had not known lust,<sup>1</sup> except the law had said, 'Thou shalt not covet.'

8 But sin, <sup>taking</sup> occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. <sup>For</sup> without the law sin <sup>was</sup> dead.

9 For <sup>I</sup> was alive without the law once: but <sup>when</sup> the commandment came, sin revived, and I died.

10 And the commandment, <sup>which was ordained</sup> to life, I found <sup>to be</sup> unto death.

11 For<sup>v</sup> sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew <sup>me</sup>.

12 Wherefore <sup>the</sup> law <sup>is</sup> holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good.

13 Was then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. <sup>But</sup> sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which of righteousness and holiness in this world, the final issue and perfection of which is an honourable and everlasting blessedness graciously bestowed in the world to come. 23. For death, in all its hideous forms, spiritual, temporal, or eternal, is all the wages allotted by the law of God, or which can be procured by all our labours and sufferings in the service of sin; but that everlasting life which consists in the immediate and full enjoyment of and conformity to God, which is the issue of holiness in heart and practice, though not indeed the proper wages of it, is the transcendently free gift of God bestowed on us, because we through the influence of the Holy Spirit repent of our sins and exercise faith in Jesus Christ, our only, and appointed, and well furnished Saviour and Lord.

The word here translated 'freed' occurs fifteen times in this epistle, and twenty-five times in other parts of the New Testament; and except in one other instance, where it is translated 'righteous,' it is uniformly rendered 'justified,' which sense should certainly be retained in this place. C.

Ver. 15. Not under the law. Rather, 'not under law;' any law, whether natural or revealed as a covenant of works, not merely commanding and requiring, but judging and condemning us as sinners, ch. 3. 19, 20.—Under grace—as a covenant of promise, pardon, acceptance, and spiritual help, Ep. 2. 12-19; He. 4. 16. C.

Ver. 16. Obedience. Not obedience to law for production of righteousness, for that is plainly impossible (ch. 3. 20), but 'obedience to faith' (ch. 1. 5; 16. 19), submission to the doctrine of the gospel (ch. 2. 8), in accordance with the passages where the expression elsewhere occurs, as Ac. 6. 7; Ga. 3. 1; 2 Th. 1. 8; 1 Pe. 1. 22; Ro. 10. 3, comp. with 16. 'Obedience to Christ,' 2 Co. 10. 5, which obedience conducts to the righteousness of Christ, produces the fruits and works the works of righteousness—see ver. 14, 18, 19—righteousness being personified as a master. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Groundless and very injurious is every charge of lawlessness on the doctrine of the free justification of sinners through the great sacrifice of Christ. Nothing is more detestable to a renewed heart than to continue in sin because grace does, or that it may, abound. For though our good works do not procure, yet they necessarily follow our justification by faith; and to indulge ourselves in sin, or to neglect the study of holiness, is a flat contradiction to all the signification and engagements of our baptism, and is absolutely inconsistent with our character, privilege, or duty, as members of Christ, and partakers of his grace and glory. Yea, delightful, excellent, and useful are the effects of regenerating grace. What dying to sin! what spiritual quickening to our holy and heavenly life! What a holy, comfortable, and edifying walk before God, from new principles and ends, and after the new pattern of Christ, and by virtue derived from his death and resurrection! There is need then to examine ourselves fully, whether sin or holiness have the ascendancy in our hearts and lives. It is shameful to be less for the Lord Christ after our conversion than we were for sin before it. And all the blessed deliverances from sin ought to render it and its service detestable to us.—Alas! what confusion and wrath follow upon sin! But abundant, eternal, and free is the redemption which comes to us through Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1-3. I now appeal to all of you who know the law of nature or revelation, that no man can be bound by any law longer than he lives under it, or stands related to it; and that, however strictly the law of marriage binds a wife to abide with and perform all necessary duties to her husband whilst they both live, yet if he die she is fully delivered from that obligation, and may even be married to another man, as freely as if she had never had any connection with her deceased husband. 4. In like manner, my dear Christian brethren, ye, through Christ's fulfilment of the law in your stead by his obedience unto death, are perfectly delivered from all connection with it as a covenant, requiring personal righteousness in order to justification before God, justifying you for your good works, or condemning you for your sins,—in order that, in a state of spiritual marriage, union to, and fellowship with him, as your risen Husband and Saviour, and by a principle of spiritual life derived from him, ye may bring forth fruits of holiness to the glory of God, acceptable to him through Jesus Christ. 5. For while we, Jews or Gentiles, were in our carnal, unconverted state, under the full power and influence of our natural corruption, which works so much by our bodies, the violent passions thereof, irritated by the purity of the precepts and severity of the curses of the broken law of works, powerfully employed all our members and faculties in incessant labours of wickedness, greatly dishonouring to God and eternally ruinous to ourselves. 6. But now, the law in that form being dead to us through Christ's complete fulfilment of all its demands in our stead, we are delivered from all its requirements of perfect obedience in order to justification, and its rigorous sentences of condemnation on account of sin, that through union to and fellowship with him, we might, from new principles, motives, and ends, under the influence of his Spirit, cordially and spiritually serve God in all holiness of heart and life, and not with mere ceremonial and external devotions and virtue. 7. But let none imagine that because subjection to the law as a covenant retains us in our sinfulness, and deliverance from it promotes gospel holiness, therefore its moral precepts are causes of rather than checks to sin. With detestation of the thought, I can, from my own experience, affirm that my conscience had never been convinced of the sinfulness of the secret workings of irregular desires, and the first motions of inordinate affections, unless I had found that the law had forbidden all impatience, discontent, envious grudging, or uneasy and irregular inclinations to worldly enjoyments. 8. But though the holy law thus discovers and forbids the most secret operations of wickedness, and never gave me any proper occasion of sinning, yet the reigning corruption of my heart basely took occasion from the strictness and severity of the law, and, through my own natural enmity against God, wrought in me all manner of sinful inclinations and desires after that which is forbidden; for as long as I continued without any true sense of the spirituality, holiness, strictness, and extent of the divine law, sin, and especially heart-sins, appeared to me quite trifling and harmless, without any power or danger. 9. Nay, I then imagined myself in a good state, deserving of, and able and inclined by my good works to recommend me to, God's favour; yea, able to entitle to, and prepare myself for, eternal life. But when the Holy Ghost applied the commandments closely to my conscience, as reaching to my inmost thoughts, principles, views, and desires, as well as to my words and actions, I could not but be convinced of inconceivable multitudes of sins, and degrees of their aggravation, beyond what I had ever thought of, and of my just exposure to divine wrath on account of them. And while I lost all hopes of eternal life by my own performances, and my conscience condemned me to eternal death for my sins, my inward corruption, irritated by the holiness and severity of God's law, raged more and more against him; and this increased my spiritual death in sins, and my danger of eternal ruin. 10. And thus I found God's holy law, as a covenant of works, which was originally framed for a mean of men's justification and eternal happiness through Adam's perfect obedience to it, a tremendous instrument of condemning me to death—temporal, spiritual, and eternal; and, through my own indwelling lusts, a mean of increasing my spiritual death, and alienation from and enmity against God. 11. For my inward lusts, impatient of restraint, took occasion, from the strict holiness of its commands and awful severity of its threatenings, to rage against both the is good; that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful.

14 For we know that the law is <sup>a</sup>spiritual: but I am <sup>a</sup>carnal, sold under sin.

15 For<sup>b</sup> that which I do, I allow<sup>2</sup> not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.

16 If then I do that which I would not, <sup>c</sup>I consent unto the law that it is good.

17 Now then <sup>a</sup>it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that <sup>a</sup>in me, (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: <sup>a</sup>for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not.

19 For<sup>b</sup> the good that I would, I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.

20 Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

21 I find then a <sup>a</sup>law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.

23 But I see <sup>a</sup>another law in my members,

CHAPTER VIII.

1 They that are in Christ, and live according to the Spirit, are free from condemnation. 5, 13 What harm cometh of the flesh, 6, 14 and what good of the Spirit; 17 and what of being God's child, 19 whose glorious deliverance all things long for, 29 was beforehand decreed from God. 38 What can sever us from his love?

THERE is<sup>a</sup> therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who <sup>b</sup>walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

2 For<sup>c</sup> the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the <sup>a</sup>law of sin and death.

<sup>g</sup> Jn. 1. 14; 3. 14-17. He. 10. 8. Ga. 4. 4, 5; 3. 13. 1 Jn. 2. 2, 4, 9, 10. 2 Co. 5. 21. 1 Pe. 2. 24; 3. 18. Da. 9. 24. ch. 3. 24-26; 5. 6-11, 19, 21. Ac. 13. 39.

law and the Lawgiver; and thus insensibly drew me into the commission of many forbidden evils, and so increased my inward corruption, and enlarged the sentence of my condemnation to death; while the law, further applied to my conscience, convinced me that all my hopes of recommending myself to God's favour were utterly groundless. 12. Since therefore the moral law gives no occasion to, but discovers, forbids, and condemns every sin, it must be acknowledged an intrinsically pure, holy, just, right, and true, good and excellent, eternal and unchangeable, rule and standard of all holiness and righteousness, every way becoming the holy, righteous, and good God to enjoin, and intelligent creatures to obey, for his glory and their own advantage. 13. Nor is this holy law the cause of the mischief and death which comes upon mankind. Nay, from this representation of it, derived from my own experience, it is evident that sin, therein showing itself a most malignant and destructive evil, by a vile abuse of the law, produced in me what was wicked, and brought me under a righteous and manifest sentence of condemnation and death,—that thus rising up in desperate opposition to the holy law of God, it might be made to appear infinitely odious, unreasonable, and injurious, directly contrary to him and pernicious to men. 14. For though I, and all those who have felt its thorough convictions, are certain that this law of God is pure and spiritual, reaching not only to external words, actions, or appearances, but to the thoughts, dispositions, principles, motives, and ends of our heart, and requiring both internal and external obedience to be performed in a spiritual manner; yet, alas! notwithstanding all the powerful influences of God's grace which I have experienced, such are my deficiencies, and such the remains of corruption in me, that I am quite ashamed of myself, as inexpressibly carnal, and too often employed by my sinful lusts, as if I were still their slave, sold into their hands by Adam's fall and my own former consent. 15. I am indeed far from allowing myself in any known violations of God's law; but, alas! I too often, through sloth or inadvertence, neglect or unprofitably perform the duties which I am desirous of observing and persevering in, and am, to my great grief, drawn into the commission of those sins which I habitually and determinately abhor. 16. If then I have a supreme, fixed, and habitual aversion to those sins which I commit in opposition to God's holy law, I thereby manifest that I am so far renewed in heart, that I approve of it as right in all points, even to the condemning of myself. 17. And through this change which God's grace hath made in me, it is no longer my whole self, or even my better part, my renewed judgment, will, and affections, that inclines to transgress the law, or to commit what it forbids, but it is the remaining sinful tendencies of my nature, which I disallow and abhor, that would transgress. 18. For I know, by sad experience, that in my sinful nature, considered in itself, nothing spiritually good has any residence; and even though the principles of grace imparted to me by regeneration be wholly inclined to that which is good and holy, yet, through the power of fleshly nature and concurring temptations, and the want of a lively exercise of faith on Christ's person and fullness, I cannot perform holy duties in that spiritual and vigorous manner in which I resolve and sincerely desire to do them. 19. For while by faith I am kept from gross vices, and have an unfeigned respect to all his commandments, yet I do not attain that universal conformity to them which I aim at, and too frequently fall into sins of infirmity which I really hate and detest. 20. Since then these sinful falls are contrary to the reigning bent of my heart, I must insist on it, to the honour of God's work of grace in me, to the honour of his holy, just, and good law, and to the just reproach of sin, as an unreasonable violation of it, that it is not my whole or renewed self that knowingly and willingly does the abominable things which God hates, but it is owing to those remains of my sinful corruption of nature which I do not oppose, watch, pray, and labour against so much as I ought. 21. I therefore find an evil principle of sin so powerfully working in me by suggestings, sinful allurements, and prevailing insinuations, that often, when I am essaying to perform holy duties, some bad motion or influence presents itself in opposition to my unfeigned endeavours, and unawares draws me into something unlawful. 22. For certain I am, that so far as my soul is renewed by the grace of God, I have the greatest delight and noblest satisfaction in all the precepts of God's law as right and good, and cordially desire to yield them the most perfect obedience. 23. But, alas! notwithstanding all my experience of God's grace, I feel in me a powerful principle of sinfulness residing in my whole man, and peculiarly working in my sensitive passions and appetites, and earnestly opposing all the holy aims and endeavours of that governing spiritual principle of grace divinely implanted in my judgment, conscience, and will, and sometimes prevailing to render me its unwilling captive, and involve me in acts of wickedness. 24. And, alas! how vile, loathsome, and miserable am I in myself on this account! O when shall an almighty and infinitely gracious God deliver me from this detestable and deadly system of indwelling lusts which dwell in and overspread my whole nature, and render me so loathsome and inactive before him, and which, but for his mercy, would certainly issue in my eternal destruction! 25. But blessed be his name, through Christ, that, by his deep love and the working of his grace in me, I am already delivered from the guilt and dominion of sin, and have an assured hope of a complete deliverance from all the defiling remains of it at last, through the obedience, suffering, and intercession of Jesus Christ, your and my Lord and Saviour. So then, to sum up all in a few words, so far as I am renewed by the grace of God, with settled judgment and choice, and with full approbation, resolution, and consent, I devote my whole man to God; and as his willing servant yield an unfeigned and unreserved obedience to his law; but so far as the disallowed sinful tendencies prevail in me, I am brought under the influence of sinful lusts, and led shamefully to serve their abominable interests and demands.

Ver. 14. Sold at the fall for a promise never fulfilled, and seized as a slave, whom none but Jesus can set free.—Note, Of whom speaks the apostle? Of himself, as a renewed believer, evidently, for the following reasons:—(1) He had been once, in his own view, alive, but now knew that he was dead, ver. 9-11. (2) He had acknowledged the law and commandment holy, just, and good, ver. 12. (3) He had discovered sin to be 'exceeding sinful,' ver. 13—an acknowledgment and conclusion to which the unregenerate never arrive. (4) He allowed not, and he hated sin, ver. 15; but the unregenerate 'take pleasure in sin and sinners,' ch. 1. 32. (5) He delighted in the law of God, ver. 22, a delight the unregenerate never feel. (6) The law of his mind warred against sin, ver. 23; the mind of the unregenerate is 'enmity against God.' (7) He felt his wretchedness, and longed for deliverance, ver. 24; the unregenerate never desire more than continuance in sin with pardon. (8) With his mind he served God, ver. 25; but the mind of the unregenerate is not and cannot be rendered subject to the will of God, ch. 8. 7. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Marvellous, but certain, glorious, and full, is our deliverance from the broken law of works, by our union to Christ and interest in his righteousness, whereby he fulfilled it for us. And this deliverance powerfully promotes the renovation of our heart and the reformation of our life. It is impossible to obtain either justification or even true sanctification by the broken law. And sharp convictions by it make fearful work on men's hearts and consciences. Jesus and his grace find unregenerate sinners in a most deplorable condition. And dreadful is the nature of sin, which perverts even the holy law of God, and convictions by it, as an occasion of strengthening and enraging wicked lusts. Alas! what fear and weakness are found with the best on earth! what a plague and burden is this to believers, and what a hindrance to holiness! But marvellous and merciful is the creation and preservation of gracious habits and holy principles amidst so much sinful tendency. And it is a certain mark of divine grace governing the soul when the sense of evil tendency occasions such heavy sighs and mournful groans to God. The battle may be sore, but victory, through Jesus Christ, will 4 That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, <sup>h</sup>who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

5 For<sup>i</sup> they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; <sup>j</sup>but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.

6 For to<sup>k</sup> be carnally minded<sup>3</sup> is death; but to<sup>l</sup> be spiritually minded<sup>4</sup> is life and peace:

7 Because<sup>n</sup> the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

8 So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But<sup>o</sup> ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

10 And if Christ be <sup>p</sup>in you, <sup>q</sup>the body is dead because of sin; <sup>r</sup>but the Spirit is life<sup>5</sup> because of righteousness.<sup>6</sup>

CHAPTER VIII.—Ver. 1. Since the grace of God, through Christ Jesus, thus delivers all true believers from the guilt and dominion of sin, in order to their being in due time freed from all the remainders of it, it is evident that, even in this imperfect world, there is no sentence of condemnation to God's wrath standing against them who are vitally united to Christ as members of his mystical body, and who, though attended with many lamented and condemnable infirmities, do, in the general tenor of their conversation, act, not according to the dictates and inclinations of their corrupt nature, but according to the inspired Word of God, the suggestions, directions, assistance, and pattern of the Holy Ghost, and according to the nature and inclinations of that principle of grace imparted to faith. 2. For through the promise of grace perfectly fulfilled by Christ, and through the gospel applied by the powerful influence of the Holy Ghost to my conscience, I am delivered from the law of works, which is the strength of sin and binds over unto death, and have a new principle of grace imparted to my heart, in opposition to the sinful and destructive principle of natural sinfulness. 3. 4. For when the covenant of works, which required perfect obedience as the only condition of eternal life, and pronounced a curse for the very smallest transgression, had, not indeed of itself, but through our sinfulness and inability, rendered the justification of fallen men by their own works absolutely impossible, God, in his infinite wisdom and grace, appointed and manifested in our world his own only begotten Son, personally united to our nature in all the debased and distressing circumstances thereof, and, by rendering him an atoning sacrifice for sin, revealed its nature, and sufficiently testified his displeasure against it, in order that all righteousness, in obedience to the precepts of the law, or satisfaction to its penalty, being fulfilled by him as our loving Saviour, might be imparted to our persons and applied to our consciences, who by his grace have our stated and habitual conversation towards God and men, not under the influence or according to our natural principles of sinful corruption, but according to the dictates and influences of the Holy Ghost, and the nature and bent of these gracious principles which he has imparted, and seeks to uphold, actuate, and assist in our souls. 5. For whatever men profess, they who are under the direction, dominion, and influence of indwelling sinfulness, habitually consult, relish, pursue, and delight in worldly, sensual, and sinful things, answerably to their carnal and unrenewed appetites; but they who are under the dominion and influence of the Holy Ghost dwelling in their hearts, and of the gracious principles imparted by him in regeneration, think of, are devoted to, contrive, relish, follow after, and delight in those things which are of a spiritual and heavenly nature, answerable to their renewed inclinations and the dictates and influences of the Holy Ghost. 6. Nor is their condition less different than their course; for to have the prevailing bent and delight of the heart turned towards worldly, sensual, and sinful objects, and to live and act accordingly, is in its own nature a spiritual death in trespasses and sins, which deserves, tends to, and naturally issues in eternal death. But to have our mind frequently, delightfully, intently, and transformingly employed about spiritual things, under the dominion and influence of the Holy Ghost, and of infused spiritual principles of grace, is in itself a spiritual life, fills the soul with inward activity, peace, and comfort, and is the certain earnest of and preparation for everlasting life and peace in the immediate enjoyment of God. 7. But this happy temper and privilege we cannot possess unless by faith our heart is changed; for the whole bent of an earthly and unregenerate heart is in direct opposition to, and inveterate and malicious enmity against, God, his perfections, will, authority, and government, and all conformity to him or spiritual enjoyment of him; and such is its desperate malignity, that it cannot of itself come into a subjection to or compliance with the spiritual and righteous demands of his holy, just, and good law. 8. It is therefore manifest that they who are in their natural state under the power and dominion of carnal principles and corrupt affections, are, while they continue so, utterly incapable of doing anything spiritually good and acceptable to God, or of being in Christ discharged from condemnation or accepted to eternal life. 9. But ye, brethren, are not under the dominion of your sinful, and in part remaining corruption, but under the direction and government of the Holy Ghost, and of implanted principles of grace, as is manifest from the abiding residence and operation of the same in you. Nevertheless, if any of you are not partakers of the inhabitation, renewing, and sanctifying operations of that Spirit who proceeds from, resides in, and is sent and given by Christ, ye cannot possibly be of the number of his children, or, continuing such, be owned by him as his, or adjudged to eternal life at the last day. 10. But if Christ has, by his Spirit, taken up his abode in you, as his members spiritually united to him, your bodies indeed must die, because of the divine sentence passed against sin, and because of the carnal nature in you; but your souls are already made spiritually alive, and shall for ever live in blessedness and glory, through the sacrifice of Christ, wrought out for and imparted to you, and by means of that true principle of holiness which is thus given you, to make you live to God here and meet for the enjoyment of him hereafter. 11. And if that blessed Spirit who, together with the Father and Son, raised up the dead body of Jesus Christ from the grave, dwell in you, by peculiar relation, fixed inhabitation, and quickening and sanctifying operation, God, who raised up your anointed Saviour, Head, and Representative, will, in virtue of, and in conformity to, his resurrection, raise up your dead bodies at the last day to a glorious and immortal life by the same almighty operation of his Spirit. 12.

Since therefore, my dear brethren in Christ, all mischief and ruin are conveyed to us by sin, and all the blessings we enjoy or hope for are conveyed to us by the Holy Ghost, we can be under no obligation or reasonable inducement to follow the pernicious motions or obey the unrighteous demands of our sinful natures, but are under the strongest obligations to the good Spirit of God, and have the strongest motives to live answerably to his holy dictates and influences. 13. And if any of you, contrary to your Christian character and professions, habitually indulge yourselves in fulfilling your sinful lusts, ye must, notwithstanding all your notions, pretences, or external privileges in religion, as persons who have no real union with or interest in Christ, fall short of eternal life, and be plunged into everlasting misery; but if ye, as true believers, vitally united to Christ by virtue derived from him, in the gracious influences and assistances of his Spirit, resist, subdue, and crucify your corrupt affections, principles, and practices, ye shall, according to the gracious establishment of the gospel, for ever live with him, soul and body, in heaven. 14. For all they who are conducted, assisted, and governed by the light and influence of God's Spirit in their minds, wills, affections, and conversation, and they only, as the children of God, are entitled to everlasting life by their adoption, and prepared for it by faith in Christ, making sure their regeneration. 15. For ye have not received the Holy Ghost in order to subject your souls to such servile fears as resulted from the darkness and terror of the legal dispensation, or from legal convictions of your sinfulness and misery before your conversion; but, according to the light, liberty, and joy of the New Testament dispensation, ye have been made partakers of him in his most comfortable and emboldening operations, by which we and other believers are enabled, with holy reverence, affection, fervour, importunity, confidence, and freedom, to address God in our worship, as our reconciled Father in Christ. 16. And in this assured pouring out of our hearts to God through Christ, the Holy Ghost, by working gracious dispositions in us, and by shining upon his own work, doth, in and by his word, assist and concur with our consciences in witnessing that we are truly the adopted and regenerated children of God. 17. And if we be thus his children, we are necessarily and irrevocably entitled to the rich and glorious inheritance of everlasting life, happiness, and holiness, answerable to our high dignity and relation; and in, and through, and together with Christ our Saviour, Head, Father, and elder Brother, are heirs of God himself, and all that he is, or has, as our everlasting portion; and all our sufferings in this world for his sake, and in conformity to him, shall but promote and issue in our exalted and eternal enjoyment of God, in and together with him. 18. For, after an impartial and careful examining and balancing all accounts, under God's infallible direction, I compute, and am fully satisfied, that all the afflictions we can meet with in this world, or endure for the sake of Christ and his cause, are so we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.<sup>9</sup>

18 For I reckon that 'the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

9 Suffering, therefore, must be a part of the Christian's preparation for heaven. It is like medicine to the diseased man, a painful necessity. It cannot be dispensed with. vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope; short, light, and trivial, as to deserve no comparison with that amazing glory and happiness which shall be publicly allotted to and bestowed upon us in the last judgment. 19-22. Nay, such is the transcendent glory of that liberty and happiness which we, the humble and faithful children of God, shall then enjoy, that all the irrational creatures in this lower world, with order and earnestness answerable to their nature, long for it, that, by their sharing therein, they may be completely and finally delivered from all that vanity, disgrace, disorder, or pain, which has by the curse been introduced among and upon them on account of man's first and other sins. 23. And while they thus long for deliverance from their present vanity and misery, we, who have accepted the Holy Ghost in his sanctifying, sealing, and comforting operations, as pledges, earnest, evidences, and securities of our future full enjoyment of the heavenly inheritance, are, notwithstanding our peace and joy in believing, exceedingly troubled; and with secret groanings under the pressure of our remaining sinfulness and affliction, earnestly long for and desire, assuredly hope, and patiently wait for the full enjoyment of all those exalted privileges and blessings belonging to us as faithful children of God, and in which our bodies, raised to an immortality, shall, together with our souls, share in the most honourable and transporting fellowship with God. 24, 25. For at present we have not the actual possession of our full salvation, but only the assured hope of enjoying it in some future period; and hoping for it as a thing unseen and unenjoyed, we, patiently bearing our troubles, and humbly resigning ourselves to God's will as to the time of its manifestation, wait for it with cheerfulness, firmly expecting that, in due time, we shall be fully delivered from all evil, and crowned with everlasting happiness in heaven. 26, 27. And as this delightful hope encourages and supports our patient waiting under all our griefs and burdens, so doth the Holy Ghost himself, by his concurrent direction, support under our manifold weaknesses and imperfections, which would otherwise carry us into unseasonable and impatient desires of deliverance; for by our remaining ignorance, selfishness, carnality, and perturbation of spirit, we neither know what to pray for, as most conducive to God's glory and our good, nor are capable of ordering our requests in a duly believing, spiritual, fervent, holy, humble, submissive, and steady manner; but the Holy Ghost suggests to us proper requests, and enables us to offer them up, with such vehement pantings and breathings of soul, in an admirable mixture of faith and patience, importunity and hope, as no words can sufficiently express. But though we cannot fully express those strong inward desires of our heart, the all-seeing and heart-searching God accurately and kindly observes and approves, and is ready to answer, whatever we aim at and desire under the influence of his own Spirit, who always directs and assists to pray according to his will and word; such prayers must therefore certainly be answered in due season. 28. And for our further comfort under all our present tribulations and groanings, we believers know, from God's pity, promises, relations, and affections to us through Christ, and from our own and others' experience, that all persons, things, and events, however bad or afflictive in their own nature, tendency, or appearances, shall, under the influence of the overruling wisdom, power, and grace of God, work together to promote the spiritual and eternal advantage of all those who sincerely love God as their chief good and highest end, having been, by repentance and faith in Jesus Christ, converted to him according to, and in prosecution of, his eternal disposition of love to them. 29, 30. And this indeed is the original source of all that good which we enjoy or hope for; for all who repent of their sins and accept Christ as their Savior, he determined in due time to render conformed to his Son in holiness, needful suffering, and eternal glory, that he might have the honour of being the prime Ruler and Chief of countless millions of ransomed men: and whom he thus predestinated to holiness, sufferings, and honours, he, in the execution of this, aids constantly by the Holy Spirit, and unites them with him; and all who by implicit faith in Jesus Christ determine to lead new lives through his aid, he pardons, accepts, and entitles to eternal life, through the righteousness of Christ; and whom he thus justifies, he, by his Holy Spirit, sanctifies and comforts in this world, and at last admits to the full and immediate enjoyment of himself in heaven, in, with, and conformed to Christ. 31. If then the infinitely wise, unchangeable, and almighty God be thus our certain, fast, and steady friend, and all his perfections, purposes, promises, and operations, be on our side, what ground have we of confidence, comfort, and wonder! and how little reason to fear the malicious, crafty, and powerful attempts of our most malicious and inveterate enemies! 32. For if God, in infinite love to us, cheerfully and freely appointed his only begotten Son our surety, brought him into our nature and place in law, and without the least abatement exacted from him all the obedience and suffering due from the world, that we, through his atoning sacrifice of himself in our stead, might be saved in him with an everlasting salvation, how is it possible that he should not, along with this unspeakable and leading gift, freely bestow upon us whatever gracious blessing promised in his word is needful for either our soul or body? 33. And since we are accepted in Christ, our sins atoned for by him, and our persons justified in him, how is it possible that any can fix a law charge of guilt upon us, notwithstanding the fearful sinfulness and transgressions which we have reason to mourn over, since it is God himself, whose judgment is always according to truth, who has accounted and pronounced us absolved from guilt, accepted and entitled us, as righteous, to eternal life? 34. And however intent our enemies, and however ready our own conscience may be to condemn us, yet who can subject us to the curse of God's law, to our eternal destruction? Christ has sacrificed himself to save us from our sins; has fulfilled the righteousness demanded by the law in our stead, and in receiving the reward of his work, has risen again for our justification; yea, is exalted to his Father's right hand, to exercise a universal dominion for our advantage, and publicly to absolve and adjudge us to eternal life at the last judgment: and to manifest his own friendship, and secure our continuance in favour with God, he, as our righteous Advocate, pleads the merit of his atoning blood for us in his prevalent intercession, that we, through faith, may be eternally saved. 35-37. It must therefore be impossible that distresses or tribulations of soul or body, or the most permanent and murderous persecutions for his sake, can alienate Christ's heart from us, or ours from him, or exclude us from a share in the saving designs, fruits, and manifestations of his great love.—Nay, through his merits and mediation, and overruling influence, we are, and shall be, safely, successfully, and triumphantly carried through them all; and they are rendered remarkably useful to try and exercise our graces, wean our hearts from this world, ripen us for heaven, and sweeten the thoughts of it to us. 38, 39. For, from the unchangeableness of God's nature, perfections, purposes, covenant, and promises, and of the merit and efficacious intercession of Christ, I am infallibly assured that nothing, however distressing, entangling, or powerful, either in this world or in that which is to come, shall ever be able to cut us off, or set us at a distance, from that infinite love of God the Father which is fixed upon and manifested to us, and performs all things for us, in and through Christ; and nothing but our own unbelief can lead us from the sincere love to him as our God in Christ.

Ver. 1. In Christ Jesus. United to him by faith, which is the work of the Spirit; 'in him, as a branch in the vine (Jn. 15. 5), enjoying a common life; as a member in the body, obeying a common will, Ep. 1. 22.—Who walk not after the flesh. Who do not seek justification by fleshly ordinances, Ga. 3. 3; Phi. 3. 3; Ac. 21. 21, even as Paul himself walked before his conversion; or who have renounced and crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts, ch. 6. 6; Ga. 2. 10; 5. 24; 6. 14. C.

Ver. 2. This verse gives a reason for the general statement made in the first clause of ver. 1. The law, i.e. the influence exerted by, or the power of, the Spirit of life—the Holy Spirit, who is the author and sustainer of divine life in the soul—freed me—me Paul (he is here giving his personal experience of the power of grace), in Christ Jesus (being united to him by faith; I dwelling in him and he in me), from the law (i.e. the influence or power) of sin and death. The reasoning of the apostle in this chapter is close, and, though somewhat involved in construction, is most powerful and convincing. P.

Ver. 3. The last clause of this verse is very indefinite in our version. The Greek may be interpreted in two ways:—1. 'God having sent his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and, by an offering for sin, condemned sin (i.e. removed its sting, which is death, and also its power) in the flesh.' This interpretation gives the Greek phrase the same meaning which it has in He. 10. 18, and in the Septuagint rendering of Le. 4. 3. 2. '... And on account of sin;' joining the phrase immediately with having sent, and making it express one object for which Christ came. He came on account of sin, i.e. to remove it, by dying as an atoning sacrifice, and overcoming its power by his divine power. I prefer the latter meaning. P.

Ver. 16. This 'witness' the Spirit bears first in heaven, when we 'cry Abba,' 'our Father who art in heaven.'—This 'witness' he also bears in our hearts, for 'he that hath the Son hath the witness in himself,' 1 Jn. 5. 10. C.

Ver. 19-23. The earnest expectation (ἀποκατάδοις) signifies the lifting of the head and stretching of the body as far as possible, either to see or hear something very interesting.—On the meaning of the word 'creature' (κτίσις) the exposition of the entire passage must depend. Let its meaning therefore be sought: 1. In the Scripture use of the word. In Mar. 10. 6; 13. 19, it signifies 'world' or 'creation;' and in 16. 15, 'intelligent creature' (man), capable of believing or rejecting the gospel. In Ro. 1. 20 it signifies 'creation;' and in ver. 25, 'any created being.' In 2 Co. 5. 17; Ga. 6. 5; Col. 1. 15 it signifies either 'creature' or 'a creation;' and in Col. 1. 23 it evidently signifies, as in Mar. 16. 15, 'every man,' nationally considered. In He. 4. 13 it appears also to signify 'any human or other intelligent being;' and in 9. 11 it is translated 'building,' the visible creation being represented as the architecture and temple of God. In 1 Pe. 2. 13 it signifies 'ordinance,' 'institution;' and in 2 Pe. 3. 4 and Re. 3. 14, it signifies 'creation,' visible and invisible. If this examination fails to give a preponderance to any one use of the word, let its meaning be sought. 2. In the attributes ascribed by Paul to this κτίσις. The chief of these are—earnest expectation, waiting, hope, bondage, groaning, travelling, deliverance, and entrance into the liberty of the sons of God.—Now, though it is seldom good to perplex the mind with various opinions, yet, on a subject of so much importance and confessed difficulty, it may be well to state both the chief opinions and authorities. (1) By κτίσις some understand 'the whole church of God' (see Is. 43. 7; 65. 17); because all its true members are, in this present world, distinguished by earnest desires for the glorious manifestation and liberty of the sons of God—being subject to vanity, that is, weakness, corruption, and misery, but not from choice, He. 12. 11, but for the mortification of sin, Ro. 8. 13, and exercise of grace, and especially hope, Ro. 8. 24; 2 Co. 4. 17. (This view is supported by Limborch, Hammond, &c.) (2) The Gentile world in distinction from the Jews (Lightfoot, Guyse). (3) All mankind, Jews and Gentiles, as in Mar. 16. 15, who through all their history have felt the evil of the present state of things, and have been earnestly labouring and looking for both present deliverance and future happiness (Whitby, Macknight, Ritchie, &c.) (4) Not good angels; for they are not subject to vanity—not devils; for they believe, tremble, and hate God—not the reprobate; for they scoff—not saints and believers; for they are distinctly mentioned, ver. 23—not beasts; for they are incapable of longings after futurity. It must therefore mean the whole visible frame of creation, heaven and earth, and the creatures in them personified, and which thus, under the emblem of one intelligent person, wait as it were for restoration to that primitive condition from which they were cast down by sin (Luther, Calvin, Manton, Henry, Haldane, &c.) (5) The irrational and inanimate creation, in which everything is perverted to unnatural and sinful uses, and in which the lower animals suffer so much from human cruelty (Scott, Hodge, &c.)—Amidst this conflict of high authorities, it were specially presumptuous to dogmatize; nevertheless, a sense of accountability compels a decision in favour of the first, and that chiefly for the following reasons: (1) Because of the contrast and parallelism between this κτίσις (creation) which did 'wait and groan,' ver. 19, 22, and the apostles and his brethren who did 'wait and groan,' ver. 23. Now, would it not seem unnatural thus to contrast a 'waiting and groaning' confessedly figurative, with a 'waiting and groaning' confessedly real? (2) Because while Adam, the representative of created rationality, was made subject to vanity, 'willingly,' of his own free choice, act, and deed; and while the unregenerate remain subject to it, 'because they love darkness rather than light,' all who, by a new creation, become sons of God, are, though still subject to vanity, not subject 'willingly,' but 'wait' in faith, hope, and submission, for the day of the liberation of the spirit and redemption of the body. (3) Because 'the creature' to be delivered is to enter into the 'glorious liberty of the sons of God,' a liberty that can be enjoyed by none but creatures endowed with intellect and will, and a state of adoption that can be enjoyed by none but regenerate believers. C.

Ver. 24. Saved by hope. Rather, 'in hope.' Not that hope is the cause of salvation, but the means whereby we see what is invisible, and enjoy what is future, ver. 25. C.

23 And not only they, but ourselves also, which have <sup>k</sup>the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves <sup>l</sup>groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body.

24 For<sup>m</sup> we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?

25 But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: <sup>o</sup>for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: <sup>p</sup>but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.

27 And <sup>q</sup>he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, <sup>r</sup>because <sup>s</sup>he maketh intercession for the saints <sup>t</sup>according to the will of God.

28 And we know that <sup>u</sup>all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the <sup>v</sup>called according to his purpose.

29 For<sup>v</sup> whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be <sup>w</sup>conformed to the image of his <sup>x</sup>Son, <sup>y</sup>that he might be the first-born among many brethren.

30 Moreover, <sup>z</sup>whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also <sup>a</sup>justified: and whom he justified, them he also <sup>b</sup>glorified.

31 What shall we then say to these things? If<sup>c</sup> God be for us, <sup>d</sup>who can be against us?

32 He<sup>d</sup> that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, <sup>e</sup>how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?

33 Who<sup>e</sup> shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth.

34 Who<sup>h</sup> is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.

35 Who<sup>i</sup> shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?

Ver. 26. Our infirmities. These are many, but chiefly 'infirmities' of knowledge of the things to be asked of God, or of the manner of patient resignation to God's will, when its final purpose is unknown, or of earnestness and perseverance, and confidence of prayer when it is revealed, Mat. 26. 42; 1 Jn. 5. 14, 15.—The Spirit itself maketh intercession for us—by begetting in us those feelings of the evil of sin, and desires after holiness and glory, that no language can express; even as severe disease cannot be described in words, but becomes perfectly intelligible to the tender-hearted from the groanings of the sufferers. C.

Ver. 28. All things. All events, prosperous or adverse—even the malice of Satan and persecutions of wicked men. C.

Ver. 29. Foreknow. Not as mere subjects of prescience, for all things are thus alike known to him, Ac. 15. 18; but as the objects of his merciful, wise, holy, and righteous choice in Christ Jesus, Ep. 1. 4, 5, 9, 11; 2 Ti. 1. 9. C.

Ver. 39. Nor height, nor depth. Some interpret the phrase of heaven or hell; but how is it supposable that heaven could separate from God? others, of height of honour, or depth of disgrace; others, of highest earthly powers, or deepest plots of enemies; others, of evil spirits in the air, or in hades; others, of haughty speculations of the learned, or gross superstitions of the ignorant, or deep sins of the wicked.—Query. May it not mean that no conceivable distance of place can separate from omnipresent love? * The wish is evidently not to be pressed, as entailing on the apostle the charge of inconsistency in loving his nation more than his Saviour. It is the expression of an affectionate and self-denying heart, willing to surrender all things, even, if it might be so, eternal glory itself, if thereby he could obtain for his beloved people those blessings of the gospel which he now enjoyed, but from which they were excluded. Nor does he describe the wish as ever actually formed; only as a conceivable limit to which, if admissible, his self-devotion for them would reach' (Alford).—P. 1 Ps. 44. 22. 1 Co. 4. 9; 15. 30, 31. 2 Co. 4. 11. ver. 35. 2 By this quotation the apostle shows that suffering is not peculiar to the Christian dispensation. Under the Mosaic economy the people of God had like trials to endure. 38 For <sup>l</sup>I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,

CHAPTER IX.

1 Paul is sorry for the Jews. 7 All the seed of Abraham were not the children of the promise. 18 God hath mercy upon whom he will. 21 The potter may do with his clay what he listeth. 25 The calling of the Gentiles and rejecting of the Jews were foretold. 32 The cause why so few Jews embraced the righteousness of faith.

I SAY<sup>a</sup> the truth in Christ, I lie not, <sup>b</sup>my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost,

2 That<sup>c</sup> I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart.

5 Whose<sup>l</sup> are the fathers, and <sup>o</sup>of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, <sup>p</sup>who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.

6 Not<sup>p</sup> as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For <sup>q</sup>they are not all Israel which are of Israel:

7 Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but, <sup>r</sup>In Isaac shall thy seed be called.

8 That is, <sup>s</sup>They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: but the children of the promise are counted for the seed.

9 For this is the word of promise, <sup>t</sup>At this time will I come, and Sara shall have a son.

10 And not only this; but <sup>u</sup>when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac;

REFLECTIONS.—What dreadful work hath sin made in the world! In the most debasing manner it has turned the natural bent of our heart towards earthly things, and into a fixed and malicious opposition to, and hatred of, God and his law. It has brought corruption and curses on the whole lower creation; and its distresses and infirmities still cleave even to believers. But great is their safety, comfort, honour, and happiness, who are united to Jesus Christ. Their justification is complete; their nature and life are really renewed; and grace given, governs them. Their present beginnings of spiritual-mindedness, possession of Christ's Spirit, conflicting with remaining sinfulness, heirship with Christ, suffering for his sake, and supplication for his mercies, are earnestness and pledges of, and shall quickly issue in, their complete and everlasting glorification. Already all things promote, and the perfections, purposes, and providences of God, and the justifying death and powerful intercession of Christ, secure their full and eternal welfare.

Why then do we not always triumph in what he is to us, and has done and will do for and to us? Why do we not always rejoice exceedingly in hopes of the glory of God? Why are we not constantly wrapped up in wonder—all inflamed by the views of his redeeming love? No created thing should ever disquiet our hearts, since nothing can separate us from Jesus' person, except our own unbelief.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 1, 2. I should have been inexpressibly glad had I been able on good grounds to affirm that the whole of my Jewish brethren were the peculiar objects of God's redeeming favour, and heirs of his distinguished blessings which I have just now mentioned; and I dare, in the most solemn, candid, and Christian manner, appeal to the all-seeing Jesus Christ and his Holy Spirit, who search the hearts and try the reins of all the children of men, that my mind is exceedingly overwhelmed with grief and pain, as a woman in travail, whenever I think of their present

11 (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God, according to election, might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;)

12 It was said unto her, 'The elder<sup>4</sup> shall serve the younger.<sup>5</sup>

13 As it is written, 'Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.

14 What<sup>a</sup> shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid.

15 For he saith to Moses, 'I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.

16 So<sup>d</sup> then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy.

17 For the scripture saith unto Pharaoh, 'Even<sup>9</sup> for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might show my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.

18 Therefore<sup>h</sup> hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth.<sup>6</sup>

19 Thou wilt say then unto me, 'Why doth deplorable condition by means of their unbelief. 3-5. I could cheerfully submit to the greatest sufferings which can be endured without sinning; be cut off from life in the most tremendous manner, and be excommunicated from all the churches of Christ on earth; or even for a time cut off from all delightful communion with himself; if it could avail to promote his glory in the faith and salvation of these my dear countrymen, who are descended from Jacob the renowned wrestler with God, and have been nationally adopted as the peculiar people and children of God, and not a few of them made his spiritual children, by faith in Jesus Christ: who have had his glorious temple, ark, mercy-seat, Shekinah, and other visible tokens of his peculiar presence, granted to them; and have been brought into his promise for temporal and spiritual blessings, which has been frequently confirmed to them; and have, in a most solemn manner, received his laws—moral, ceremonial, and judicial; his ordinances of worship, and promises of blessings—temporal, spiritual, and eternal; and have Abraham, Isaac, David, and many other holy men, for their natural ancestors; and from among whom, in respect of his manhood or human birth, the Messiah sprung, who, in his divine nature, is infinitely blessed in himself, the object of all adoration, and the most High over all the earth. 6-13. But though, to the grief of my soul, the bulk of the Jewish nation are now in a most deplorable condition through their own rejection of the gospel, yet it must not be imagined that God's word of promise which he made with their fathers is disannulled, or has failed of accomplishment; for all the natural descendants of Jacob were never considered by God as true Israelites, interested in the saving blessings of it.—The restriction of Abraham's honourable seed to Isaac, who was born by means of supernatural influence, and his descendants, to the exclusion of his posterity by Hagar and Keturah, who were born by natural influence; and the after preference of Jacob, a younger child by the same mother at one birth, and no way superior to Esau in natural goodness of qualities or works, plainly manifested that not natural descent from Abraham, but spiritual conformity in faith, marked the intended heirs of promise; and that the Jewish posterity of these patriarchs should, in due time, for their unbelief, be excluded from the church, and others, no better in themselves, by their faith in God be brought in to fill their room. 14-16. Let none dare to think God unrighteous in making such a wide difference in his choice and disposal of persons equally sinful and unworthy in themselves; for he grants his favors, not according to the vain and empty opinions of men, who might suppose he would bless the most highly favored in a merely worldly point of view, but according to the faith of individuals among men in Jesus Christ. 17. And why may he not, in the same wisdom, as in the case of Pharaoh the oppressing king of Egypt, advance men, no worse in themselves than others, to high stations, and preserve them for a time amidst manifold judgments, in order that, by tremendous acts, he may at last manifest his gracious purposes to all around, in the salvation of the world. 18. From the above instances it is plainly evident that God, in his wisdom, extends his free mercy to such sinful and miserable creatures as accept him, and at the same time leaves those who will not accept him to Satan and their own sinful lusts; that, refusing his Word, ordinances, and providences, they are hardened, as a punishment for their former sin, and as a prelude of the ruin that finally awaits them. 19-21. Let none therefore dare to arraign the most High, as if he were unrighteous in threatening, condemning, or punishing men for that obstinacy in wickedness into which they fall themselves, or as if it were necessary for him to account for bestowing his blessed favours upon some, and withholding them from others; or if a potter, who himself is but a fellow-creature formed of the dust, may, out of the same lump of clay, form vessels for different purposes and degrees of honour without injuring the clay, why may not the most high Creator, Proprietor, and Lord of all dispose of his creatures as best answers the glory of his perfections, when he grants to all alike the opportunities of faith and salvation? 22. Why may not he, for the glory of his great wisdom and manifestation of his loving power and equity upon obstinate and impenitent sinners, defer their punishment, and even load them with many external benefits, till, by their increased sinfulness, they have rendered themselves more notoriously deserving of his rejection and displeasure? 23, 24. And why may he not take this course in order to manifest the transcendent and endearing riches of his glorious grace in the salvation of those who accept Christ and with him everlasting life, and whom he prepares for it by his renewing and sanctifying grace—even all his sinful children, whether Jews or Gentiles. 25-29. From these predictions of Hosea and Isaiah it is plain that God always intended to form a people for himself, by the call of the gospel, where he had none, while only a remnant of the Jews would be saved; and designed, by necessity, to reject those who will not accept him, who reject his mercy and love, on account of their sin, while in free mercy he saves those who have faith, Gentiles as well as Jews. 30. In fulfilment of which predictions, and to manifest which mercy upon the one hand, and his universal love also, the poor, ignorant, idolatrous heathens, who, instead of knowing, concerning themselves about, or endeavouring to perform any good works, had lived in every sinful abomination, have many of them been led by faith to receive and share of the justifying righteousness of Christ revealed and offered in the gospel. 31. On the other hand, the Jewish descendants of Jacob, who, with great but misguided zeal, have pursued after righteousness for justification by their own obedience to the law of Moses, have neither fulfilled nor received any righteousness which can answer the demands of that law for which they are so zealous, or procure their acceptance with God, and title to eternal life. 32. And their falling short of righteousness is not owing to any decree of God hindering them, but to their own pride, perverseness, and unbelief, through which they refuse to accept it, as provided for them in Christ, and freely offered in the gospel, and desire to be justified, in whole or in part, by their own obedience to the law. 33. For, as Isaiah foretold, they take such offence at Jesus Christ, the only foundation of the gospel church and of all salvation, on account of his mean parentage, appearance, poverty, and crucifixion, the spiritual nature of his kingdom, and his humiliating doctrines, that they cannot think of owing any part, much less the whole, of their salvation to him alone.

Ver. 3. I could wish. The word in the Greek is in the imperfect indicative, and not in the optative mood, as our translation has it, and should therefore be rendered 'I did wish' or 'was desirous.' The passage would then read thus: 'I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart for I myself was desirous of being accused—separated—an anathema, from Christ) for my brethren, &c. He pitied his brethren the more feelingly, because once (like them) he had desired to be separated from Christ; see Ac. 26. 9; Mat. 27. 25 (An Anon. Correspondent).—The verb translated "wish" would have here been more correctly rendered "boast," when the passage would read thus: "I have great heaviness, &c. (for I myself made it my boast to be separated from Christ) for my brethren, &c. (Haldane).—This translation would also remove the difficulty of the passage; but it must be acknowledged that in the New Testament the word is uniformly translated 'to will,' in the sense of desire, 'to pray,' 'to wish,' 'to rejoice,' Ac. 26. 29; 27. 29; 2 Co. 13. 7, 9; 3 Ju. 2, while the word translated 'boast' is uniformly different, Ro. 2. 17, 23; 2 Co. 7. 14; Ep. 2. 9; Ja. 4. 16, &c.; and though the proposed version may be sustained by classical use, yet the use of the word in the New Testament seems the only admissible standard. C.

Ver. 13. The word 'hated' cannot be diluted down to 'slighted,' or 'less favourably regarded.' Yet the apostle surely speaks of Jacob and Esau personally, for he speaks of them before they were born—of the one before he was capable of doing good; of 27 Esaias also crieth concerning Israel, 'Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved:

28 For<sup>a</sup> he will finish the work,<sup>1</sup> and cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth.

29 And as Esaias said before, 'Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodoma, and been made like unto Gomorrha.

30 What shall we say then? That the Gentiles, which <sup>a</sup>followed not after righteousness, have<sup>y</sup> attained to righteousness, even the righteousness which is of faith.

31 But Israel, which <sup>a</sup>followed after the law of righteousness, hath not attained to the law of righteousness.

32 Wherefore? <sup>a</sup>Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they <sup>b</sup>stumbled at that stumbling-stone;

33 As it is written, 'Behold, I lay in Sion a stumbling-stone and rock of offence: and <sup>d</sup>whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.'

CHAPTER X.

5 The scripture sheweth the difference betwixt the righteousness of the law, and this of faith, 11 and that all, both Jew and Gentile, that believe, shall not be confounded, 18 and that the Gentiles shall receive the word, and believe. 19 Israel was not ignorant of these things.

BRETHREN, my<sup>a</sup> heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.<sup>1</sup>

the other, before capable of doing evil. But can this be vindicated or explained? Just as far as any of the unsearchable judgments of God can be vindicated or explained, Ro. 11, 33. Perhaps two views of the subject limit the human understanding. (1) The distinction between Jacob and Esau is a fact, declared on divine authority, which it becomes not the creature to call in question. (2) The sovereignty of God is not a solitary and independent attribute, but God ruling in the exercise of all his attributes of power, wisdom, justice, holiness, goodness, mercy, and truth: see Dr. A. Thomson's Sermons, p. 11. Such a ruler cannot do otherwise than right. And if any, on the ground of these attributes, deny the possibility that God should make the distinction before the children were born, the same grounds will present the same difficulty in making it at the day of judgment. Nor is the difficulty one whit lessened by resolving the distinction into national privileges; for if national privileges convey any spiritual advantages, the difficulty returns in all its force: and if they convey none, what is their use? And it may be the distinction was made on the foreseen differences of character, so that the blessing is of 'God that sheweth mercy,' and of man that 'will eth and obeyeth,' see ver. 15, 16. Hear then the sum of the matter: it is not what man can explain, but what has God revealed? See Haldane's Exposition, C.

Ver. 32. This verse demands special notice, on account of its testimony to the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ. (1) There can be no question that the stumbling-stone of the Jews was Jesus Christ, whom they rejected, 1 Co. 1, 23; 1 Pe. 2, 5-8. (2) Hear the prophet Isaiah, ch. 8, 14; 28, 16—'Sanctify the LORD of hosts himself: and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread. And he shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence, to both the houses of Israel,' &c. (3) Now surely what the prophet affirms of the LORD of hosts, the apostle applies directly to Christ: wherefore the conclusion is inevitable, that Jesus Christ is the LORD OF HOSTS, 'God manifest in the flesh.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Certain and manifest is the supreme Godhead of Jesus Christ and his Spirit, who search men's hearts, and by whom they may swear. And very marvellous in himself, and just suited to our need, is he who is at once a true man, the promised seed of the patriarchs, and the most high God, blessed for ever. Great is the honour and mercy to stand related to God as church-members, and to enjoy their privileges. Yet, alas! many such, through their unbelief, fall short of spiritual and eternal salvation! But whether men be saved or lost, the purposes of God are executed, and his promises fulfilled. How deep, how wise and endearing, is his saving love towards guilty sinners, Gentiles as well as Jews, without any regard to their natural goodness! And righteous is his whole conduct, as he withholds from none what he ought to give them, and punishes none but on account of their sins, by which they deserve and are fitted for destruction. Gloriously he marks his compassion over his creatures. And it is absurd then to quarrel with his dispensations, or to pry into or perplex ourselves with his secret purposes, especially when his Word, which is our only rule, gives all reasonable encouragement to faith and holiness as the means of manifesting our salvation. Yea, men's quarreling with the tenderness, mercy, or justice of his conduct, will result in leading men to judicial blindness and incurable hardness of heart. Multitudes really prevent their own justification and salvation by seeking righteousness in their own works, in opposition to the righteousness of Christ. But happy and full is their deliverance who rest on him alone for righteousness and strength.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1. Notwithstanding these awful hints concerning God's rejection of my Jewish brethren which I have suggested, my most earnest desire and prayer to him is, that, as far as can possibly consist with his glory, he would prevent the miseries which are justly impending over their heads, and give them faith in Christ, to their present and everlasting salvation. 2. For however they hate, reproach, and persecute me, I must think and testify that many of them have a real zeal for God and his laws; but, alas! wholly misguided, leading them off from Christ and the true method of righteousness and salvation. 3. For through their own chosen carnality and ignorance—having mean and unworthy thoughts of the righteousness of God's nature, manifested in the strict demands and awful penalties of his law, and of that perfect righteousness of obedience and suffering by which Christ satisfied his law and justice—they exert them-

3 For they being <sup>a</sup>ignorant of 'God's righteousness, and <sup>g</sup>going about to establish their own righteousness, <sup>h</sup>have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.

4 For Christ is <sup>i</sup>the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

5 For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, <sup>j</sup>That the man which doeth those things shall live by them.<sup>2</sup>

6 But the <sup>k</sup>righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, <sup>l</sup>Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to <sup>m</sup>bring Christ down from above:)

7 Or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to <sup>n</sup>bring up Christ again from the dead.)

8 But what saith it? <sup>o</sup>The word is nigh thee, <sup>p</sup>even in thy mouth,<sup>3</sup> and in thy <sup>q</sup>heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach;

9 That <sup>r</sup>if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and <sup>s</sup>shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

10 For with the heart man believeth <sup>t</sup>unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made <sup>u</sup>unto salvation.

11 For the scripture saith, <sup>v</sup>'Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.'

12 For<sup>v</sup> there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.

13 For<sup>x</sup> whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

14 How<sup>y</sup> then shall they call on him in whom <sup>d</sup> In the first part of this chapter it is Paul's object to show, that while, as a nation, the Jews were cast off from God's special favour, yet their rejection was not total. A remnant, a portion, of them would still be saved. Of that portion Paul himself was one. His conversion was an evidence that all Jews were not cast off. This truth he lays down, as usual, by a direct and emphatic statement. Then he proceeds to prove when broken became 'weak through the [sinful] flesh,' and so incapable of conferring life, God, by sending his Son, condemned sin in the flesh, and brought in everlasting righteousness; which righteousness becoming, through faith, the property of the believer, every such believer receives eternal life, which is the gift of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. C.

Ver. 12-14. By comparing this passage with Joel 2. 32, where it is said that 'whosoever shall call upon the name of the LORD (JEHOVAH, shall be saved,' it will be impossible to doubt that the name JEHOVAH is transferred to Christ; and, consequently, for any who receive the Scripture as decisive evidence, it will be impossible to deny his Godhead. C.
Ver. 18. Ps. xix., from which this quotation is taken, speaks primarily of the natural sun and other heavenly bodies, with the constant succession of day and night, and seasons. But these being all so many emblems of 'the Sun of Righteousness' (Mal. 4. 2), his secondary lights (Mat. 5. 14-16), and the progressive advancement of the great gospel year (Lu. 4. 19), the passage is quoted, not by way of accommodation, as it is called, but as receiving a spiritual fulfilment as literal as that which is natural. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers very earnestly desire and pray for the salvation of their hearers. And it is a great grief and burden to their spirits that so many, through ignorance, pride, and attachment to self-righteousness, refuse Jesus and his righteousness and salvation so freely offered. But infinite is the mercy that he and all his fulness are so fit for us, and brought so near to us in the gospel; and that this gospel is now extended to Gentiles as well as Jews, and is so long continued even to the most criminal despisers thereof. The glad tidings of mercy and grace which it contains are suited to the diversified conditions of all the sinful men who hear it. And with full persuasion and close application ought we then to embrace it.—With boldness and fidelity ought ministers to preach it. And highly should they be esteemed, if faithful, for their work's sake. But it is criminal and dangerous to attempt preaching without a commission from Christ, or to continue rejecting him and his gospel till the time of God's patience hath expired.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1. From these awful hints by the prophets, and the no less awful present appearances of things among the Jews, we must not conclude that God has universally and for ever abandoned his whole favourite nation, who have so long been his peculiar people, in visible covenant with him. No; I myself, to whom, notwithstanding the greatest unworthiness and guilt, his grace has been exceeding abundant, am an Israelite, of the very meanest and first miscreant tribe. 2-5. Whatever he has done with multitudes of the natural descendants of Jacob, and might justly do with them all, for their many heinous provocations, yet he has rejected none who, because of faith, he chose to special and saving benefits; but, as in the days of Elijah, when idolatry and other wickedness so remarkably prevailed that he thought scarcely a true worshipper of God but himself remained among the ten tribes, the Lord, knowing all, saw no less than seven thousand; so now, notwithstanding our general and deplorable infidelity, a large remnant have been graciously led to believe in Christ to the saving of their souls, according to that free choice which God, from all eternity, determined men should exercise in accepting the offers of mercy or in rejecting the same. 6. And if the choice, calling, and saving of some rather than others be entirely the effects of their faith in his word, then it is plain that no mere good works deserved or moved him to it; nothing being more evident than that the loving, tender favour and mercy of God, and the merit of men's good works, are so directly contrary the one to the other that they cannot be blended together; but salvation, from first to last, must be simply of faith, to the exclusion of works. 7-10. The present state of the Jewish nation stands therefore precisely thus, that all such of them as have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ shall be saved from their sins and shall be blessed in him; but the rest, who are the far greater part, are in the universal providence of God, and according to his predictions by Isaiah and David, given up to their own lusts, to blind and harden themselves, as in spite of all God could do to save they reject Christ, and bring on themselves he foreknew. Wot ye not what the scripture saith of Elias? how he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying, 3 Lord,<sup>d</sup> they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life.

4 But what saith the answer of God unto him? <sup>e</sup>I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.
5 Even<sup>h</sup> so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace.
6 And<sup>i</sup> if by grace, then is it no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise work is no more work.
7 What then? <sup>j</sup>Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but <sup>k</sup>the election hath obtained it, <sup>l</sup>and the rest were blinded<sup>2</sup>
8 (According as it is written, <sup>m</sup>God hath given them the spirit of slumber,<sup>3</sup> eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear;) unto this day.
9 And David saith, <sup>n</sup>Let their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumbling-block, and a recompense unto them:
10 Let<sup>p</sup> their eyes be darkened, that they may not see, and bow down their back alway.
11 I say then, <sup>q</sup>Have they stumbled that they should fall?<sup>4</sup> God forbid: but rather <sup>r</sup>through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1. From these awful hints by the prophets, and the no less awful present appearances of things among the Jews, we must not conclude acceptance of our will and affections, we must believe in our crucified and risen Redeemer, in order to the obtaining a complete justifying righteousness in him; and with our mouth we must make a public, open, and resolute confession of him as such before the world; and must plead what he hath done and suffered, as the only ground of our hope towards God, if we would obtain a final and complete salvation. 11-13. And, as was foretold by the prophets Isaiah and Joel, Jews and Gentiles, who believe on and worship him, have now equal access to all the inexhaustible riches of his righteousness, grace, and salvation. 14, 15. It is therefore necessary that the gospel be preached by ministers authorized and sent by Christ, to Gentiles as well as Jews, that they, hearing these glad tidings of salvation, may cordially believe the same, and even highly esteem and regard the publishers of such important declarations and offers of justification, adoption, and eternal glory through him. 16. But, as Isaiah foretold, neither Jews nor Gentiles have generally hearkened to the gracious calls of the gospel, nor yielded up themselves to the authority of God therein by the obedience of faith. 17. Yet it is nevertheless certain that the hearing of it preached by persons divinely authorized is the ordinary mean of God's working faith in men's hearts by the almighty operation of his Spirit. 18-21. And it is plain, as was foretold by Moses and Isaiah, that the gospel, to the no small vexation of the envious Jews, has already been preached, far and wide, among the ignorant and idolatrous Gentiles; and through the saving operation of God's loving grace, hath been attended with no inconsiderable success.—And no less evident is it, as was foretold by Isaiah, that the Jews have obstinately and ungratefully rejected Christ and his gospel, notwithstanding the most endearing, persuasive, and miraculous means, and the long-continued pains taken for their conversion by him, his Spirit, and ministers.

<sup>1</sup>Ver. 4. The end of the law is explained ver. 5. and ch. 7. 10, where the apostle says 'it was ordained to life.' Now as the law miseries, spiritual and temporal, in this world, as well as everlasting destruction in that which is to come.

11. Nor has God permitted them to stumble at his crucified Son in order that their whole nation should fall from all their ancient privileges into utter and everlasting ruin; but has overruled their obstinate unbelief into an occasion of sending the gospel to the Gentiles, that the ready reception of it among that idolatrous and detested people might stir up the Jews to vie with them in faith and obedience, that these despised Gentiles might not wholly take away the gospel and its privileges from them. 12. Now, if the apostasy of the Jews, and their falling off from their peculiar relation to God as his people, be, in his infinite wisdom, made a mean of sooner enriching the Gentiles with the gospel and all its inestimable blessings, how much more shall the faith of the Gentiles be confirmed, their blessings increased, and converts multiplied, when, in some future period, the Jewish nation shall be converted to Christ, and enjoy the fulness and privileges of the gospel! 13. It is with great pleasure that I, who reckon myself highly honoured to be the apostle of Jesus Christ for the conversion and edification of you Gentiles, mention this to you for your comfort.

14. And it would give me inexpressible joy and satisfaction if, by this or any other means, I could be an instrument of stirring up my Jewish brethren to bethink themselves and believe in Christ, to their own everlasting salvation. 15. For if God's casting them off from being his peculiar people for their obstinate unbelief has been made an occasion of bringing you Gentiles, by the gospel, into a state of favour and fellowship with him, through faith in his Son, shall not their future general conversion to Christ be a mean of introducing an inexpressibly more glorious, enlarged, and lively condition to the gospel church? 16. And this general conversion we ought to hope for.—For God's sanctification of Abraham and others of their ancestors to his service, and entering them and their seed into special covenant with himself, imports that though for their wickedness the present and many succeeding generations should be cut off from the favour of God and expelled from his church, yet he will, in some future period, from regard to their living faith, convert all who have faith in Christ, and reinstate them in his church. And of this I and others who are already converted are a specimen, pledge, and earnest.

17. But if the natural descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—those friends of God—be, for their obstinate unbelief, cut off and expelled from God's covenant and church, that you, ignorant, unprofitable, and wicked Gentiles, fit only for everlasting destruction, might, in the transcendent mercy of God, be brought into the church as their spiritual posterity, and, along with believing Jews, made partakers of all the promises, ordinances, privileges, and blessings of the gracious covenant made with Abraham; 18. Never insult or condemn these rejected Jews, nor imagine yourselves more worthy than they. Remember ye contributed nothing to the honours and privileges of Abraham and his posterity, but receive your gospel privileges through means of Abraham as their root, and the father of all the nations of them that believe.

19. Think not that they, as superlatively wicked, were expelled from God's church, that you, as better, might be admitted in their stead. 20. It was for their rejection of Christ, and the way of salvation through him, that they were cast out from their peculiar relation to God, and the gospel removed from them to you; and it is only by faith in Christ and his salvation, as freely offered to you, that ye have been admitted to, and continued in possession of, the privileges which they have lost: never therefore ruin yourselves by contempt of others, or by a conceit of your own worthiness, or ability to persevere in your holy profession; but study always to maintain a holy reverence of God, a humble diffidence of yourselves, and a filial fear of falling by unbelief as they have done. 21. For if God would not pass over without fearful punishment the obstinate unbelief of his ancient people descended from Abraham his distinguished friend, what need have ye, who, contrary to all your deserts, have been admitted into his gospel church in their stead, to take heed, lest, by pride and unbelief, you should provoke him to punish you in a similar manner. 22. Observe and ponder therefore with solemn awe the dreadful but just severity which God has exercised towards the obstinate and rejected Jews, and the transcendent mercy and kindness which he has manifested towards you Gentiles in sending his gospel to you, opening your hearts to receive it, admitting you into his church, and rendering you partakers of his blessings, if by an humble faith ye improve his kindness. But if, through pride and unbelief, ye abuse his merciful dispensation, assure yourselves that he will also unchurch you, and all other merely nominal Christians. 23, 24. And know that even the Jewish nation who are now rejected shall, in God's time, by an actual conversion to the faith of Christ, be again made members of his church; for if, by his supernatural compassion, you idolatrous Gentiles, worthless, unprofitable, and wicked, have been brought into his church to render you fruitful in good works, much more may we expect that these descendants of Abraham, with whom God established his covenant in their pious ancestors, shall, by faith in the exalted Messiah, be brought back into the covenant and church of God, from which their unbelief had cut them off, that they may partake of the spiritual benefits thereof. 25. Nay, that ye may not indulge yourselves in vain reasonings or self-conceit, or in contempt of them, know that this strange and tremendous abandoning of most of the Jews to their ignorance and unbelief will only continue till there be a general conversion of the Gentile nations to Christ. 26, 27. And then shall multitudes of all the tribes of Israel be in like manner turned to the Lord, through faith in Christ, as the gracious forgiver of their guilt, subduer of their lusts, and reformer from their sinful practices, manifested to them according to the ancient predictions. 28. In judgment to them, and in order to the merciful spread of the gospel among you, they are indeed now enemies to, and contradicators and blasphemers of it, and have thereby cut themselves off from the blessedness of it; but, with respect to that absolutely gracious choice which God made of them as his peculiar people, they are still the objects of his kind and merciful regard, in consequence of that special favour which he had for Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and other pious ancestors. 29. For the gracious and other blessings which God bestows upon men in consequence of their faith in his blessed word, being constant, we may depend on his infinite wisdom, power, goodness, and unchangeableness, that this chosen nation shall again be turned to the Lord, and multitudes saved with an everlasting salvation. 30. For as ye Gentiles, who had for many ages continued in the most hateful, helpless, and hopeless circumstances, have now, through occasion of their unbelief, been brought into God's kingdom and church, and made partakers of his saving benefits; 31. Even so, in like manner, the generality of the Jews, who now for a time do reject Christ and the gospel, that, through your receiving and preserving the gospel in the world, it may at length be preached unto them, and, through faith in their own Messiah, they may be mercifully restored to their ancient privileges, and all who accept Christ saved. 32. Thus by turns hath God, in infinite wisdom, really seemed to shut up mankind—first the Gentiles and then the Jews—under the power of their disobedience and unbelief, and out of his visible church, that in his own time he may magnify the exceeding riches of his grace, in bringing men of all ranks, among both Jews and Gentiles, to himself. 33. O! the unbounded, the unfathomable depths of his wisdom and knowledge, and of his counsels and dispensations, especially those which relate to the disposing of and preparing men for their eternal state! How impossible is it for created minds to explore the reasons of his determinations with respect to particular persons or nations! And how intricate and unknown are the methods of his providence for accomplishing his great designs! 34. How impossible it is for mere creatures to penetrate into the secret thoughts and noble schemes of his infinite mind, who is the great Sovereign of heaven and earth, and which he, by the most improbable means, pursues in the most unsearchable dispensations of providence! And how impossible for any to assist him in forming his plans, or to direct him in accomplishing them! 35. Very absurd then is it to imagine that any creature, and especially any sinful man, Jew or Gentile, should expect salvation without the mercy of the infinite God, the Creator and Preserver of all. 36. For not only all things relative to his dispensation of justice and mercy, but all things in heaven, earth or hell, of him, as their Contriver, Creator and Cause; and are all preserved, directed, governed, and managed by him; and are all intended, formed, preserved and managed for the glorious illustration of his infinite love.

Ver. 1. The apostle specially describes himself as one of 'the seed of Abraham,' because the word 'Israelite' might describe one who had become an Israelite by proselytism and adoption; and he traces his pedigree to Benjamin as a tribe that had never rebelled against the house of David, nor apostatized to idolatry. C.

Ver. 5. Since the 'election of grace' embraces merely a 'remnant,' that election must be personal to salvation, and not merely national to civil institutions and ecclesiastical privileges. For these institutions and privileges—the latter of which are commonly called the 'means of grace'—were not peculiar to a remnant, but common to the whole nation; see ver. 7. C.

Ver. 7. The rest were blinded—not by any act of God extinguishing their sight, but by that very light of God which they hated, Jn. 3. 19, 20, even as the natural eye of man is blinded by gazing on the sun. Their blinding, however, may be called the act of God so far as it was the consequence of a judicial sentence on their foolish hearts given up to their own counsels and to Satan's power, Ps. 81. 12; Ro. 1. 21, 24, 26, 28; 2 Co. 4. 4. C.

Ver. 17. In ordinary grafting, the good branch is inserted into the wild stock; but Bredenkamp has rendered it certain that it was also customary to ingraft the wilding branch on the more generous stock, by which means the fruitfulness of the garden tree was increased, and the juices and flavour of the wilding corrected and improved. C.

Ver. 22. Otherwise thou also shalt be cut off. A prophetic threatening which has literally been fulfilled upon that very people (the Romans) to whom it was originally addressed. For they, like the Jews, having become ignorant of and opposed to God's righteousness by grace, and going about to establish their own righteousness by works, are (while again, like the Jews, they cut off and excommunicate all others) themselves cut off from that tree from which the church derives all her righteousness and all her life, through faith alone. C.

Ver. 26. That 'all Israel' might signify, not every individual, but the nation generally, is unquestionable, if such distinction 21 For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

22 Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness:<sup>8</sup> otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graff them in again.

24 For if thou wert cut out of the olive-tree which is wild by nature, and wert graffed contrary to nature into a good olive-tree; how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be graffed into their own olive-tree?

25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness<sup>9</sup> in part is happened to Israel, "until the fulness of the Gentiles<sup>1</sup> be come in.

26 And so Israel shall be saved: as it is written, "There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:

27 For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.

28 As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes.

29 For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.<sup>2</sup>

God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief:

31 Even<sup>9</sup> so have these also now not<sup>3</sup> believed, that through your merey they also may obtain merey.

CHAPTER XII.

1 God's mercies must move us to please God. 3 No man must think too well of himself, 6 but attend every one on that calling wherein he is placed. 9 Love, and many other duties, are required of us. 19 Revenge is specially forbidden.

I BESEECH<sup>a</sup> you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

2 And<sup>c</sup> be not conformed to this world: but<sup>d</sup> be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.

3 For<sup>e</sup> I say, through the grace given unto were intimated in the structure of the passage, and provided other scriptures required the limitation. But here the distinction lies between 'part' and 'all,' so that the prophecy appears to point to a blessed time when faith and salvation shall pervade all Israel without exception.—Hasten the time, Lord, for which thou hast taught us to pray—'thy will (shall) be done on earth as in heaven.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Awful is the thought that so many members of the visible church should be eternally rejected and ruined. Yet it is a great mercy that, in the very worst of times, a remnant, larger than many think, are saved; that our whole salvation is owing to faith in Christ; and that not one who remains faithful is lost. But it is absurd for men to attempt connecting their merits with God's grace, as joint causes of their eternal salvation, when the one is utterly evasive of the other. Dreadful are spiritual judgments, especially when least perceived; and awful is the providence when God casts off a person, and especially a nation, which he has long remarkably favoured. It is necessary therefore for all professors humbly to fear and tremble for themselves, and to make sure their standing in Christ by vigorous and often-repeated acts of faith. But when God casts off one nation he supplies their room in his church and covenant with another; and when they are long cast off, God can nevertheless mark his regard to their ancestors, and to his promises made to them, in showing them distinguished favour at last.—Blessed indeed will be the period when both Jews and Gentiles shall be generally gathered to Jesus Christ. May the Lord hasten it in his time! And with reverend awe should we adore and acquiesce in all his purposes and providences, resolving all into his infinite wisdom, power, mercy, equity, and great compassion, and referring the glory of all things, all events, to his name.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. Having thus largely represented unto you the exceeding riches of God's mercy and grace, in the calling, justification, sanctification, and other blessings which all receive who accept Christ by faith, let me affectionately and earnestly beseech you by them, and by all the endearments, encouragements, obligations, and assistances, which result from them, solemnly, cordially, and unreservedly to devote your own selves, soul and body, not as an atoning, but as a living sacrifice of thankful acknowledgment,—that ye are the Lord's, quickened by his Spirit, and vigorously determined, through your whole life, to serve and glorify him; and purified from your sinful lusts, that by faith and evangelical obedience ye may serve him in a spiritual, reasonable, and acceptable manner, answerable to his nature and the obligations ye were under to him. 2. And in order to this, beware of forming worldly schemes of happiness, or of complying with or being moulded into the spirit and temper, courses and fashions, of carnal and worldly men; but let your chief aims and endeavours be to become more and more inwardly renewed by the Holy Ghost, that ye may be more capable of understanding, practising, and recommending the excellent and important truths of God contained in his Word. 3. And in order to your understanding this perfect will of God with advantage to yourselves and others, I, as an apostle of Jesus Christ, do, in his name, charge you that no one of you be puffed up with self-conceit, or contempt of others, by any distinguishing gifts or offices which he hath received in the church, nor entertain a higher opinion of his own gifts, graces, or usefulness, than his spiritual and holy endowments admit of; but that ye be all humble and modest in your thoughts of yourselves, remembering that whatever gifts, graces, or offices ye enjoy, have been freely bestowed upon you by God, for the edification of others as well as yourselves. 4, 5. For as in the human body all the different members are so framed and placed that each may promote the good of the whole body, so we believers, who are united to Christ as his mystical body, and animated by his Spirit, ought all of us, in our different stations and endowments, to consider ourselves as closely knit together by one Spirit under him as our Head, and lay out ourselves to promote the general good of the church and of one another. 6-8. Having therefore received spiritual gifts in different forms and degrees, let us, by the assistance of God, faithfully use and improve them for his glory and the edification of his church, according to our respective offices and stations. If we are called to preach the gospel and explain the Scriptures, let us do it according to the common principles of faith clearly exhibited in the Word of God. If we are called to state, explain, prove, and defend divine truths, and instruct and establish our hearers in them, let us, by searching the Scriptures, and comparing one passage with another, labour to manifest the truth, as it is in Jesus, with all possible plainness and faithfulness. If we are called to apply the Word of God to men's consciences, in exhortation to duty, reproof for sin, caution against sin or danger, or in comforting men under doubts, fears, discouragements, infirmities, temptations, or troubles, let us, with tender sympathy, and dependence on God's direction, deal with them in a manner suited to their circumstances.—If we are called to the office of deacons, for collecting, taking care of, and distributing the church's stock for the support of the poor, the ministers and ordinances of Christ, let us act with the utmost prudence and faithfulness, frugality, cheerful liberality, impartiality, and diligence, as occasions require. If we are called to be officers in the church, for inspecting the manners of the people, admitting them to sealing ordinances, censuring them when scandalous, and directing the circumstances of public worship, let us attend to this work with the greatest application, thoughtfulness, and diligence. And if we are called to visit the sick and imprisoned, let us attend to it with the utmost kindness and compassion, taking care that none of them want what is needful and convenient for them.—9. As to general duties incumbent on you as private Christians, be most careful, sincerely, ardently, and practically, to love Christ, and God in him, above everything else, and your fellow-Christians and neighbours in an unfeigned, hearty, and operative manner. Abhor, flee from, and mourn over everything sinful, as the very worst and the sum of all evil; but desire, choose, pursue after, adhere to, and practise, in heart, speech, and behaviour, whatever is truly honourable to God or useful to yourselves and others. 10. Let not only your mutual affection to your brethren be extremely cordial, tender, and ardent, but also respectful; and think and speak more honourably of your brethren's graces and services than of your own, me, to every man that is among you, <sup>h</sup>not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think <sup>i</sup>soberly, <sup>j</sup>according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.

4 For <sup>j</sup>as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office;

5 So <sup>k</sup>we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.

concealing their weaknesses and faults instead of magnifying and exposing them—being conscious of your own weakness and sinfulness, though earnestly careful to do the duties of your station. 11. Always beware of and avoid an indolent and careless temper and behaviour, whether in civil or religious affairs; and engage in every work you are called to under the influence of the Holy Ghost, and with a fervent love to God, zeal for his glory, and always aiming to serve the Lord Christ, in obedience to his command, and for his honour. 12. And to animate you in your work, always cherish the most joyful hopes of complete salvation as your gracious reward and eternal rest. And in these views and hopes be constantly patient, submissive, and resigned to the will of God in all your present provocations, trials, and afflictions, and sustain them with an abiding and holy courage. And as nothing can be done without divine direction and help, be earnest, importunate, and persevering in your prayers to God, with faith in the name of Christ, for the necessary supplies and aids of his Spirit. 13. Yea, that there may be no defect in your Christian love to others, always make conscience of readily communicating your property for the relief of your fellow-professors, and of laying out yourselves kindly to entertain and lodge in your houses poor strangers or persecuted ministers and Christians. 14. And if ye be maliciously abused and persecuted for righteousness' sake, instead of returning the injuries done you, speak civilly to and as well of your persecutors as truth will permit; heartily wish, pray for, and study to promote their real happiness—temporal, spiritual, and eternal; and supplicate God to convince, forgive, and reform them. 15. Always study a most affectionate and sympathizing temper towards your neighbours and fellow-Christians, as being of the same nature or spirit with them. Instead of envying any their happiness, temporal or spiritual, rejoice with them in it, after the example of God. If any be afflicted, labour by compassionate sympathy to soften and mitigate their distress, and do all that is in your power, by prayer, counsel, and otherwise, to comfort and assist them, for you might have been, or soon may be, in such distressed circumstances yourselves. 16. Whatever differences there may be among you as to less important opinions, outward circumstances, or inward attainments, study to live harmoniously, affectionately, and charitably with one another. Never affect pre-eminence over others, but treat inferiors with the most condescending kindness. Never aspire after great things in this world, but rather look on them with a holy indifference and disdain. If Providence bring you into straits, labour to bring down your minds to them. If it raise you up to temporal wealth or dignity, never set your heart upon or be puffed up with it. Always carry yourselves with the greatest affability, courteousness, and freedom to persons of the lowest rank; and never be ashamed of any proper office of brotherly kindness to the most poor or despicable saint on earth. And whatever honours or endowments God may grant you, never think yourselves wiser than others, or capable of managing your affairs without the direction or counsels of God or men. 17. If any shall injure you, never imitate their evil example, nor make yourselves partakers of their guilt, by revengefully doing anything passionate, unjust, or hurtful to them; but always labour to contrive and pursue such methods, or procure such things, as are manifestly good, generous, and honourable, not only in the sight of God, but of all the unprejudiced part of mankind, that the worst of your enemies may never be able to upbraid you with doing anything unworthy or indecent. 18. And however difficult it may be in some cases, labour, as far as is consistent with truth and faithfulness, honour, and conscience, to cultivate a peaceable and quiet temper and carriage in all your dealings with persons of all ranks, professions, and characters, since on this the beauty, order, and happiness of society, civil or sacred, your own comfort, and the credit of religion, so much depend. 19. And since it is the supreme right and prerogative of God himself to inflict just punishments on such as deserve them, either by his own immediate judgments, or by the equitable laws of civil government, never take any private revenge for yourselves upon such as have injured you, nor even prosecute them at law, from a litigious and resentful temper of spirit; but rather endeavour to turn away their wrath by soft answers and a yielding conduct, or retire out of the way of their violence; and if they will continue their rage against you, calmly leave them to the righteous judgment of God. 20. Yea, if any who have injured, abused, and persecuted you, be reduced to afflicted and necessitous circumstances, carefully seize the opportunity, and assist and relieve them to the utmost of your power; for by such kind and merciful conduct you will either mollify their spirit, and render them your penitent and fast friends, or, if they remain obstinately ungrateful and perverse, they will but aggravate their guilt, and bring upon themselves the most lasting, terrible, and destructive judgments of God. 21. Upon the whole, let no ill treatment discompose your spirit, inflame you angry, malicious, and impatient passions, and so enslave your mind, and give your adversaries opportunity of triumphing over you; but labour, by the grace of God, to exercise all meekness, kindness, and forbearance, under the highest provocations, and thus overcome your enemies and your own resentments by returning good for evil.

Ver. 1. The mercies by which the apostle specially obtests believers are—(1) their selection by faith; (2) provision for their conformity to the image of the Son of God; (3) their holy calling to glory and virtue; (4) their deliverance, not from weakness, temptation, or warfare with sin and Satan, but from condemnation; (5) their growth by faith; (6) their living union, as members, with Christ their head; (7) their communion or fellowship with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ; and (8) the secure enjoyment of all the blessings of the promise of grace.—Note. The body is for sacrifice; the mind (ver. 2) for renewal. C

Ver. 6. Prophecy. The word 'prophet' in the Old Testament signifies 'an interpreter,' one who explains the meaning and will of another; and applies equally to the exposition of the Scriptures or the foretelling of future events.—According to the proportion (of the prophetic gift, let him prophesy, which is in proportion to the gift) of faith. Faith in the truth, mercy, and power of God, being the fountainhead of all other gifts. C

Ver. 8. He that giveth. Not the alms of the church, as some think, for that is included in the deaconship, ver. 7; but he that, being rich, 'giveth' of his own store.—Simplicity. Rather, 'liberality,' as in 2 Co. 8, 2; 9, 11, 13, when it refers to private benevolence; and 'impartiality' when it refers to the distribution of public charity.—Cheerfulness. Alacrity in act, and kindness of manner. C

Ver. 11. The word translated 'business' signifies rather 'zeal' or 'energy'; and the scope of the passage shows that Paul is speaking of Christian graces and duties, not of the business of this world. To make such an application of this passage in exposition, or in popular address, is a misinterpretation of the apostle's language. P

Ver. 16. Be of the same mind one toward another. This is a very precious and most important injunction. Its full significance is scarcely brought out in our version. It signifies that Christians are under all circumstances to regulate their words and conduct to and toward each other by the most delicate feelings of kindness and forbearance. All bitterness, envy, and strife are to be systematically avoided. Alas! how seldom do the members of different churches and sects act upon this principle! P

Ver. 18. If it be possible, &c. Never be the aggressors; never refuse a reasonable apology; be always ready to forgive; and sacrifice, as far as justice to others will permit, both your feelings and interests, for sake of peace. C

Ver. 20. Some think the apostle to mean, that as 'coals of fire' fuse the hardest metals, so acts of undeserved kindness will soften the hardest heart. But the original, quoted from Pr. 25, 21, 22, can give no such meaning; and the fact that the continued beneficence of our Lord had no such meliorating influence on the hearts of the Jews, shows that the passage is to be interpreted according to the obvious meaning of the words—to wit, that the benevolence of Christians towards their enemies will aggravate both their guilt and their punishment. C

Ver. 21. Be not overcome of evil. 'To yield to anger would be to be conquered by an enemy. He acts as the Christian who yields not to anger, but remains without wrath under insult and ill treatment.' Haldane.

REFLECTIONS.—God's endearing mercies should powerfully promote our grateful dedication of ourselves to him and his service. And it becomes professed Christians to have their hearts weaned from the profits, pleasures, and cares of this present world, and from its sinful practices and customs, and to labour after a thorough conformity to the image of God, and an experimental, practical, and approving acquaintance with everything good. It is very honourable when, amidst great gifts, graces, and services, we keep up humble thoughts of ourselves and a high esteem of others, and account whatever we have as freely bestowed on us for the good of the church. Great is the kindness of Christ in so plentifully providing gifts, graces, offices, and officers, for the edification of souls. And it is delightful when all, with integrity, diligence, and cheerfulness, are employed for that end. O! what undissembled and ardent love to God and man; what hatred of everything evil; what diligence in our callings; what joyful hope of eternal happiness; what patient resignation; what fervent and persevering prayer; what cheerful liberality; what profound humility; what cordial sympathy; what harmonious concord and peacefulness; what disinterested returning of good for evil—is necessary to enter into the character of a Christian! And great is the grace and power of God which is necessary to work all these in our heart and life.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1. And whether ye be Jews or Gentiles, ministers or people, see that ye conscientiously submit to and cheerfully obey the civil governors who rule over you, in everything lawful; for they are advanced to their dignity by the providence of God, derive their whole authority from him as the supreme Governor of the world, and therefore ought to be acknowledged and obeyed as his deputies and vicegerents. 2. Whoever therefore they be, and of what religious profession or worldly circumstances soever, who, in their private capacity, oppose any lawful command of the civil government which is providentially set over them, and in a seditious and treasonable manner endeavour to disturb, defame, and subvert it, they rebel against the authority of God himself, and oppose an ordinance which he has appointed in his law, natural and revealed, for the protection, safety, and welfare of mankind, and expose themselves to severe punishment from their rulers, and to the everlasting wrath of God who appointed them. 3. For according to the end of their institution, civil rulers are not authorized by God to punish men for or deter them from anything truly good and lawful, but to restrain and punish what is manifestly injurious and disturbing to the commonwealth, and dishonourable to God their supreme Governor, for the caution of others, and to preserve them from the like conduct. If therefore you would be safe from all danger of punishment by them, always live quietly and peaceably, in all godliness and honesty, doing what is morally and politically good; and then you may ordinarily expect the protection, commendation, and encouragement of magistrates, instead of their severe resentment. 4. For by the very nature of their office, magistrates are God's deputies, whom, for the common benefit of mankind in this imperfect state, he has authorized to suppress vice, immorality, and profaneness, and to maintain his honour, as the Lord of the world, and the natural, civil, and religious rights of their subjects. If therefore you violate the moral and political laws of their government by doing what tends to dishonour, weaken, or destroy it, you expose yourselves and families to the most dreadful consequences, magistrates being obliged, as the deputies of God, to punish such as are turbulent or chargeable with any other notorious crimes. 5. Ye are therefore bound to pay all due subjection and obedience to magistrates, not only for avoiding that punishment which they are able and bound to inflict upon the injurious and rebellious, but chiefly from a principle of 5 Calvin brings out with his usual clearness the sense of this injunction:—To put on Christ means our being surrounded and protected in every part by the virtue of his Spirit, and thus rendered fit for the performance of every duty of holiness. For the image of God, which is the only ornament of the soul, is thus renewed in us. For Paul regards the end and design of our calling; since God, by adoption, engraves us into the body of his only-begotten Son, on condition that we renounce our former manner of life, and become new men in Christ Jesus.—P.

but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

4 For he is <sup>a</sup>the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

5 Wherefore<sup>e</sup> ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

6 For, for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

7 Render<sup>g</sup> therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; <sup>h</sup> fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.

8 Owe<sup>i</sup> no man any thing, but to love one another: <sup>j</sup> for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

9 For this, <sup>k</sup> Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, <sup>l</sup> Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

10 Love<sup>n</sup> worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that, knowing the time, that <sup>o</sup> now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for <sup>p</sup> now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

religion and conscience towards God, regarding their office as his ordinance, and themselves as his deputies, placed over you in his providence, and acting in his name and authority, in all their lawful injunctions, to whom, as guardians of the state under himself, he requires you to be subject. 6, 7. And since they are the deputies of the most high God, who, by virtue of their office and power derived from him, lay out themselves continually for the security of the rights and liberties of their good subjects, and the restraint and punishment of malefactors, make conscience of honestly paying whatever taxes are laid upon you for the support and dignity of government; and always labour to cultivate a becoming reverence and esteem of them in your minds as your political fathers and lords; and manifest it in every proper expression of outward homage, honour, or respect. 8–10. Never be either backward or dilatory to pay the tax you owe them or the debt you owe any other; and never think the just debt of love which you owe to all mankind fully paid, but in all circumstances, and by all proper means, desire, contrive, and labour how to exercise it best for their advantage.—For in love to our fellow-creatures in its due latitude and fervour, as founded upon and springing from our love to God, and from a sense of his love to us in Christ, we really fulfil all the commandments of the second table of the moral law relative to chastity, preservation of life, furtherance of wealth, maintenance of truth, charitable contentment, and relative duties; for whenever unfeigned and fervent love reigns in the heart, it sweetly and powerfully restrains from desiring, designing, or willingly doing anything hurtful, and constrains to the performance of every kind office to every one; and so is radically and intentionally a compliance with all the duties of the second table of the law, and will render a man sincerely desirous of and diligent in performing them. 11. And the more careful ought we to be in cultivating this comprehensive duty of love, as now, under the light and grace, assistances and encouragements to the gospel dispensation, it is high time for us to shake off all our sloth and carnal security, that Jesus Christ may not, in death or judgment, find us asleep; for now our deliverance from persecution, and chiefly our complete salvation in heaven, is much nearer than when we first believed on him for it. 12. And since not only this night of our outward troubles, but also of our ignorance, unbelief, and sinful courses, is now far spent, and the day of gospel light hath begun to dawn in our souls, and the day of complete redemption is at hand, let us labour to mortify our shameful lusts, and shun every sinful and dangerous practice, and daily grow in and exercise the precious, pure, heart-comforting, and adorning graces of God's Spirit, in opposition to the temptations and terrors of sin, Satan, and the world. 13. Let us constantly, uniformly, and progressively behave in a manner suited to our Christian character, and the privileges which we enjoy or expect—carefully avoiding all excessive feasting and carousing, revellings, and debaucheries; all whoredom in heart, looks, words, actions, or dress; all angry contentions and brawlings; and all envying or grudging at the prosperity of others. 14. And, on the contrary, let us by faith constantly receive, profess, and improve the Lord Jesus Christ, as our head and husband, &c., made of God unto us righteousness and sanctification. Let us study to be conformed to him in heart and life, as a mean of rendering us meet for the heavenly blessedness, and of recommending him to all around us; and let us never inordinately consult, care, or provide for our body, to the neglect of our spiritual concerns; nor contrive what may promote or gratify our sinful inclinations.

Ver. 1. The apostle does not speak of forms of government—which even in Israel, under divine authority, were various—but of powers, which he attributes directly to the appointment, and not mere permission, of Almighty God, Ps. 62. 11. C.

Ver. 2. That scriptural non-resistance to civil rulers does not necessarily include compliance with every command and requirement, may be seen from Ac. 4. 18, 19; 5. 28, 29, 42, where Peter and 6 Since 'we must all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ;'—since the words of Is. 45. 23 (which are spoken in the person of JEHOVAH, besides whom (as 'a just God and a Saviour') there is no God, ver. 21) are by the apostle distinctly applied to Christ;—and since those who 'must stand before the judgment-seat of Christ,' stand there that each may 'give account of himself to God,' it surely follows that Christ is Jehovah, besides whom there is no God.—C.

7 For<sup>k</sup> none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

9 For<sup>l</sup> to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.

10 But <sup>m</sup>why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for <sup>n</sup>we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ.<sup>6</sup>

John went peaceably to prison, but peremptorily refused, even by silence, to comply with the ungodly prohibition of the Sanhedrim. C.

Ver. 4. This is the proper description of the civil magistrate:—(1) He is God's minister—God's servant—bound, appointed, to obey him. (2) The first object of his appointment is to do good to them that do good, ver. 3, and good in every form in which it is possible for the power of man to attempt or effect it. (3) He is invested with sufficient power for restraint of the wicked, and also for redressing and avenging wrong. C.

Ver. 8. Owe no man anything—when it is a debt of respect and honour which every right-hearted man can pay: and when it is a debt of money, owe nothing that present means, diligence, frugality, and self-denial can enable you to pay. C.

Ver. 11. And that knowing the time. Rather, 'and especially (attend to all these holy duties) knowing the time' which is quickly passing away, and calling upon us hourly to redeem it, Ep. 5. 16, saying, 'Awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation (our complete deliverance from this body of sin and death, ch. vii.) nearer (its consummation in victory over the last enemy, 1 Co. 15. 26) than when we believed.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Divine is the appointment, and advantageous the right exercise, of magistracy. And what a promoter of the peace, order, and happiness of nations is the Christian religion! While it directs rulers how to discharge their high trust as deputies of God, it requires the subjects to revere, honour, obey, support, and reward them as such.—An exact honesty in the contracting or payment of debts ought to mark every Christian. And Christian love to our neighbour is a permanent duty, and an amiable and powerful restraint from vices, and constraint to everything virtuous. No murder, adultery, theft, falsehood, covetousness, or relative disorder, can consist with it. But how imperfect, dark, dangerous, and transient is the present state of things on earth! Great is the mercy that eternal happiness daily approaches nearer to every believer. The faith and contemplation of these things should make us effectually to shake off our sinful indolence and unconcern; to avoid and abhor luxury, uncleanness, strife, and envy; and to receive Jesus, and his righteousness and grace, that we may be always perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1. And whereas there are different opinions among you about the continued obligation of some ceremonial rites of the Old Testament dispensation, I earnestly entreat you Gentile believers, who have more distinct views of the liberty of the gospel dispensation, to admit to your church-fellowship and intimate friendship such Jews as still have some prejudices and scruples with respect to the abolition of these ceremonies, and beware of troubling them with perplexing disputes about meats, days, or things equally trivial; as these tend rather to puzzle and disquiet their minds than to godly edifying: 2. For some Gentile or other converts, who plainly perceive the abolition of the ceremonial law, have freedom in their own mind to eat every kind of wholesome food; and some Jewish or other converts, through the prejudice of education, think that the Mosaic rules relative to food are still binding; and hence, when they eat with Gentiles, are afraid to eat any flesh at all. 3. In this case let Christian charity and forbearance be exercised on both sides; for God bears with the weakness of the one, and hath accepted and taken the other into his family and church without any regard to ceremonial observances. 4. It is therefore very improper for any of you presumptuously to judge and condemn those whom God hath accepted and approved in their conduct; it is to God, not to you, they are accountable, and by him their state must be decided; and he, having accepted and admitted them, shall establish them in the faith and fellowship, comfort and holiness, of the gospel, and make them to stand with boldness in the last judgment.—5. Some think that the ceremonial seasons ought still to be regarded and religiously observed: others who have clearer views of the gospel state of the church are persuaded that no day but the Christian Sabbath ought to be distinguished from others. 6. As the regards of the Jewish festivals do it from a principle of conscience towards God, and in obedience to what they think to be still his command, and in honour of Christ, who, they conceive, hath confirmed all the ancient institutions of Moses: and as they who do not observe these days forbear from a principle of conscience towards God, with a view to his glory, and to the honour of Christ's having fulfilled and abolished the whole ceremonial laws: so that they who eat every sort of wholesome food aim at the honour of God and of Christ, who is Lord of all; and in asking a blessing on their food, give him thanks for allowing them freely to eat whatever is most suited to their convenience, necessity, and innocent delight; and they who refrain from the meats anciently prohibited, do it with an upright intention to glorify God and Christ, in submitting to his authority in these ancient laws, and which they suppose still binding; and are thankful that enough besides is afforded them by Providence: it is therefore proper that they should, in a Christian manner, bear with one another. 7. None ought, and no true believer will dare, to live as if he were his own lord and master, making his own humour the rule, or his own honour, profit, or pleasure the end of his life: and none ought to make, and no real Christian will make, his own ease or honour the end of his death. 8. For in whatever form or time we live, it ought to be in obedience to the command of Christ, and in order to serve and honour him in all that we think or say, do or suffer; and whether we be cut off by a violent or natural death, it ought to be undergone with resignation to the will and appointment of Christ, who died for us; and with a faithful commitment of our departing spirits into his hand, and a desire to glorify him and his truths, and the power of his grace, in the manner of our death; and to depart and be for ever with him. Whether therefore we live or die, we all ought to consider ourselves as Christ's property, and at his disposal, and relying upon him, labour to glorify him in our bodies and spirits. 9. For to this very end Christ at his Father's commandment laid down his life as an atoning sacrifice for sin, and rose from the dead, and ascended to heaven, that, as Head over all things to his church, he might have an absolute, universal, and loving dominion over them that are dead, or that are, or ever shall be, alive on the earth; and might have full power to direct, support under, and sweeten death to all people, as well as bestow everlasting life upon all who believe. 10. Why then should any of you judge, condemn, and think meanly of your Christian brethren about matters which are in themselves indifferent, when all of us shall in a little time appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, and have all our dispositions, tempers, thoughts, words, and actions judged by him, and our eternal state of misery or happiness fixed in correspondence thereto? 11, 12. For as Christ, to show the irreversible nature of his purpose in this point, has sworn by himself, that every one of mankind shall be obliged to own him as the great God and Judge of all, to whom they are accountable, and by whom their eternal state must be decided, it is plain that all of us, both Jews and Gentiles, of every rank, character, or profession, shall be called to account in the last judgment, not for our neighbours' mistakes and miscarriages, but for our own faith and practice. 13. Let none of us therefore invade Christ's prerogative, by taking upon us to censure and condemn one another; but let us all take care that we never, by a free use of that which is lawful in itself, grieve or ensnare our Christian brethren, or draw them into sin, by tempting them either to go into uncharitable censures, or to do that with a doubting conscience which we do with a satisfied mind. 14. For my part, I know, upon the authority of Christ, and the nature and design of his death, which was to reconcile and take away all religious distinctions between Jews and Gentiles, and to remove the curse which the fall had brought upon our created enjoyments, that no sort of food is in its own nature morally, or now any longer ceremonially, unclean: yet, if any one should think any particular sort of food forbidden by God, his eating of it would violate the dictates of his conscience, and so defile it, by doing what it represented as sinful. 15. Yea, if ye yourselves were ever so fully persuaded that you might eat whatever food comes in your way; yet, if your Christian brethren through weakness should be troubled and offended at it, it would be very untender and uncharitable in you, if ye knew their scruples, to persist in using your liberty before them. Never dare to stagger the faith, wound the conscience, destroy the peace and comfort of a brother, or draw him into damnable sin, for whom it appears Christ, in infinite love, laid down his life. 16. Take heed that your lawful liberty in the use of meats or other indifferent things be not reproached as licentiousness through your imprudent and unseasonable use of them to the scandalizing of your weaker brethren. 17. But, after all, the nature, glory, and blessedness of the gospel dispensation, or of the kingdom of grace thereby erected in men's hearts, do not consist in any circumstantial and external things, but in the mind of Christ imparted, in true holiness of heart and life, in a solid peace in our own souls, and a peaceful temper and carriage towards others, under a sense of God's being reconciled to us through Christ; and in those supernatural and divine comforts which the Holy Ghost imparts to us through the Word. 18. And whoever, in these substantial points of vital religion, behaves as a faithful servant of Christ, obedient to him, dependent on him, and aiming at his glory, is, through him, acceptable to God in his person and services, and is approved by all good and wise men as a sincere Christian, whatever be his opinion in things indifferent.

11 For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.

12 So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

13 Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.

14 I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean.

16 Let not then your good<sup>1</sup> be evil spoken of:

17 For<sup>2</sup> the kingdom of God is not meat and drink;<sup>2</sup> but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

18 For<sup>a</sup> he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men.

19 Let<sup>b</sup> us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.

20 For<sup>c</sup> meat destroy not the work of God. All things indeed are pure; but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.

21 It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.

22 Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.

23 And he that doubteth<sup>3</sup> is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatso- ever is not of faith is sin.

CHAPTER XV.

1 The strong must bear with the weak. 2 We may not please ourselves, 3 for Christ did not so, 7 but receive one the other, as Christ did us all, 8 both Jews 9 and Gentiles. 15 Paul excuseth his writing, 28 and promiseth to see them, 30 and requesteth their prayers.

WE then<sup>a</sup> that are strong<sup>1</sup> ought to bear<sup>2</sup> the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

2 Let<sup>b</sup> every one of us please his neighbour for his good to edification.

3 For<sup>c</sup> even Christ pleased not himself; but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.

4 For<sup>d</sup> whatsoever things were written afore-time were written for our learning; that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope.

5 Now<sup>e</sup> the God of patience and consolation grant you to be like-minded one toward another, according to<sup>3</sup> Christ Jesus;

6 That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

19. Let us therefore, instead of laying any stress upon, or contending about, such things, labour to pursue what tends to promote our own inward peace and prosperity, and an amicable temper and conduct towards our brethren in Christ; and to propagate such opinions and practices as may strengthen one another in faith and love, hope and holiness. 20. Never, for the sake of meats, or such like indifferent things, obstruct that harmony, love, and peace, spiritual edification and comfort, which the Holy Ghost produces and delights in. All meats may now indeed be eaten without defilement to the conscience, and to every true believer they are cleansed from the curse brought on them by sin; but it is very sinful and injurious for professed Christians to abuse their liberty in even eating them, or doing things indifferent, when they know it will grieve and stumble a tender-spirited brother. 21. In such cases it is right, kind, prudent, commendable, and well-pleasing to God, to abstain from whatever has any tendency to stumble, discourage, prejudice, weaken, or grieve any of our Christian brethren, or ensnare them into rash censuring or sinful compliances. 22. If therefore ye be fully persuaded that ye may eat all manner of wholesome food, and neglect the observance of the ceremonial festivals, hold it fast, and act according to it on all proper occasions, as in God's sight, and with a view to his glory. Happy is that Christian whose conscience can approve his conduct in every point, as both lawful and expedient. 23. But he who eats meats, or practises anything indifferent, while he doubts of the lawfulness of it, is condemned in his own conscience and by the Word of God; for, in all matters of a religious nature, it is very sinful for us to practise or comply with anything which we do not believe authorized by the Word of God, being at once a contempt of what we allow to be his law and our only rule of faith and practice, and a violation of the restraints of our own conscience.

Ver. 1. It is weak in the faith. Holding things indifferent, such as observance of days and abstinence from particular kinds of food to be matters of paramount importance.—But not to doubtful disputations. Not to harassing controversy on the points where he is ignorant—but rather to strengthen him in those things which he understands, to edify him in love, so that he may be won to a love of all the truth by the loveliness of his intercourse with those who profess it. See ch. 15. 2. C.

Ver. 2. Another eateth herbs. Not as some suppose for fear of eating meat polluted by having been offered to idols, for any man could make himself certain that meat was not so offered, but from the ascetic principle carried so far as to render even eating a species of fasting. C.

Ver. 3. 'The strong' is warned against despising; 'the weak' against judging; and both, being in faith, are mercifully accepted of God. Therefore, 'let not the weak judge him that eateth: for God (who is judge of all) hath received him.' C.

Ver. 17. This 'righteousness' is interpreted by Haldane, not of 'the righteousness of God imparted to the believer,' but of that righteousness 'of which he is the subject.' And as 'peace and joy in the Holy Ghost' are received not merely as gifts, but as powers by which God establishes and maintains a kingdom in the human heart—so righteousness, though a gift (ch. 5. 17), is also viewed as a similar power by which grace reigns unto eternal life, ch. 5. 21. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With great care ought we to extend church-fellowship as far as can tend to the honour of Christ and the mutual edification of church-members in faith and holiness. And no lesser differences, which do not affect the system of divine truth, or the vitals of religion, ought to hinder our mutual intimacy. We have all need to beware of an uncharitable, disdainful, and censorious spirit, and earnestly should we be concerned to comfort ourselves in God's love to us, and to approve ourselves to him, and to our own conscience, in the view of our appearance before his awful tribunal. What reverential thoughts ought we to entertain of Jesus Christ as the great God and Judge of the world! And in the view of his impartial and final judgment with diligent care should we by faith live on his person and fulness, and to his glory, and avoid all uncharitable judging or offending the weakest of his apparent members. Yea, it becomes us always to act from principles of faith and a good conscience in all things, and to promote each others' edification and peace; and always to remember the excellency and spiritual nature of the blessings of his kingdom, that it consists not in anything external, but in righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1. Such of us therefore as are established in the faith of the gospel liberty, or who have arrived to greater measures of knowledge and grace, ought, from a compassionate and tender regard to our Christian brethren, whose faith is staggering, and whose judgment and other spiritual attainments are but small, to be meek, forbearing, and patient towards them, and should make kind allowances for, and endeavour to relieve them, under their prejudices, doubts, and fears, rash censures, and conscientious scruples, and not aim at gratifying our own inclinations, much less our own humour, pride, and passions: nor ought we to do anything which is barely lawful in itself at the expense of offending and injuring the tender minds of others. 2. Let each of us therefore labour to behave towards our fellow-Christians and neighbours in such a condescending and engaging manner as will best soften their temper, instruct and win them, and make their souls to grow in grace and knowledge, comfort and holiness, to complete salvation. 3. For even our blessed and all-sufficient Lord Jesus did not indulge his own ease or pleasure, or seek his own safety or honour, to the neglect of others, when here upon earth; but, to promote our salvation and his Father's honour, condescended and denied himself in numberless instances, and freely submitted to all manner of hardships, sufferings, disgraces, and malignant and blasphemous reproaches, as is represented through David as a type in Ps. lxxix. 4. And whatever things were written in the Old Testament by the inspiration of the Spirit of God, were written, not only for the instruction of our ancestors, but for ours also, that by means of its types, prophecies, histories, and examples, as well as doctrines and laws, we might be excited, animated, and encouraged to proper patience under our troubles, and made partakers of the joys of faith, the peace of a good conscience, and the comforts of the Holy Ghost, in order to confirm our well-grounded hopes of all needful grace from God now, and glory hereafter. 5. In order therefore to your dutiful and successful improvement of the Scripture, may that God who is infinitely patient and long-suffering, and who is the author, fountain, and giver of all Christian patience and spiritual comfort, grant you a harmonious, tender, and peaceful disposition towards each other, that you may be entirely united in all doctrines and duties which belong to your Christian state and character according to the example and command of Christ, and as may be most for his glory, and acceptable to God through him; 6. That, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, ye may, with united hearts and voices, cordially agree in your profession, worship, and practice, to advance the 7 Wherefore <sup>1</sup>receive ye one another, as Christ also received us, <sup>2</sup>to the glory of God.

8 Now I say that <sup>3</sup>Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers;

9 And <sup>4</sup>that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, "For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name."<sup>4</sup>

10 And again he saith, <sup>5</sup>"Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people."

11 And again, <sup>6</sup>"Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people."

12 And again, Esaias saith, <sup>7</sup>"There shall be a root of Jesse,<sup>5</sup> and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust."

13 Now the <sup>8</sup>God of hope <sup>9</sup>fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

14 And <sup>10</sup>I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another.

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the <sup>11</sup>more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, because of <sup>12</sup>the grace that is given to me of God, 16 That I should be <sup>13</sup>the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, <sup>14</sup>that the offering up<sup>6</sup> of the Gentiles<sup>7</sup> might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

<sup>36</sup> 1 Co. 16. 1. 2 Co. viii. ix. Ac. 11. 27–30. 1 Co. 9. 11. Ga. 6. 6. ch. 11. 17.

17 I<sup>2</sup> have therefore whereof I may <sup>3</sup>glory through Jesus Christ in those things which pertain to God.

18 For<sup>a</sup> I will not dare to speak of any of those things which Christ hath not wrought by me, <sup>b</sup>to make the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed, 19 Through<sup>c</sup> mighty signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God; <sup>d</sup>so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ.

20 Yea, <sup>e</sup>so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation:

21 But, as it is written, <sup>f</sup>"To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see; and they that have not heard shall understand."

22 For which cause also <sup>g</sup>I have been <sup>h</sup>much hindered from coming to you.

23 But now having no more place in these parts, and having <sup>i</sup>a great desire these many years to come unto you;

24 Whosoever I take my journey into Spain. I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be <sup>j</sup>brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled with your company.<sup>1</sup>

25 But<sup>k</sup> now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.<sup>2</sup>

26 For<sup>l</sup> it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem.

27 It hath pleased them, verily; and their honours and show forth the praises of God, as your God in Christ, who is the centre of all our spiritual union and fellowship.—7. Notwithstanding therefore your different opinions about matters of little importance, let the endearing example of our great Lord and Saviour in bearing with our infirmities who are believers, and receiving us into favour, union, and communion with himself and his Father, influence you cordially to embrace one another as brethren, without distinction of nations or parties, that ye may glorify God by your harmoniously walking together in faith and love, and in the fellowship of the gospel, till ye arrive at all possible perfection in his glorious presence for ever. 8–12. And to show you how Christ has admitted both Jewish and Gentile believers to equal privileges and blessings, without making any distinction under the gospel state, observe, on the one hand, how he sprung from, and appeared as a member and minister of, the Jewish church, and taught, obeyed, and suffered, to display the faithfulness of God, and to ratify, establish, and render efficacious the gracious promises which had been made to the ancient patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob;—and, on the other, that many of those promises spoken by David, Moses, and Isaiah represent Christ as publishing the truths of God to the Gentiles, and bringing them into his church, as joyful and grateful members thereof, subjected to him as their Head, and trusting in him as their Saviour, along with the Jews. It is therefore proper that both parties should receive each other with all readiness of mind as their brethren in Christ. 13. Now may that gracious God, who is the object, ground, and author of all that hope which we, whether Jews or Gentiles, have of spiritual and eternal blessings, plentifully enrich and satiate you with all sorts of divine joys and comforts, and with an abiding, solid, and evangelical peace in your own souls, and with one another, in the lively exercise of faith in Christ and the promises of the everlasting covenant, that ye may not only have a good but full and assured hope of future blessedness through the powerfully enlightening, strengthening, witnessing, and confirming operation of the Holy Ghost! 14. And indeed I am firmly persuaded that ye, my dear Christian brethren, are abundantly endowed with such benevolent graces of the Spirit as dispose you to mutual kindness in your temper and behaviour one towards another, and with such knowledge of all things necessary to salvation as renders you capable of instructing each other in the most important truths of the gospel, and of admonishing and exciting one another to everything truly virtuous. 15, 16. I have nevertheless written with the greater plainness and freedom on the head of your Christian liberty and obligations to mutual charity, because, by the transcendent grace of God, I have been called and furnished to be an apostolic preacher of Christ and his unsearchable fulness in the gospel, especially to the Gentiles, that many of them, being converted by my ministrations, might be devoted as living, holy, and acceptable sacrifices to God, and might offer up to him the sacrifices of prayer, praise, and charitable contributions,—both they and their services being consecrated by the effusion of the gifts, graces, and sanctifying influences of the Holy Ghost. 17. In consequence of which call to this office, and success therein, I have great reason to rejoice and glory, not indeed in myself, but in and through Christ, by whose grace I have so abundantly and so successfully laboured in preaching the gospel, and bringing multitudes of Gentile sinners to the faith of Christ, to the praise and glory of God. 18, 19. But in this my humble and holy glorying I neither dare boast of anything I have done myself, nor ascribe to myself what others have done, but I merely hint at what Jesus Christ, by means of my preaching, labours, and sufferings, has wrought, by the almighty influences of his Spirit, in bringing multitudes of the Gentiles to receive and profess him as their Lord and Saviour, and to live in obedience to his laws: and encouraged by his miraculous and gracious operations, which attested my call, mission, and the truths which I preached, I have, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, with great freedom, faithfulness, fulness, and success, published the glad tidings of salvation through Christ to sinful men, all along from Jerusalem, through Canaan, Syria, Lesser Asia, and Greece, till I came to Illyricum, at no great distance from Rome. 20, 21. And in my ministrations I have especially studied, agreeably to a prediction of Isaiah, to publish these astonishing mysteries of the gospel where they had never been preached before, that so I might the more remarkably act as one who had received an immediate commission from Christ, and needed no human assistance to introduce me. 22–24. My necessary and extensive labours in these regions have, under the direction of God's providence, hindered me from visiting you, as I sometimes intended; but the gospel being now extensively known, and churches planted in all these places, I hope, according to my long fixed inclination, soon to see you. And if the Lord permit me, as I intend to attempt the propagation of the gospel in Spain, I expect to visit you as I pass westward into that ignorant and idolatrous country, and to be helped forward by you in my journey to it, after you and I have had some comfortable and edifying fellowship together. 25, 26. But at present I am obliged to go south to Jerusalem with the contribution which the Christians of Macedonia and Achaia have made for their holy but poor brethren in Judea. 27. In this the contributors have been extremely forward and cheerful, as indeed just gratitude and common benevolence required that they should; for if the sinners of the Gentiles have received the enriching gospel of Christ from Jerusalem, and by means of Jewish apostles and preachers, and have been thereby made partakers along with the Jews of all spiritual and eternal benefits, it is certainly proper that they in return should assist with their temporal substance the poor Jewish saints at Jerusalem, and the places about. 28, 29. However, when I have manifested my tender regard to my dear countrymen, and have faithfully delivered debtors they are. <sup>2</sup>For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is 'also to minister unto them in carnal things.

28 When, therefore, I have performed this, and <sup>2</sup>have sealed to them this fruit,<sup>3</sup> I will come by you into Spain.

29 And I am sure that, <sup>2</sup>when I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

30 Now<sup>a</sup> I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me;

31 That<sup>r</sup> I may be delivered from them that do not believe<sup>4</sup> in Judea; and that <sup>s</sup>my service which I have for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints;

32 That<sup>t</sup> I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreshed.

33 Now <sup>u</sup>the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

to them this collection, I intend, if the Lord will, to see you on my way to Spain. And from what I have experienced of Christ's powerful operations by me, I hope to come to you plentifully furnished with gospel instructions, offers, and encouragements, and thereby to be an instrument of conveying to you the most abundant gifts, graces, and comforts. 30-32. In order to my accomplishing these desirable designs, I earnestly entreat you, by all the obligations and endearments of the love and grace of Jesus Christ and his Spirit, and by all that love wrought in your hearts by these divine persons, or which you owe to them for all that they have done for or in you, that ye in the most fervent manner join your believing, importunate, and persevering supplications to God with mine, for his guidance, protection, and blessing to me—that I may be delivered from all the snares and violence of my Jewish persecutors, and that the collection which I carry up to Jerusalem may not through prejudice be despised or refused, but kindly accepted by the believing Jews, as a mean of weaning them from their dislike to me and the Gentile converts—and that, being thus prospered in my present way and work, I may, through the kind providence of God, have an opportunity of seeing and conversing with, and preaching to you, for our mutual comfort and edification. 33. Meanwhile, may that God, who is reconciled to us in Christ, and is the Author of all our peace, comfort, and happiness, and who delights in our possessing our souls in peace, and living together in harmony and love, be graciously present with you, by the special influences of his Spirit, to unite your hearts in the strongest brotherly affection, prevent all animosity and discord, and bless you with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus!

Ver. 3. Christ willingly subjected himself to every inconvenience. The birds had nests, the foxes had holes, but Jesus had not where to lay his head. He willingly submitted to every reproach. He was called a glutton, a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners, because, like a skilful and kind physician, he condescended to the society of the sick, that he might heal their souls by teaching them truth, and calling them to repentance. C.

Ver. 13. It is very important fully to comprehend and feel that 'hope, joy, and peace' are altogether gifts of God, and not productions of human power; that they are to be sought by prayer for ourselves, and also by one Christian for another; and that they are to be sought and expected, not in mere fractions of enjoyment, but in the occupancy and 'filling' of the entire soul! C.

Ver. 24. It does not appear from any scriptural record that Paul ever visited Spain. The want of such record is, however, no proof that he did not visit it. Ecclesiastical tradition appears in favour of his visit; nor is such authority, though in many cases an insufficient ground, to be altogether rejected. But whether the purpose of the apostle was fulfilled or frustrated, matters not—the evidence of his inspiration is, in either case, alike complete. He does not say that God had commanded him, but that he desired, to go into Spain; and the Spirit instructed him to record that holy desire, which God might grant or refuse as seemed good in his sight. Thus David desired to build the temple—God approved of the desire, yet refused its fulfilment, reserving it for another. And the sacred historian was alike inspired in recording the desire, the approval of it, as a desire—the denial of its fulfilment, and its transfer to Solomon. C.

<sup>3</sup> By 'sealing' the apostle cannot mean, as some think, 'safely delivering;' for that were to intimate that he doubted the integrity of any other conveyance. Does it not rather mean that the delivery of this charitable contribution from the Gentiles to the Jews would be a practical seal or evidence of the various prophetic promises that the silver and the gold of the Gentiles would be offered at Jerusalem to Messiah, the temple, and the people of God? See Ps. 72. 10, 15. Is. 60. 5-17. Of these promises the offering by Paul was the first-fruits—a type and seal of a progressive but greater fulfilment.—C.

CHAPTER XVI.

3 Paul willeth the brethren to greet many, 17 and adviseth them to take heed of those which cause dissension and offences, 21 and, after sundry salutations, endeth with praise and thanks to God.

I COMMEND unto you Phebe our sister, which is a <sup>a</sup>'servant of the church which is at Cenchrea;<sup>1</sup>

2 That ye <sup>b</sup>receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.

3 Greet<sup>c</sup> Priscilla and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus:

4 Who have for my life laid down their own necks:<sup>2</sup> unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles.

6 Greet Mary, who <sup>g</sup>'bestowed much labour on us.

Ver. 31. The prejudices of many Jewish Christians were yet strong against the Gentiles, and their admission into the church upon any terms but the observance of the Mosaic law. Therefore the apostle prays, and entreats others to pray, that, by the removal of these prejudices, his service may be rendered acceptable. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With much tenderness and self-denial should we behave towards our Christian brethren; and with kind affection bear with one another's infirmities and study one another's spiritual edification. It is an inconceivable mercy to have access to peruse, and a great honour to be diligent students, searchers, and improvers of the holy Scripture. In the ministry of his Son, and the ancient promises, God delightfully laid the foundation of uniting Jews and Gentiles into one gospel church, and he hath done most marvellous things to effect it. Richly replenished are all the promises with Jesus Christ and his grace; and with what joy and peace doth a right believing of them fill our souls! Thrice happy are they who believe them, to their own sanctification of heart and life, by the Spirit of God, and to their eternal salvation. Thrice happy is it when ministers, depending entirely upon God, are diligent, faithful, and successful in preaching the gospel, and multitudes, through the gospel, attended by the influences of the Holy Spirit, are turned to Christ and his service. And it wears a hopeful appearance when the fervent prayers of ministers and people are united in behalf of Christ's interests and for one another's mutual advantage, and when spiritual fellowship is their joint delight.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 2. Readily receive her into your religious fellowship, and assist her in transacting her civil affairs at Rome; for she has generously and hospitably entertained, sheltered, and provided for many poor Christians and destitute strangers. 3, 4. They very much assisted and encouraged me in my ministerial labours at Corinth; and when I was in danger they exposed their very lives in order to save me. 5. Their religious family, by the blessing of God on their good example, diligent instructions, and prudent regulations, is like a church of Christ for its stated worship of God, purity of manners, and beautiful order.—Epenetus was the first converted to Christ in all the regions of Achaia, and an honourable pledge and earnest of that great harvest of souls which have been since gathered unto the Lord. 7-9, 13. In Christ, or in the Lord, denotes being united to, beloved by, and believing in him, and holding fellowship with him. 10. Appelles hath been tried, proved, and justly accounted a judicious, faithful, and zealous disciple, and servant of and sufferer for Christ. 16. A kiss attended with the utmost chastity, sincerity, and spiritual affection, as becometh saints who love one another with a pure heart fervently. 17. In order to cultivate and maintain true Christian love among yourselves, carefully watch against and avoid all those teachers or others who attempt to form parties among you, and to introduce pernicious opinions and practices contrary to the pure truths of the gospel which ye have been taught by the inspired servants of Christ. 18. For whoever are of such a spirit and temper, and carry on such designs, are not the true servants of our Lord Jesus, the only Prophet, Priest, and King of his church; nor do they sincerely aim at promoting his interests and glory in the world, but seek to avoid persecution, gain the favour of worldly men, and gratify their own sensual appetites—to compass which vile ends, they, by high pretensions of kindness for you, or zeal for God's truths and honour, attempt to impose on the good temper and credulity of weak and incautious, though well-meaning persons, to turn them aside from the ways of the Lord. 19. I am indeed glad that your ready reception of the gospel and obedience of faith are become so exemplary and famous in the churches; and that hitherto no seducers have been able to draw you away from the simplicity which is in Christ; but considering your own weakness and depravity of nature, and the subtlety of Satan and his instruments, it is absolutely necessary for you to be very prudent and watchful, able to make a difference between good and evil, truth and error; and so inoffensive, plain-hearted, and sincere, that ye may neither deceive nor injure others, nor be deceived or injured by them—quite unacquainted with all envious, spiteful, and mischievous arts. 20, 24. And for your comfort and encouragement, remember that your gracious and reconciled God, who is the author of all true peace, and delights in your being at peace among yourselves, will stand by you, and in a little time subdue Satan and his emissaries, and defeat their malicious power and subtlety, by his providence and grace, and render you at last fully victorious and eternally triumphant over them.—And for this end my fervent, my repeated prayer to God for you is, that the free favour of your and my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, in all its special fruits and effects, and all communications of grace from him, may be continually and abundantly with you, to guide and strengthen, sanctify and comfort, defend and save you, and carry you through all temptations and dangers, till ye arrive with triumph at his heavenly kingdom. 25-27. Now, to that great, gracious, and almighty God, who is able to defeat all the attempts of your spiritual enemies, and to preserve you from falling into sins or error, and to settle, strengthen, and confirm you in faith, comfort, and holiness, according to and by means of the glad but incomprehensible tidings of salvation to sinful men which Jesus Christ himself preached while on earth, and which I, having them revealed to me by the inspiration of his Spirit, labour to publish in the world—even those glorious doctrines which were long entirely hid from the Gentiles, and but obscurely hinted to the Jews, in types, shadows, and dark prophecies; but are now under the gospel dispensation evidently men, and my <sup>h</sup>fellow-prisoners, who are <sup>o</sup>f note among the apostles; who also were <sup>i</sup>n Christ before me.

8 Greet Amplias, my <sup>k</sup>beloved in the Lord.

9 Salute Urbane, our <sup>h</sup>elper in Christ; and Stachys my beloved.

11 Salute Herodion my <sup>o</sup>kinsman. Greet them that be of the <sup>h</sup>ousehold<sup>5</sup> of Narcissus, which are in the Lord.

13 Salute Rufus, <sup>c</sup>hosen in the Lord; and his mother and mine.

15 Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas, and all <sup>t</sup>he saints which are with them.

16 Salute <sup>o</sup>ne another with an holy kiss.<sup>6</sup> The churches of Christ salute you.

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, <sup>m</sup>ark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them.

18 For <sup>t</sup>hey that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.

¶ Written to the Romans from Corinthus, and sent by Phebe, servant of the church at Cenchrea.

and openly manifested to both Jews and Gentiles, in the ministrations of his servants, and the accomplishment and explication of the Old Testament figures and predictions, according to his special and unchangeable purpose, appointment, and command—in order that, through the influences of his Spirit attending the same, they might be persuaded and enabled to believe in Christ, and, by virtue derived from him, perform all holy obedience to him—even to that God who alone is originally, essentially, infallibly wise in himself and in all his dispensations, particularly in his contrivance and execution of the gospel scheme of salvation, and who is the only author and fountain of all the wisdom that is to be found in any creature whatsoever,—be all adoration, thanksgiving, honour, and blessing, through Jesus Christ as the only Mediator, by whom our praises and prayers are to be offered, and are acceptable to him for evermore.

Ver. 17. Whoever introduces a doctrine, practice, or rite (for practices and rites can never be separated from doctrine) contrary or superadding to those of the apostles, is to be 'marked and avoided.' The Lord grant grace to the instructors and rulers of his church to be self-denying, and to church-members to be watchful!—Note, How needful, how prophetic, was this apostolic admonition to Rome! where so many novel doctrines, fantastic rites, and unmeaning ceremonies have not only been invented, but enforced, under all the temporal penalties that could afflict the bodies, and all the spiritual terrors that could affright the souls of men! But 'the night is far spent, the day is at hand'—let Christians watch and be sober, and keep their garments! Blessed is that servant, and blessed are those churches, whom their Lord at his coming shall find so doing. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The Christian religion delightfully promotes friendship and good manners. It teaches us to pay civil respect in a decent manner to persons of all ranks, and gratefully to return favours shown to us in the best way we can. It gives a holy turn to a genteel behaviour, and makes men sincere in wishing the temporal, and especially the eternal prosperity of their friends.—With deep concern should all Christians labour to excel in piety, fix themselves in church-fellowship, and in their respective stations study to be serviceable to the whole mystical body of Christ. Amiable are those families which resemble a church of Christ in their worship, order, and conversation. And it is a great honour to be first or eminent in the faith and profession of the gospel. With exact care ought all to judge for themselves in matters of religion, according to the doctrine which they have received from Christ and his apostles; and to avoid such as cause divisions and offences, by broaching errors or forming parties in the church. Whatever be the plausible pretences, fair shows, or flattering speeches of such, they always secretly carry on some selfish and carnal design. There is great need therefore in this evil world to have such knowledge of the truth that we may not be imposed on, and such honesty as to act up to our knowledge, imposing upon none. For Satan earnestly promotes pernicious principles and practices, to the disturbance and corruption of the church. But it is very encouraging to true believers that their God will quickly and entirely subdue him and all his emissaries and works. And if faith and patience hold out a little, we shall reign triumphant for evermore.—Ancient and divine are the gospel tidings of our salvation. Delightfully they harmonize with the types and predictions of the Old Testament. And their offers and blessings graciously extend to all nations of mankind, and by the Holy Ghost are made effectual to men of all ranks and degrees. With what faith and love ought they then to be received, submitted to, obeyed, and practised! And infinite is the glory that redounds to God from this his wonderful work of our salvation.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

In the visible heavens 'one star differeth from another star in glory'—yet all stars are equally the work of God. So, in the Scriptures, one book differs from another, either in the extent or importance of the truths revealed, yet 'all Scripture is (equally) given by inspiration of God, and (each according to its intent and measure) is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness.'

Among the books of Scripture, the Epistle to the Romans holds a similar place to that of a star of the first magnitude among the heavenly bodies. 1. It stands specially remarkable for the guidance it affords in searching out 'the deep things of God'—such as, the co-existence and reconciliation of inflexible justice with abounding mercy—of the unchanging purposes of the Eternal with the perfect accountability of man—and of justification by faith in Jesus Christ, with the indissoluble obligation to every duty of holiness. 2. It stands specially remarkable for its practical vindication of the doctrines of free grace. There seems a natural antipathy in the carnal mind against a free salvation; so that the heart that needs it most, hates it most. And the alleged ground of this antipathy is, that it is unfavourable to morality. But this objection proceeds upon disregard of self—ignorance of the principles of the human heart—and a total forgetfulness of historical truth, or neglect of observation. Disregard of self—for a sinner cannot be saved, unless by free grace. Ignorance of the human heart—for nothing can subdue its enmity but redeeming love, or govern its powers, but gratitude for mercies. And forgetfulness of historical truth, and neglect of observation—for both have

SCENE IN OLD CORINTH—WHERE PAUL WROTE THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

[ROMANS, xvi: 27.] —The epistle to the Romans was written by St. Paul from Corinth. It was written to the Christians in Rome before the apostle himself had gone thither. In the view we give we have an illustration of an old tree and some rude houses that are used as a place to keep horses to hire to tourists. The scene is close to the temple that stood in Corinth when St. Paul was here. It is a striking commentary upon the changing fortunes which great cities in the East have undergone to remember that the site of the proud and rich city of Corinth is now a wheat field. Peasants plow to-day where once kings and conquerors reveled. This city would have dropped out of attention had not St. Paul spent a few years here.

united to prove, that in all countries and times, the most godly and moral characters have been produced by the preaching of salvation by the cross of Christ. 3. It is conspicuous for the boldness with which it encounters national prejudices, combined with the affection with which it seeks to conciliate good-will. The prejudices of the Jews against the Gentiles, and the contempt of the Gentiles for the Jews, formed one of the chief barriers against the triumphant spread of his gospel. These diseases of the carnal mind the apostle never overlooks or palliates, but, like a skilful physician, reveals all its symptoms and malignity, and applies, as its only adequate remedy, the doctrine of free grace and salvation. 4. It is remarkable for the extent of its moral precepts. Every book of Scripture abounds, either directly or indirectly, with moral precepts; but this epistle takes a wider range, yet descends to more minute particulars than any other book in the New Testament; thus affording the readiest reply to those who charge the doctrine of grace with an unfavourable aspect towards morality. And, truly, if morality, rightly understood, be any evidence of the divine origin of a system (and that it is so is unquestionable), then does the morality of this epistle place it as far above every heathen system of ethics as light is superior to darkness; and conducts infallibly to the conclusion, either that Paul was wiser than all the philosophers of Greece and Rome, or that he was inspired by the all-wise God. This superiority the philosophers of the world will not acknowledge—the inspiration, therefore, they should not deny. 5. It is remarkable for its speciality of personal attentions. While with a most wonderful terseness, or as Haldane phrases it, ‘parsimony of words,’ it delivers its moral precepts, and transfuses into a single sentence the spirit and amount of volumes, it exhibits ‘what might seem a prodigal waste of words’ in its commendations, salutations, and acknowledgments. But the memory of the heart never forgets; and the Christian is the only true citizen of the world. He loves him that begets, and, by the same reason, he loves all that are begotten of him.

He that would study this epistle must begin, as all study of Scripture should begin, with humble prayer ‘to the Father of lights and mercies;’ but to this he must add a firm determination to study it as a whole: it cannot be understood in fragments. He must attend to it with diligence, until he has acquired a consecutive view of its parts—till he is able, as it were, to take the parts asunder, as the wheels, &c., of a machine, and to set them up again in their original order. And the whole he must receive ‘as a little child;’ for he that does not so receive it will neither discern its meaning nor feel its comfort. C.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

Corinth ranked among the most illustrious of the Grecian cities. It was situated on the isthmus that joins the Peloponnesus to the rest of Greece. With a port on each side, it received equally the commercial contributions of Europe and Asia; became first distinguished for arts and commerce, and next (such is ever human abuse of mercies) equally distinguished for luxury, and infamous for licentiousness. Yet here, after the missionary labours of about two years, Paul and his companions succeeded in planting a Christian church, consisting of Jews and Gentiles. But shortly after his departure, false teachers, undervaluing Paul’s authority, crept in among them; erroneous and heretical doctrines were inculcated, and sectarian divisions were introduced. Under these circumstances Paul writes this epistle:—1. To support his apostolical authority, and vindicate himself from the calumnies of his adversaries. 2. To correct the abuses that had arisen, and remedy the disorders that had infected the church. 3. To return answers to certain queries that had been addressed to him on some important points of Christian doctrine, management, and morals. These answers and directions, though generally referring to circumstances and practices no longer in existence, are yet, by virtue of the principles involved, of perpetual application to the various emergencies of the Christian church. C.

We learn from ch. 16. 8 that the epistle was written from Ephesus. This is at variance with the subscription which is attached to our English version; but it ought to be remembered that these subscriptions have no divine authority. They are mostly late additions, and some of them are decidedly erroneous. It seems probable from the remark that he intended to leave Ephesus after Pentecost, and from the allusions in ch. 5. 7, that the time of writing was at or about Easter, A.D. 57. P.

CHAPTER I.

After his salutation and thanksgiving, 10 he exhorteth them to unity, and 12 reproveth their dissensions. 18 God destroyeth the wisdom of the wise, 21 by the foolishness of preaching, and 23 calleth not the wise, mighty, and noble, but 27, 28 the foolish, weak, and men of no account.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1–3. I, Paul, who have not thrust myself into this apostolic office which I claim, but was graciously, sovereignly, and immediately called to and qualified for it by Jesus Christ—and Sosthenes, my dear and faithful assistant in the ministry, though not an apostle—do, in the most earnest and affectionate manner, wish to all you at Corinth who are regularly united in church-fellowship, set apart for and spiritually joined to Christ, as your Head of influence and government, and by the operation of his Spirit rendered like him in holiness; and to all those who anywhere profess and adore him, our common Lord, 12 Now this <sup>1</sup>I say,<sup>6</sup> that every one of you saith, <sup>2</sup>I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ.

13 Is<sup>a</sup> Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I thank God that <sup>b</sup>I baptized none of you but Crispus<sup>7</sup> and Gaius;<sup>8</sup>

15 Lest<sup>c</sup> any should say that I had baptized in mine own name.

16 And <sup>d</sup>I baptized also the household of Stephanas:<sup>9</sup> besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

17 For Christ sent me <sup>e</sup>not to baptize,<sup>1</sup> but as the object of their faith, worship, and obedience—all the riches and the blessed effects of redeeming favour, love, and mercy, and an abundant peace with God, with your own consciences, and with one another, from God the Father, as the original spring and deviser of every blessing, and through Jesus Christ, as the source, storehouse, and bestower of them. 4-6. I heartily congratulate you on your happiness and honour upon every remembrance of you, and bless my infinitely gracious God for the manifold favours, gifts, and graces which, on Christ's account, he has bestowed upon you, enriching you not only with such spiritual habits and tempers as are necessary to salvation, but with remarkable knowledge of the mysteries of the gospel, and a ready ability to communicate them to others—the Spirit of God thereby confirming to your hearts and consciences the truth of the gospel of Christ which we preached and ye believed. 7-9. So that ye are not remarkably deficient, or inferior to other Christians, in any spiritual gifts which could render you useful in Christ's church, in which ye continue praying, preparing, and patiently and hopefully waiting for his second coming—who, by a constant supply of necessary gifts and graces, will more establish you in the faith, hope, and holiness of the gospel,—that, when others are condemned, ye may appear perfectly righteous, holy, and irreproachable at his tribunal; for God, who has graciously called you into a state of union and fellowship with his dear Son, being unchangeably faithful to his character, love, and promises, will aid you to be partakers of eternal glory. 10-12. If then God hath done, and will do, so much for you, and if Jesus will in a little time judge you at his awful bar, let me beseech you, by the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, by his excellencies, relations, and works of love, and by your profession of him, to lay aside your contentions and alienation of affection from one another, and to study the most cordial harmony in sentiment, affection, and holy practices; for, to my great grief, I have been informed that ye, whom I truly esteem, and of whom I hoped better things, have, by uncharitable divisions, been thrown into different parties, under different leaders—some of you ranking yourselves under me, as the apostle of the Gentiles, or instrument of your conversion; others under Apollos, as the most eloquent and fervent preacher; others under Peter, as the apostle of the circumcision; while others pretend to be immediately directed by Christ alone, needing no other instructor. 13-16. To convince you of the absurdity of your conduct, let me ask even you who pretend to be solely for Christ, overlooking his ministers and ordinances, Is his person to be divided from his offices? or his offices from the execution thereof by the ministry of his servants, who labour in the church by his authority and according to his will?—Why set up me, or any other minister, for your spiritual head? Did I or my brethren make atonement for your sins? Or were ye baptized by the authority, or into the faith, worship, and obedience of us? I thank God that, though I was the instrument of conversion to many of you, I baptized but very few of you, lest any should have thence taken occasion to insinuate that I had acted by my own authority, and bound the persons whom I baptized to acknowledge me as their spiritual master. 17. For indeed Christ sent me not chiefly to baptize, but to preach the glad tidings of salvation through his blood; and that not dressed up in flowers of rhetoric or maxims of philosophy for the promoting of my own selfish honours, but in the most plain language and style, that the native majesty, spirituality, glory, and power of the gospel doctrine, of and concerning a crucified Saviour, might be the more clearly manifested in the humbling and conversion of sinners. 18. For the plain preaching of salvation through the blessed righteousness of Jesus Christ, received by faith, appears quite despicable, foolish, and absurd, to them who live and die in their sins; but to us who are really saved from our sins and miseries, it is the marvellous mean through which the almighty influences of God's Spirit are conveyed for illuminating, sanctifying, supporting, and comforting our hearts. 19, 20. This, according to the Scripture, quite confounds the notions of the learned of this world, and exhibits a method of salvation directly contrary to whatever they could have imagined. None of them, Jews or Gentiles, could ever contrive a method of saving sinners, or of reconciling them to God; and herein he hath stamped disgrace upon all the wisdom of philosophers and others, and manifested their schemes for appeasing an offended God, and reconciling guilty sinners to him, as altogether vain, foolish, and ineffectual. 21. For after he, in the manifestation of his own infinite wisdom, had plainly shown that neither the works of creation, nor of common providence, nor any powers of human reasoning, could lead to a saving and satisfying knowledge of himself or the way of salvation, it pleased him, by the much-despised plain preaching of a crucified Christ, and the way of salvation through his blood, to save them who by faith receive and rest upon him for their eternal redemption, as therein offered to them. 22, 23. Notwithstanding all the proofs that Christ hath given us of his Godhead and saving offices, the obstinate Jews still persist in demanding a sign from heaven to prove them, and the learned Greeks insist upon philosophical demonstrations of the method of salvation. But, regardless of these prejudices, we faithful ministers proclaim a full, eternal, free, and offered salvation to sinful men through the obedience and death of Christ, which the Jews condemn, to the infinite hazard and ruin of their souls, and the learned Greeks account highly foolish and absurd. 24. But let others think as they will of Jesus Christ, or of the doctrine of salvation through his blood, we, who do yield to him, discern and experience therein the great power and manifold wisdom of God, clearly exhibited in his whole person, offices, and saving effects. 25. For what ignorant, carnal, and prejudiced men reckon absurd folly, infinitely transcends in wisdom all the boasted schemes of the most sagacious, prudent, and learned philosophers; and what they account weak and unavailing is found by experience to have an incomparable energy in destroying the works of the devil, renewing the heart, and reforming the lives of men. 26-29. And to manifest the abundance of his grace, and, as it were, to mark the insignificance of men's natural or acquired advantages, ye cannot but observe that very few of the learned, the eminently sagacious, great, or powerful, are converted to Christ; but he has generally fixed his love upon, and graciously finds, such as are comparatively foolish, weak, mean, or contemptible,—that none, Jews or Gentiles, do have any pretence to glory before him of their natural parts, accomplishments, or external privileges, as if these could recommend them to his favour, or qualify them to receive the gospel. 30, 31. Yea, on the contrary, because of your simple faith in Jesus Christ, he accepts you in, and thus also unites you to, Christ Jesus, who, by his divine appointment, is constituted and made over to us in the gospel offer, and freely granted to us in the day of power, as an infinitely well-furnished and loving Teacher, to render us wise unto salvation; a law-fulfilling Saviour, to preach the gospel: <sup>1</sup>not with wisdom of words,<sup>2</sup> lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.

18 For <sup>3</sup>the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God.

19 For it is written, <sup>4</sup>I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.

20 Where<sup>5</sup> is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?

21 For<sup>6</sup> after that in the wisdom of God, the through whose finished obedience and suffering we may be completely justified; and not only as securing, but as a loving giver, of all renewing, quickening, and sanctifying grace, by his Spirit dwelling in us; and a full deliverer from sin and misery, and bestower of that eternal happiness which he hath obtained for all,—that, as the Scripture directs, he who has any honours and blessings bestowed upon him may centre all his joy and boasting entirely in the Lord Jesus, and in the free grace of God through him.

Ver. 2. Sanctified in Christ Jesus—by faith in the offering of his body. See Ac. 26. 18; He. 10. 10, 14.—Note, It is no objection to the reality of this character, that there was deficiency in the true believers, and false brethren among them. The epistle is to the 'sanctified,' not to those who, notwithstanding their nominal profession of Christianity, might still be in the gall of bitterness.—In every place call upon, &c. To 'call upon,' or 'call on the name,' signifies to 'invoke,' to 'worship,' Ac. 2. 21; g. 14, 21; 22. 16; Ro. 10. 12-14; 2 Ti. 2. 22. Wherefore, there is here a distinct acknowledgment that the primitive and apostolic church universally worshipped Christ—universally acknowledged his Godhead. C.

Ver. 8. Who shall confirm you. The 'who' is by some referred to 'Christ,' ver. 7, but it seems preferable to refer it to 'God,' ver. 4; for had the apostle intended to refer the confirmation directly to Christ, he would not have closed the sentence with 'the day of our Lord Jesus Christ,' but with 'his day.' C.

Ver. 16. I know not, &c. These words are to be taken in their literal import—ignorance, either from lapse of memory, or from the possible addition of new members to the Corinthian church whom he might elsewhere have baptized. But this ignorance is by no means inconsistent with the plenary inspiration of the apostle; for inspiration does not imply the divine communication of everything, but merely the communication of things necessary for the edification of the church. C.

Ver. 17. Not with wisdom of words. Reference is here made rather to the form and structure of his discourses, than to their language. They were not framed in accordance with the artificial rules of the philosophers. They did not treat of speculative questions; they were altogether different in structure from the orations delivered in the schools of Greece. Paul makes no apology, therefore, for his simple language or homely speech. He could not have done so truthfully; for we find in this epistle a depth of thought, an acuteness of reasoning, a beauty of illustration, and sometimes a splendour of eloquence, not surpassed in Greek literature. P.

Ver. 21. By 'wisdom of God,' some understand the permission or government of his wise providence. But may not the whole verse be better understood thus:—'For after that the world, through its (philosophical) wisdom, knew not God (though manifest) in his wisdom (of creation, providence, and word), it pleased God, through the preaching of foolishness (the cross, ver. 18, 23, 25) to save them that believe.' C.

Ver. 28. Base things. Not things really base and unworthy, but things so esteemed by the world: God, by the weakest and apparently the most inadequate instruments, producing the most wonderful results.—Things which are not, &c. The expression 'things which are not' is generally represented as hyperbole, or oxymoron—an extravagance or contradiction in language, frequent in classical writers. But there is no necessity for attributing either to the apostle. God had chosen a people (the future Christian church) 'that were not' then in being, 'to bring to nought' the heathen empire of Rome; and there is still a chosen people to be born, under whom all the kingdoms of this world shall become 'the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ,' ch. 2. 7. C.

Ver. 30. Christ . . . is made unto us wisdom. A wisdom different from, but infinitely above—both as to subject and effect—the wisdom of earth. The wisdom of this world has narrow limits. It is bounded by the limits of human vision and of human experience. It can neither reach to the unseen nor to the future. But the wisdom which is in Christ, and which we have through him, is infinite in its range—it extends to the invisible God and to the eternal future. All the wisdom which makes wise unto salvation is embodied in Christ—in 'his incarnation, his life of obedience, his teaching, his death of atonement, his glorification and sending of the Spirit.' In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. P.

REFLECTIONS.—With great prudence, but with plainness and courage, ought ministers, on some occasions, to assert their mission and the dignity of their office. And with firm assurance should we receive the apostolic writings and doctrines as indeed of divine authority. Divine power and grace are necessary to render men saints, while fervent prayer and religious worship evidence them such. And it is absurd to hold world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For <sup>1</sup>the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach <sup>2</sup>Christ crucified, <sup>3</sup>unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness;

24 But unto them <sup>4</sup>which are called, both Jews and Greeks, <sup>5</sup>Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.

25 Because <sup>6</sup>the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

26 For ye see your calling, brethren, how that <sup>7</sup>not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, <sup>8</sup>are called:

27 But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty;

28 And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, <sup>9</sup>yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are:

29 That <sup>10</sup>no flesh should glory in his presence.

30 But of him are ye <sup>11</sup>in Christ Jesus, who of <sup>12</sup>God is made unto us <sup>13</sup>wisdom, and <sup>14</sup>righteousness, and <sup>15</sup>sanctification, and <sup>16</sup>redemption:

31 That, according as it is written, <sup>17</sup>He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

CHAPTER II.

He declareth that his preaching, 1 though it bring not excellency of speech, or of 4 human wisdom: yet consisteth in the 4, 5 power of God; and so far excelleth 6 the wisdom of this world, and 9 human sense, as that 14 the natural man cannot understand it.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, <sup>1</sup>came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the <sup>2</sup>testimony of God.

2 For I determined <sup>3</sup>not to know <sup>4</sup>any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And I was with you <sup>5</sup>in weakness, <sup>6</sup>and in fear, and in much trembling.

4 And <sup>1</sup>my speech and my preaching <sup>2</sup>was not with enticing <sup>3</sup>words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power:

5 That <sup>4</sup>your faith should not stand <sup>5</sup>in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them <sup>6</sup>that are perfect: yet <sup>7</sup>not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought:

7 But we speak <sup>8</sup>the wisdom of God in a mystery, <sup>9</sup>even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory:

8 Which <sup>10</sup>none of the princes of this world knew: for <sup>11</sup>had they known <sup>12</sup>it, they would not have crucified <sup>13</sup>the Lord of glory.

9 But, as it is written, <sup>14</sup>'Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

10 But <sup>15</sup>God hath revealed <sup>16</sup>them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

11 For <sup>17</sup>what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? <sup>18</sup>even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.<sup>19</sup>

12 Now we have received, <sup>20</sup>not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; <sup>21</sup>that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.

13 Which <sup>22</sup>things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual.<sup>23</sup>

14 But <sup>24</sup>the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know <sup>25</sup>them, because they are spiritually discerned.

15 But <sup>26</sup>he that is spiritual <sup>27</sup>judgeth <sup>28</sup>all things, yet he himself is judged <sup>29</sup>of no man.<sup>30</sup>

profane prayerless persons for church-members. With holy reverence ought we to address Jesus Christ and his Father for the gifts and mercies which we need. And with pleasure may we reflect on what he has bestowed on others as an earnest of their perfect holiness and happiness. Yea, it is a great mercy that God's faithfulness secures the eternal salvation of all those who accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour. It is shameful and absurd for Christians to be divided about ministers, as if all Christ's faithful servants were not embarked in one common cause. And it is a comfort for a minister to have had no hand in such carnal renderings of Christ's church; and an honour to have avoided honouring himself at Christ's expense. Very corrupt and darkened by sin must be the hearts of unregenerate men, to whom the mystery and offers of a crucified, a divine Redeemer, appear contemptible and absurd. And the enlightening and renewing power of the Holy Ghost is absolutely necessary to make us apprehend it as every way worthy of God, and calculated to render us wise, holy, and happy. Amazing is the tenderness of God's redeeming grace in respect of its objects and manner of influence. And exactly answerable is Jesus Christ to all our need, who are ignorant and foolish, guilty and naked, polluted and plagued, enslaved and self-ruined sinners. Yea, the whole work of our redemption delightfully promotes the highest glory of God. In this let my soul rejoice, and daily think what Jesus is, and what JEHOVAH is in him, to my heart.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. The glorification of the divine power, wisdom, loving mercy, and other divine perfections, and the humiliation of men, being the great end of the gospel, I laboured to preach to you in the plainest manner without any affected parade of eloquence or philosophical reasoning. 2. And counting all but loss and dung for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, I determined to employ all the talents which God has given me chiefly to make him known in his person, offices, and work; particularly in his obedience and suffering, in which all the lines of the gospel meet. 3. And in preaching on this subject, I conducted myself with the utmost meekness and deepest concern, lest, through your prejudices, or the agency of Satan, ye should, to your eternal perdition, reject and despise my message. 4. And encouraged and directed by Jesus Christ, I laboured to publish and inculcate the doctrines of redemption through his blood, not with any tickling arts of human invention, or soothing language, but with the convincing light and persuasive evidence of the Holy Spirit himself on your minds and consciences, and attended with his miraculous gifts and operations; 5. That the faith, by which he assented to the gospel, and embraced Jesus Christ in it, might not so much as seem to be wrought in you by the authority, arts, or arguments of men, but might be solely produced by the efficacious power of God, and built on his authority and faithfulness manifested in his Word. 6. Nevertheless, we preach the infinitely wise plan of the redemption of sinners, and explain the transcendent mysteries thereof, especially to such as have attained some considerable measures and degrees of knowledge and grace:—not indeed the wisdom of philosophical or political schemes of learned men or princes;—7. But we publish and inculcate that mysterious doctrine which is the wonderful product of the infinite wisdom of God, which has been long hid from the Gentile world, and but obscurely revealed to the Jews, and can never be fully comprehended by creatures; and which God from all eternity determined at this time to reveal with transcendent light and evidence, for the honour of the gospel

CHAPTER III.

2 Milk is fit for children. 3 Strife and division, arguments of a fleshly mind. 7 He that planteth, and he that watereth, are nothing. 8 The ministers are God's fellow-workmen. 11 Christ the only foundation. 16 Men the temples of God, which 17 must be kept holy. 19 The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God.

AND I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto <sup>a</sup>spiritual, but as unto <sup>b</sup>carnal, even as unto babes in Christ.

2 I<sup>c</sup> have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.

3 For<sup>d</sup> ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions,<sup>1</sup> are ye not carnal, and walk as men?<sup>2</sup>

4 For<sup>e</sup> while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?

5 Who<sup>g</sup> then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man?

6 I<sup>h</sup> have planted, Apollos watered; <sup>i</sup>but God gave the increase.

7 So<sup>j</sup> then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.

8 Now<sup>k</sup> he that planteth and he that watereth are one: <sup>l</sup>and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.

9 For we are <sup>m</sup>labourers together with God:

dispensation, its ministers and subjects, and the eternal happiness of every believer. 8. Which important scheme of salvation the rulers and great men concerned in the crucifixion of Jesus Christ, and others so disposed, had no just notion of, their minds being blinded, and their hearts hardened, against all the means of conviction afforded them, otherwise they had never concurred in the shameful, ignominious, deliberate, and public murder of the divine Messiah, who has all infinite glory in himself as the Son of God, and is the author, fountain, and bestower of all the glory of the gospel dispensation and heavenly state; 9. And who, as Isaiah foretold, has brought in that incomparably and inconceivably glorious, delightful, and advantageous gospel state, and all the transcendent blessings thereof, which God, of his infinite wisdom and grace, had provided, adjusted, and secured: and which he bestows upon them who, in the faith of his great love to their souls, do sincerely esteem, desire, and delight in him. 10. Yea, God hath now manifested them to us by the immediate revelations and gracious internal illuminations of his Spirit, who has a perfect and comprehensive view of the divine nature and love. 11. For as none but a man's own soul can know his secret thoughts and designs, so none but the Holy Ghost, who has the same essence and will with the Father and Son, can penetrate into or comprehend the deep love of God. 12. And it is this all-knowing Spirit of God, not the boasted wisdom and learning of the world, which we have received, in order that we may savingly understand the great and glorious blessings of the gospel, freely prepared for, offered to, and bestowed upon us; 13. Which glorious mysteries and benefits we, being taught of God ourselves, represent to others, not in the foppish gildings of human language, but in a plain, grave, and majestic style, suited to their nature, dignity, and beauty, even in the words and figures in which the Holy Ghost has represented them, carefully comparing them together. 14. But no unregenerate men, be as learned and sagacious as they will, can truly approve or know these spiritual doctrines and blessings; nor can they, for want of an understanding illuminated and rectified by the Spirit of God, discern their divine truth, spirituality, excellency, and glory, in a truly spiritual and affecting manner, suitable to their transcendent worth and importance. 15. But he who is really renewed in the spirit of his mind can search into, discern, and form a right judgment about everything necessary to be known in order to salvation, and perceive the glory and feel the transforming power of divine truths; though his views thereof, and satisfaction therein, cannot be certainly judged of by any other man; far less by such as are destitute of the Spirit of God and the true experience of these things. 16. For what unregenerate man ever penetrated into the deep love or revealed truths of God, so as to be able further to instruct a spiritual man in what he before knew, or to prove what is contrary to his views? Nay, we apostles, and other Christians, are, by the Holy Ghost, instructed in the doctrine of Christ in everything respecting the glory of God and the salvation of men.

Ver. 6. By 'perfect' some understand those 'who are advanced in Christian knowledge,' as distinguished from the 'babes,' and corresponding to the 'spiritual,' ch. 3. 1; others, the Christians, as distinguished from the Jews; and others, that higher mode of teaching exemplified in the Epistles to the Romans, Galatians, and Hebrews, in which Christ is fully set forth as 'the end of the law for righteousness,' by the perfect exposition of the Jewish dispensation. This last opinion seems to receive decisive support from apparent contrast between εν τελειῳ λογῳ (ver. 4) and εν τοις ταλειοις (ver. 6); which last expression appears to apply, not to persons, but to correspond with the things that once were 'hidden,' but now 'revealed' by the Spirit, as things fulfilled and perfected, ver. 7, 10. See the similar expression, Ep. 2. 6. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the native beauty of the gospel as God's own testimony concerning Jesus Christ crucified for men. And it is absurd and hurtful to souls to veil and stain its illustrious simplicity, wisdom, and grace by human oratory. The faith of Christians must be the effect of divine operation, and of human persuasion. It is impossible for carnal men to understand the gospel, or to make it comport with their worldly schemes. And not merely an external revelation, but the inward illumination of the Holy Ghost, who is perfectly acquainted with the whole mind of God, can give us just and impressive conceptions of spiritual things. Thrice happy are they who have him to lead them into all necessary truth, and to make them know what inexpressibly great and glorious things God has prepared for, and freely given to them! Judicious and experienced Christians discern admirable wisdom, power, and grace in the gospel method of their salvation. And while they have the greatest satisfaction, experience, and hope in themselves, relating to it, no natural man is able to correct or refute them.

CHAPTER III.—Ver. 1. And indeed, brethren,

10 According<sup>a</sup> to the grace of God which is given unto me, as <sup>r</sup>a wise master-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For<sup>s</sup> other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.<sup>5</sup>

12 Now if any man <sup>t</sup>build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;

13 Every<sup>u</sup> man's work shall be made manifest: for the day<sup>6</sup> shall declare it, because it shall be revealed<sup>7</sup> by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.

14 If<sup>v</sup> any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward.

15 If<sup>w</sup> any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.

16 Know<sup>y</sup> ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 If<sup>z</sup> any man defile<sup>8</sup> the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for <sup>a</sup>the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

18 Let<sup>b</sup> no man deceive himself. If any man when I was among you, I perceived in you such an earthly-minded, opinionative, and disputatious temper, as discovered you to be really weak in spiritual knowledge and experience. 2. I therefore made it my chief care to instruct you in the plain principles of the gospel concerning Christ and his salvation, which were suited to your weak capacities, not entering into the more sublime and abstruse points, which neither then, nor even now, ye can improve to your real edification. 3. Your present contentions and envying of one another is a plain evidence that many of you do not in a spiritual manner, or upon proper authority, take up the doctrines of the gospel, but are under the influence of your natural corruptions, and act in the manner of unregenerate men. 4. Nothing can more plainly manifest your great carnality of temper than to extol particular ministers as if they were to be the lords of your faith: 5. For what are ministers but servants of Christ, by whose preaching of one and the same doctrine ye were brought, not by their skill or power, but by his gracious operation on your hearts, to receive and rest upon him for your salvation? 6. I, as an apostle, first published the gospel among you, which, through the gracious and almighty influences of the Holy Ghost, proved instrumental in the conversion of many of you; and Apollos, coming after, laboured in promoting your spiritual edification: but whatever success he or I had, was entirely owing to God's powerful blessing and influence on our labours; 7. And therefore to him alone ought all the glory to be ascribed; not in the least to us, who are neither the authors of the gospel, nor of its efficacy upon you. 8. Whether we be instrumental in the conversion or in the building up of souls, we all act under the same authority of Christ, and are united in our doctrine and principal design, yea, are all accountable to God, and are equally incapable in ourselves of producing any saving effects by our ministrations: and if faithful, shall in due time receive from him a gracious reward answerable to that diligence which his own free grace has enabled us to use. 9. For all of us labour jointly with the same views, and as his workmen, with and in subordination to God, who will never desert us in our work, nor be unmindful of us: and ye are not ours, but God's workmanship and property, and therefore ought to be devoted entirely and only to him. 10. And I, being employed under him as his distinguished workman and first labourer among you, have, with all that know-among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.

19 For<sup>c</sup> the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again, <sup>d</sup>The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

22 Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours;

CHAPTER IV.

1 In what account the ministers ought to be had. 7 We have nothing which we have not received. 9 The apostles spectacles to the world, angels, and men, 13 the filth and offscouring of the earth: 15 yet our fathers in Christ, 16 whom we ought to follow.

LET a man so account of us as of <sup>a</sup>the ministers<sup>1</sup> of Christ, and <sup>b</sup>stewards of the mysteries of God.

ledge, wisdom, prudence, and care, which he enabled me to exercise, laid the ground-work of your faith and hope, safety and comfort, in the gospel doctrines of a crucified Jesus, and salvation by him alone. Every preacher therefore who comes after me must take care that he attempt not to build you up by any doctrine inconsistent therewith. 11. It is beyond the power of any to lay another foundation of true holiness or happiness beside what is already laid in the incarnation, obedience, and death of the Son of God in our nature, and which is exhibited in the Scripture, and was taught by me. 12. And if Apollos, or any other like-minded, should now, after my preaching, attempt to edify you with the precious truths of God; or if others of a different stamp should attempt to build on it the unsubstantial, contemptible, and perishing inventions of men, 13. Their whole doctrines and practices, as well as those of all other men, shall at the last day be thoroughly tried by Jesus Christ according to the standard of his Word; and the truth and value, or the falsehood and emptiness thereof, be fully manifested to all around. 14. Whoever then shall, in his doctrine and practice, be agreeable to the Scriptures, and answerable to the foundation truth of free salvation through Jesus' blood, shall be graciously and amply rewarded in proportion to his faithfulness and diligence: 15. And whosoever shall, in his doctrine or behaviour, be found unscriptural, though not fundamentally erroneous, shall indeed, if united to Christ, though with apparent difficulty, be saved from eternal wrath; but have nothing but shame and dishonour for his erroneous notions and bad practices. 16. Remember therefore, that as ye, who are God's true church, founded upon Christ preached in the gospel, are set apart, sanctified, and devoted to him as his temple, in which, through his Spirit, he dwells by sweet relation, possession, operation, and favour; 17. If any of you maintain and propagate such errors as are subversive of the foundation, and so at once corrupt yourselves and the church, he shall certainly be punished by him in a fearful and lasting manner, as a defiler of his gospel temple, more sacred and dear to him than any of the apartments of the Jewish. 18. Let therefore every man, preacher or hearer, take heed, lest, through a conceit of his superior understanding, he bring loss and ruin upon himself; and if any have apparently a large stock of earthly wisdom, let him renounce it all as insufficient to lead him to the attainment of gospel truth; and in becoming truly wise towards God, and to the salvation of his soul, through faith in Christ, let him patiently submit to be esteemed as a fool by the carnal pretenders to reason; 19, 20. For as the Scripture repeatedly testifies, all the policy, prudence, wit, and learning, which give men a reputation for wisdom in this world, are but folly in God's account, when compared with his glorious scheme of salvation through a crucified Redeemer: and in the end it will appear to have ensnared them, and discovered the vanity of their minds. 21, 22. Since human knowledge then is so insignificant, and no man can direct you into the way of salvation, but as he himself is taught of God, let none of you, to your own spiritual hurt, set up one gospel minister as his head in opposition to another; for all things, particularly those relating to the dispensation of the gospel, are in the new kingdom secured for, and given to, you who believe, and are divinely directed for your spiritual advantage: all faithful ministers, with all their gifts, graces, and ministrations, are appointed for building you up in faith, holiness, and comfort, to eternal salvation: all the wealth, honours, pleasures, and trans-actions of this world are in Christ's hands for you, to be given you in property or use, as shall tend to your real good: life, in all its diversified conditions, and death, in all its harbingers and forms, are yours: 23. And what secures all these to you, completes your happiness, as well as calls for your attachment to him, is, that ye are saved from sin by Christ, cleansed from sin by his sacrifice, and filled with all the blessings of his grace and glory; and Christ is God's dear Son and faithful Servant, set up by him to be the infallible mean of your eternal salvation, to the praise of the glory of his love.

Ver. 3. Ye are carnal. By calling the Corinthians 'carnal' the apostle does not mean under the dominion of 'the carnal mind,' Ro. 8. 7, for then, instead of being 'babes in Christ,' they would have been in 'enmity against God.' But he means that, while compared with other believers, they 'came behind in no gift, being enriched in all utterance, and in all knowledge,' ch. 1. 5, 7, yet were they inferior to others in the quality of Christian prudence, which avoids all 'doubtful disputations,' and of the Christian temper which 'bears the infirmities of the weak,' and which in all its witness to the truth, Ro. 14. 1; 15. 1, 'still labours to preserve inviolate the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace,' Ep. 4. 3. C.

Ver. 12. Gold, silver, precious stones—emblems of the glorious truths of the gospel.—Wood, hay, stubble—emblems of errors, not fundamental—but useless, vain, and trifling—such as endless genealogies that never can be settled upon any divine authority, traditions of men, with rites and ceremonies invented as aids to piety, but becoming clogs and weights to the progress of vital godliness. C.

Ver. 15. He himself shall be saved—because he built upon the foundation, Christ (ver. 10); yet 'his work shall be burned,' because his superstructure consisted of mere rituals and imaginations.—Note. The attempt of Romanists to extract from this passage the figment of purgatory is vain—for every man's works—the things saved and burned are tried in the same fire, ver. 13, 15; and, so far as their authority avails, the doctrine obtains no support from the earlier fathers; and the detected attempt to interpolate Theodoret on the passage, throws more than suspicion over all similar interpretations. C.

Ver. 18. Let him become a fool in the estimation of an ill-judging world, to whom salvation by a crucified Saviour appears the very height of absurdity. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With great faithfulness and prudence ought ministers to accommodate themselves to the capacities and circumstances of their hearers. And 3 But with me <sup>d</sup>it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment;<sup>2</sup> yea,<sup>e</sup> I judge not mine own self.

4 For <sup>g</sup>I know nothing by myself; <sup>h</sup>yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 Therefore<sup>i</sup> judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the heart: and then shall every man have praise of God.

6 And <sup>j</sup>these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes; that ye might learn in us <sup>k</sup>not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another.<sup>3</sup>

7 For <sup>l</sup>who maketh thee to differ<sup>4</sup> from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? Now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now<sup>n</sup> ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have often great pretenders to wisdom and knowledge have no true grace in their heart. When all Christ's faithful ministers are, under him, united in the same spirit and design, how absurd is it to kindle contentions in the church by setting up one above another! Their honour is great in being workers together with God in the salvation of men. And the effectual success of their labours flows wholly from his power and grace. Yet none must expect God to bless their administrations, but in preaching Christ as the sole foundation of the hopes and happiness of sinful men laid by his Father. Terrible is their ruin who refuse to build on him; and great their loss who attempt to mingle their own fancies with the doctrines of Christ. Exact shall be our future account; and our eternal honours be proportioned to our right improvement of Christ and his truths on earth. And very necessary is holiness in every church and member thereof. Great is the danger of self-conceit. And it is very sinful and ruinous to trust our eternal happiness to the care and direction of our carnal wisdom, which is so insignificant before God. But extensive is their happiness, and high their honour, who, as united to Christ through his sacrifice, and to God in him, have all things, present and future, secured as their property, and divinely directed to their best advantage.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. Let none depreciate us ministers, or exalt one to the dishonour of another, but account of us all as persons called and qualified by Christ for dispensing to Jews and Gentiles the great and unsearchable doctrines and ordinances of the grace of God. 2. And, as stewards of Christ, we must take heed that we by no means neglect, pervert, betray, or deal partially in our trust; but study to be faithful to God, to our own conscience, to the truth of Christ, and to the souls to whom we minister, giving them their proper food in due season. 3. And if any pretend that I am unfaithful, or take offence at my fidelity, I little regard the censures of men, as I am not to stand or fall in the last judgment according to their fallible, partial, and prejudiced sentiments concerning me; nor dare I pretend that my own judgment of my sincerity, faithfulness, and diligence is absolutely right. 4. For though I am not sensible of any allowed unfaithfulness, but have the testimony of my conscience that in simplicity and godly sincerity I have had my conversation in this world; yet such is the inadvertency and treachery of my heart, that I dare not look on this as a justification of my conduct before God, but expect the acceptance of my person and services only through Jesus Christ and his righteousness. 5. Beware therefore of judging our hearts, or of passing uncharitable censures upon us; but wait till Christ at his second coming manifest all the secret transactions, reigned as kings without us: and <sup>o</sup>I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

9 For I think that <sup>p</sup>God hath set forth us the apostles last,<sup>5</sup> as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle<sup>6</sup> unto the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 We<sup>q</sup> are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honourable, but we are despised.<sup>7</sup>

11 Even<sup>r</sup> unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place;

12 And<sup>s</sup> labour, working with our own hands: being<sup>t</sup> reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it:

13 Being defamed, we entreat: "we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day.

14 I<sup>v</sup> write not these things to shame you,<sup>8</sup> but as my beloved sons I warn you.

15 For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: <sup>u</sup>for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

thoughts, and desires of men; and then shall every man who has acted uprightly be publicly acknowledged and rewarded by God according to his real character. 6. I have mentioned myself and Apollos in this point, who are distinguished in office and success among you, that you may learn to adjust your sentiments about men, and never pride yourselves in or boast of one preacher in opposition to another. 7. And to humble you, and prevent your idolizing of ministers, think what gifts or graces you or any of them have which ye did not receive freely from God. Why then do ye boast of any of them, as if they were originally your own? 8. For indeed ye seem to pride yourselves on your gifts, graces, and other acquirements, as if, independent of us who first preached the gospel to you, ye had arrived at the highest prosperity; and I heartily wish that ye did remarkably flourish in everything excellent, great, and glorious, that we, as God's instruments in your conversion and edification, might rejoice in your mercy, and share your happiness and Christian esteem. 9, 10. For I really think God hath set forth us apostles, his last and extraordinary messengers in the church, to be a public show before angels and men, devoted to deadly combats, to contempt, trouble, and violence. We are treated as weak, foolish, and despicable, and are loaded with labours, cares, and sufferings for Christ, while ye appear to yourselves and others wise, powerful, honoured, easy, and opulent. 11-13. While ye live in your rich city and commodious dwellings, amidst ease and affluence, we faithful preachers, ever since the Lord called us to this work, have been often destitute of the common necessities of life, and cruelly abused, and driven from place to place, like vagabonds. Meanwhile, to avoid prejudicing men against us as mercenary, we have earned our daily subsistence by the labour of our own hands; we have earnestly prayed down blessings on them who reproached and cursed us; we have patiently borne all the injuries and abuses we met with; we have humbly exhorted and supplicated them who maliciously slandered us; and notwithstanding all this inoffensive, meek, and winning behaviour, we continue to be treated as the vilest miscreants, who have been the cause of every public calamity, and are fit for nothing but to be killed as sacrifices for the purgation of cities. 14. I have not drawn out this detail of our injurious treatment, and of our meek, patient, and benevolent behaviour under it, in order to expose you to shame among your fellow-Christians, but in order affectionately to warn you against pride, or an unbecoming behaviour to faithful ministers. 15, 16. For though many preachers have laboured to promote your instruction and edification,

I alone have been remarkably honoured as the instrument of your spiritual regeneration and adoption. I therefore beseech you, in the most endearing and condescending manner, that, instead of turning aside after those who desire to corrupt the simplicity of your faith and manners, ye would follow the directions which I, your spiritual father, give you from Christ, and imitate me in faith, holiness, humility, and love. 17. And for this cause I have sent to you Timothy, my dear partner in preaching the gospel, who being converted to Christ by my ministry, and my ordinary attendant, can acquaint you with my uniformity in doctrines and in holy practices, answerable to what I everywhere teach. 18. Some of my opponents boast that I dare not make my personal appearance among you, where I have so many opposers, but must rest content with sending my friend. 19. But if God give me strength and opportunity, I sincerely intend to visit you, and to try those proud pretenders to learning and eloquence as to what authority they have received from Christ to preach his gospel, what of God's gifts and graces appear in their ministrations, and what efficacy their doctrine hath upon their own and others' hearts and lives. 20. For the excellency of the gospel dispensation does not consist in human learning or outward profession, but in an experience of what is wrought by the Spirit of God. Nor is the gospel propagated, or the work of grace begun and carried on in men's souls, but by the miraculous operations and divine energy of the Holy Spirit which attend the plain preaching of a crucified Christ. 21. Think then whether ye would have me come in order to inflict spiritual censures, or even corporeal punishments, upon obstinate transgressors; or, as I earnestly wish, in tender affection, meekness, and gentleness, to encourage, commend, and comfort you.

Ver. 8. It is nothing short of distressing to find expositors pronounce this verse an irony or a sarcasm; figures, upon such a subject, and in such a mood, unworthy a serious man, how much more unworthy the Spirit of God! The words are simple, literal facts—"ye are full" of the gift of righteousness, Mat. 5. 6; Ro. 5. 17; "ye are rich" in all utterance and knowledge, ch. 1. 5; "ye have reigned," being "a royal priesthood," 1 Pe. 2. 9; and "would to God ye did reign" (in that glory of which ye are heirs, Re. 1. 5, 6), that we also might reign with you, Re. 5. 10; and so escape the toils and miseries of this present evil world! C.

Ver. 13. Some, instead of "filth," render the word a lustrative sacrifice; and "offscouring" a redemption sacrifice, in allusion to a heathen custom of devoting some one to death as a sacrifice in times of drought, famine, or plague, &c. The Authorized Version seems, however, to convey a more natural meaning. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Important is that trust of divine truths and human souls which Christ has committed to his ministers. And with great care and faithfulness ought they to declare and explain his mysteries and dispense his ordinances. It is groundless to be either

CHAPTER V.

1 The incestuous person 6 is cause rather of shame unto them, than of rejoicing. 7 The old leaven is to be purged out. 10 Heinous offenders are to be shunned and avoided.

IT is reported commonly that there is fornication among you, and <sup>a</sup>such fornication as is not so much as named among the Gentiles, that one should have his father's wife.

2 And<sup>b</sup> ye are puffed up,<sup>1</sup> and have not rather puffed up or cast down by men's judgment of us. The great point is to approve ourselves to God, by whose judgment we must abide, and who will at last clear us from all false accusations. And never must those who are most conscious of their integrity depend on that, but on faith in Jesus Christ, as the ground of their acceptance to eternal life. With great care ought we to avoid rash censuring of others, in the view of that last judgment in which the secrets of men's hearts and lives shall be discovered. And there is need of deep humility when our defects are so great and many, and all our gifts and graces are the free gifts of God. Alas! that many should be puffed up with spiritual gifts, or even with riches or honour in this life, and the faithful servants of Christ be chiefly exposed to poverty, disgrace, and violent persecution. But it is delightful when Christians and ministers shine in meekness, patience, and returning of good for evil. Great wisdom is necessary in faithful reproofs, that they may neither provoke nor expose. And Christians need to be frequently reminded of admonitions formerly given them. With great care should they copy after the example of their godly ministers. And if faithful ministers bear strong affection to such as have been converted to Christ by their ministry, those converts ought fervently to love, regard, and reverence them as their spiritual fathers, and study that they may be always not grieved correctors but joyful comforters of them. It is not fine words or fair speeches, but the power of the Holy Ghost changing the heart and purifying the practice, that will prove men real ministers or Christians.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1, 2. I must now mention some particular offences among you; and first, it is publicly reported, to the great scandal of your holy religion, that one of your members lives in the most shocking incest with his own stepmother—a form of whoredom detested by, and scarcely known among, civilized heathens; and, nevertheless, many of you, puffed up with a conceit of your gifts and attainments, have overlooked, if not boasted of him, instead of being deeply concerned for the dishonour hereby done to Christ, the disgrace brought upon his church, and the hurt done to the soul of the offender and of others, and of being careful to have such an infamous sinner removed from your holy communion. 3. Therefore, though I am not personally present to direct or influence your procedure, yet being earnestly desirous of your true honour and welfare, under the special direction of the Holy Ghost, I have considered and determined how this base scandal ought to be censured. 4, 5. That ye whom Jesus Christ hath made spiritual mourned, that he that hath done this deed might be taken away from among you.

3 For<sup>c</sup> I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have judged<sup>2</sup> already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath so done this deed;

4 In<sup>d</sup> the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ,<sup>3</sup>

5 To<sup>e</sup> deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

6 Your<sup>g</sup> glorying is not good. Know ye not that <sup>h</sup>a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?

7 Purge<sup>i</sup> out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened.<sup>4</sup> For<sup>j</sup> even Christ our passover is sacrificed<sup>5</sup> for us:

8 Therefore let us keep the feast,<sup>6</sup> not<sup>k</sup> with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9 I wrote unto you in an epistle <sup>l</sup>not to company with fornicators:

10 Yet<sup>n</sup> not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world.

DARE any<sup>a</sup> of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Do ye not know that <sup>b</sup>the saints shall judge the world?<sup>1</sup> and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know ye not that we shall <sup>c</sup>judge angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?

4 If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there rulers in his church, should, as a court constituted in his name, and after solemn prayer for his direction and assistance, with my hearty approbation, in his name and authority, as the great institutor and ratifier of the sentence, fully excommunicate this notorious offender from all fellowship with the visible church, and deliver him back into the visible kingdom of the devil, as one who has no manifest claim to the promises of the new covenant—in order that, by the blessing of God on this awful sentence, his prevailing corruptions may be mortified and subdued, and he, through fear, grief, and shame, brought to such repentance and reformation as may issue in his solemn acquittal and salvation in the last judgment. 6. Your glorying in such a person, be his gifts and attainments what they will, or in your own spiritual gifts, or the prosperity of your church, is extremely sinful and dangerous. Know ye not that a single instance of scandal or manifest error connived at tends to corrupt the minds and practices of others, and to infect and defile the whole church? 7. In imitation of the Jews, who purge their houses from leaven at their passover, labour not only to purge out corrupt affections from your own hearts, but to cleanse the church from scandalous persons and sins, in honour of Jesus Christ, who offered himself as an atoning sacrifice to God, in order that his people might be cleansed from all iniquity, and rendered zealous of good works. 8. Let us therefore lead our whole life on earth, and particularly celebrate the New Testament festival of his supper, without sinful fellowship with notorious offenders, or indulgence of corrupt affections, envy, malice, or the like; but with integrity and godly simplicity, and a real love to the brethren, according to the truth of the gospel. 9. Being absent, I have in this epistolary manner warned you to abstain from all familiar intercourse with persons addicted to whoredom, as thereby ye would harden them in their sins, and they would tempt you to follow their detestable example. 10. Yet I mean not that you should have no dealings with heathens who live in whoredom, manifest covetousness, extortion, or idolatry; for then it would be necessary for you to leave this world, which is everywhere filled with such. 11. But I insist that if any of your professed Christian brethren be chargeable with uncleanness, or be inordinate lovers of money, or join in idolatrous worship, or be given to wrathful, abusive, and opprobrious language, or be lovers of much drinking, or intoxicated with liquor, or given to take advantage of others by excessive rents or prices, ye carefully avoid all voluntary familiarity with them at common meals, and especially partaking with them at the Lord's table. 12. For I, as a minister of Christ, have no power to prohibit such converse as the civil offices, secular affairs, and relations of life call you to; nor have ye power to judge and censure any offenders but such as are of your own spiritual society. 13. Those flagitious sinners who are not in church-fellowship with us must be left to the righteous judgment and wrath of God; but be ye careful to exclude this incestuous member from your church-fellowship, and from all familiar and chosen conversation.

Ver. 5. Satan being 'the god of this world,' 2 Co. 4. 4, to deliver any one to Satan is simply to eject him from the church, and send him out to the world from whence he came.—For the destruction of the flesh. Not for the infliction of disease, but for the destruction of the fleshly appetites, that the 'outcast' may be made sensible of his sin, grieve for the loss of his old friends in the church, become ashamed of his new associates in the world, and so, through godly sorrow, be led to repentance and salvation. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is very shameful to hear of such scandalous enormities among Christians as even heathens would be ashamed of. And highly unbecoming when professors, for the sake of party attachments or great gifts, are puffed up rather than humbled and mourning under such awful events. Flagrant and obstinate sinners must be solemnly cast out from the Christian church, that their souls may be recovered, and the honour of Christ and the purity of his church preserved. For how inconsistent is it for those who were saved by and live upon a crucified Saviour to indulge themselves in unholiness of heart and life! And extremely infectious are scandals if they be not seasonably censured and restrained. Very awful is an excommunication from the church, inflicted in the name of and ratified by Jesus Christ the supreme Judge. And happy or terrible are its effects as men are duly affected with it. Heinous and highly aggravated are the iniquities of professed Christians; they render them more detestable and infectious than the very heathens. With conscientious care should all Christians forbear familiar converse with such scandalous professors, in order to render them sensible of their sins. And church-officers ought to proceed with the greatest prudence in their censures with respect to their subjects, manner, and end. But thrice happy will it be when we shall be no more plagued with wicked persons, lusts, or practices.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1. And since ye have power to call your own members to account, and to judge of their behaviour, how imprudent, unbrotherly, and shameful must it be for you to prosecute your small differences, in civil affairs, in a litigious manner, even before heathen magistrates, to the scandal of your religion, rather than submit to the arbitration of your fellow-Christians! 2, 3. Do ye not know that faithful ministers and really holy persons shall at the last day sit with Christ on his throne, and give their assent to the sentences which he shall pass upon wicked men and angels? Are ye not then able to settle matters, nay, small matters, of right and wrong between one another? 4. If therefore ye have hereafter any civil differences, submit them to the arbitration of some of your brethren in the church, who are not ministers, but sensible and disinterested persons; nay, rather submit them to the arbitration of two or three of the weakest honest Christians, than bring them before heathen judges. 5. What a shame and reproach is it to you, who boast so much of your wisdom, that you cannot find among yourselves any persons able to adjust trifling debates about civil property! 6. But brethren, united together in the same saving head, faith, and fellowship, to the reproach of all, litigiously prosecute one another before heathen magistrates! 7. This your conduct is extremely sinful, contrary to Christian prudence, forbearance, love and friendship, and highly dishonourable to your meek and lowly Lord and Saviour, the Prince of Peace, who secured peace with his blood. Why then do ye not rather part with what is strictly your due, than expose one another, and even Christ himself, to contempt in the open courts of profane heathens? 8. Nay, I find, that instead of meek and patient bearing and forgiving injuries, too many of you by lawsuits really defraud and unjustly wrong your Christian brethren. 9, 10. But know, and consider this plain and awful truth, that whatever profession such people make, they are utterly unfit for, have no title to, and shall never be admitted to enjoy the blessings of grace or glory, who live impenitent and unbelieving under the guilt and dominion of any is not a wise man among you? no, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.

7 Now<sup>d</sup> therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?

8 Nay, ye do wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.

9 Know<sup>e</sup> ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, 10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

11 And<sup>g</sup> such were some of you: but ye <sup>h</sup>are washed,<sup>2</sup> but ye are sanctified,<sup>3</sup> but ye are justified<sup>4</sup> in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.

12 All<sup>i</sup> things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient:<sup>5</sup> all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power<sup>j</sup> of any.<sup>6</sup>

14 And <sup>u</sup>God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power.

15 Know ye not that <sup>v</sup>your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid!

16 What! know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for <sup>w</sup>two, saith he, shall be one flesh.

17 But<sup>a</sup> he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit.<sup>8</sup>

18 Flee<sup>r</sup> fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.

19 What! <sup>s</sup>know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?

20 For <sup>t</sup>ye are bought with a price: therefore <sup>u</sup>glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.

CHAPTER VII.

2 He treateth of marriage, 4 showing it to be a remedy against fornication: 10 and that the bond thereof ought not lightly to be dissolved. 18, 20 Every man must be content with his vocation. 25 Virginity wherefore to be embraced. 35 And for what respects we may either marry, or abstain from marrying.

sin. Deceive not your souls with flattering fancies, hypocritical pretences, or presumptuous confidences. The nature, perfections, purposes, and word of God render it absolutely impossible that any, who live and die impenitent, in idolatry, uncleanness, dishonesty, drunkenness, or reviling, should ever be members of his kingdom of grace here or heavenly glory hereafter. 11. And remember, for your humiliation and warning, and for exciting your admiration of God's blessed grace towards you, that, while ye continued heathens and unregenerate, some of you were chargeable with these detestable crimes: but in his most transcendent mercy all of you, who truly believe in Christ, have been graciously cleansed from the guilt and the domineering and defiling power of your sinful lusts, and brought into a state of favour with God, promised eternal life, and made partakers of holiness in nature and practice, through the righteousness and intercession of Christ, and by the applying, quickening, renewing, and purifying influences of the Holy Ghost, bestowed upon us by our gracious God, and through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us. 12. With respect to eating of meats, with which some of your pretenders to wisdom hold fornication equally indifferent, I allow that, whatever is not directly or indirectly forbidden by Christ in his Word, is lawful in itself; but it is not in every circumstance conducive to good purposes, but may be very injurious to others. I therefore allow myself to do, or not to do, what is indifferent in itself, precisely as it tends to promote good or bad ends; but will not suffer myself to be enslaved by any ungovernable passion for it, nor would I submit to the arbitrary imposition of it upon my conscience by any man. 13. Yea, all kinds of food are formed answerable to our belly, and our belly to them; though we shall soon have no need of them, being removed to the eternal state.—But fornication is a thing of a quite different nature. God never intended nor formed our body for it; but to be used for the honour and in the service of Jesus Christ, as redeemed by, united to, and to be glorified together with him; 14. And God has raised up the dead body of the Lord Christ from the grave as a pledge, earnest, and security, that he will in due time, by the same almighty power, raise up the dead bodies of his true members to a like blessed and glorious immortality. 15. Know ye not then, that your bodies, being constituent parts of your persons united to Christ, must, as his members, die and sleep in him, and be raised to glory with him? How shameful then, how wicked, and dishonourable to him and to his law, would it be to alienate them from his service and honour, and, as it were, rend them off from him; and by committing uncleanness, render them the members of a lewd woman! 16. Do not ye, who pretend to so much knowledge, understand that the man who unites himself in criminal affection or conversation with a harlot disgraces himself, and becomes one body with her, in a sense extremely vile and abominable? 17. But, on the contrary, he who is vitally united to the Lord Jesus as his Head and Husband, partakes of, and is animated by, that very same divine Spirit which dwells in Christ; and so, being mystically one Spirit with him, every affront done to that man's body must be an affront to Christ himself. 18. Abhor therefore, and resolutely abandon, all manner of uncleanness, and keep at the greatest distance from it. Watch and pray against all inclinations, enticements, and all appearances and occasions of it. For he that is guilty of it not only sins against God, his soul, or his neighbour, as in other sins, but debases his body, and unworthily sacrifices it to the most brutish and abominable lust. 19, 20. Know ye not that, if ye be true believers, your bodies, through their union to Christ, are a sacred, dedicated, and appropriated habitation of God the Holy Ghost, who is freely and divinely bestowed upon you, in which his person dwells, and his sanctifying influences are exerted. And ye are not your own property, to dispose of your bodies according to any brutish inclinations; but ye were redeemed from the curse of the law, and from sin, Satan, and everlasting ruin, and secured, for the service and enjoyment of the holy and blessed God, through faith in his Son: labour therefore, through grace, to yield your bodies and all their members, as well as your souls, with all their faculties, as instruments of righteousness to God, that ye may never alienate and debase his peculiar property, but in all things obey and glorify him with that which he hath created, preserved, redeemed, and sanctified.

Ver. 18. Idolatry (1st, 2d, and 10th commandments) is 'without the body,' always worshipping something outward. Profanity (3d commandment) rests in the mind and word. Sabbath-breaking (4th commandment) consists in the disregard of an outward institution. Disobedience to parents, killing, and stealing (5th, 6th, and 8th commandments), are all sins against others, and the soul which it debases. But fornication (7th commandment) is a sin directly against the body which it degrades. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great shall be the honour of the saints to sit with Christ on his throne at the last day, and as assessors to concur in the condemnation of devils and wicked men! And it is shameful, then, if they cannot adjust trifling disputes without going to law one with another. How much more like Christians, as well as profitable, would it be to settle them by kind arbitration, than by litigious lawsuits! And it is very base for professed Christians to act as if they neither regarded the honour of Christ nor his people, if they can but secure external advantages to themselves. It is absurd to hope for heavenly happiness, without being weaned from our lusts and reformed from our gross sins. Jesus' word, blood, and Spirit make a most evident and important change upon the most notorious sinners. And how blessed, how deeply indebted to free grace, are the partakers of it! It is absurd for such to disturb their consciences with scruples about meats and drinks, or such like trifles, or to enslave them to human impositions; and more base immoderately to indulge their sensual appetite in the use of meats and drinks, which will soon be entirely useless. Infinitely detestable is every form of uncleanness; and contrary to the law of nature and marriage, to the noble purposes for which our bodies were designed, and to which those of saints shall be raised at the last day. Yea, much more so to our relation and intimate union with Christ as his members, and his right of securing our souls and bodies to be eternal instruments of glorifying God. It is highly dishonourable to his name, and debasing to ourselves, and a vile indignity to the Holy Ghost, who dwells in our bodies, as well as in our souls.

The contrast is not, as some affirm, between the apostle uninspired, and the apostle inspired; but between the apostle's own words and an actual command delivered by Christ.—P.

* The meaning of this verse has been grievously misunderstood by some commentators. The 'permission' refers not to the authority by which the apostle speaks, but to the recommendation he gives in ver. 5; and this recommendation all depended on the possibility of their being tempted by incontinence. Paul gives it not as an absolute command to be obeyed in all cases, but as an allowance for those to whom he was writing. The real sense of the verse is:—'But this I say by way of allowance, or permission for you, under your peculiar circumstances, and not by way of express command, designed for all under every circumstance.'—P.

<sup>9</sup> See note on ver. 10 above. The case of which the apostle is here treating—mixed marriages—had not been considered by Christ; it had not come before him, and he had given no judgment upon it. The apostle says so. The apostle, therefore, takes upon himself to state the law:—'I, Paul, in my office as Christ's commissioned apostle, under the infallible guidance of the Holy Spirit, and my decision is,' &c.—P.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1-6. With respect to your question proposed to me in your letter, The unmarried state, in such times of persecution and uncertainty, is preferable to the married. But it is far better to marry than to expose one's self, or any other, to temptations to uncleanness; and married persons ought to take all proper opportunities of testifying their relation and affection to each other. And that Satan may have no occasion to tempt them to unchastity, let even their withdrawal from one another, for the purpose of solemn fasting and prayer, be with mutual consent, and for short times. But this I, as an inspired apostle, advise to, as most agreeable to your holy profession in your different circumstances, not as an express command of Christ. 7-9. For I could wish that every unmarried Christian could live as contented in a single life as I do; but every man must act according to his own temper, disposition, and situation, and the gifts and abilities with which God hath furnished him for the ends of his glory. If such as are unmarried can continue such without danger of uncleanness, they will, in these troublesome times, find many advantages for the service of God. But if, by the grace which they have received, they cannot duly restrain their animal inclinations, it is better for them to marry some proper object; it being far more wise, dutiful, and comfortable to do so, than to live under the tormenting or inflaming power of impure desires of unlawful enjoyments. 10, 11. And for directing such as are married, there is no need of further inspiration; the Lord Jesus having expressly commanded that wives should never voluntarily depart from their husbands, nor husbands put away their wives, except for the cause of fornication before, or adultery after, marriage; or, if they voluntarily part, both parties should live single, or rather study to be reconciled one to another. 12-14. And, as inspired by God, I charge you, that no Christians think of parting from those husbands or wives with whom they were married before their conversion, on account of their continuing heathens, as the Jews were commanded to do in the time of Nehemiah, but dwell with them in the most friendly, peaceable, and engaging manner: for even heathens are separated to a holy use, by having Christian wives or husbands: and hence the children begotten between them are held by God, not as unclean heathens, but as externally, relatively, and federally holy; entitled to all the privileges of the new covenant equally as if both parents had been Christians. 15, 16. But if their heathen yoke-fellows, notwithstanding all prudent means to prevent it, will obstinately desert them, Christians are not obliged to enslave their consciences to their humours, or to continue in marriage relation to such as obstinately break the bond and defeat the ends of that relation. Meanwhile, they ought to do everything consistent with truth and holiness, in order to engage these heathen consorts to live with them:—for none knows but, by their meek and kind behaviour, through the blessing of Christ, and working of his Spirit, they may be rendered instrumental in gaining them to Christ for the salvation of their souls. 17-19. And whatever the event be, let every one of you, and of other churches, study to walk in a course of holiness and virtue answerable to the condition or relation in which he stood when converted. Never trouble yourselves whether ye were originally Jews or Gentiles: for it is of no account with God whether ye be circumcised or not; but whether, according to his commandments, you receive the Lord Jesus, and walk in him righteously and godly. 20-22. And as redeeming grace was never intended to alter the stations or duties of secular life, but to enforce the improvement of them in the manner most conducive to the glory of God, study to rest contented with those very stations in which you were before your conversion: and if you were converted in the station of a servant or slave, be not uneasy, as if that servile condition would render you less acceptable to God or honourable to your Christian faith or fellowship; yet, if you can have your freedom by fair means, thankfully accept and faithfully improve it: for a converted slave is as much freed from the bondage of sin, Satan, and the broken law, as any other; and a converted freed man is under as deep obligations to serve Christ as if he had been a servant or slave to men. 23, 24. Since therefore your spiritual and religious freedom, secured by Jesus' infinitely precious blood, is perfectly equal, resolutely maintain this, and never serve the lusts or sinful commandments of men, nor suffer the duties of your civil relations to hinder your service of him; and in whatever station you were converted to the Christian faith, rest contented with it, as ordered for you by the providence of God; and study to fulfil the duties of it as under his eye, in obedience to him, by assistance from him, and in fellowship with him. 25-28. With respect to persons who were never married, the Lord Jesus indeed left us no express command on this point; but I, as his faithful apostle, directed by his inspiring Spirit, advise, that if they can remain unmarried, without endangering their chastity, they should do so, for their greater convenience in these perilous times. But let such as are married study, with cordial affection and contentment, to bear the encumbrances which attend their state; and let such as are unmarried beware of marrying rashly, lest they involve their wives and children in trouble along with themselves. Nevertheless, if any find marriage a necessary mean of preserving their chastity, they may lawfully enter into it; only it will in these times expose them more to anxiety and trouble. But I shall add no more, lest I should discourage some who are married, or hinder some from marriage whose natural inclinations call to it, or make any to think the unmarried state more holy in itself. 29-31. But what I now subjoin is of infinite importance, that in a very little time all earthly stations, relations, sorrows, and comforts will leave us, and we shall be launched forth into an eternal state; it is therefore proper that our hearts should sit loose to them as quite unsubstantial and transitory, and only so far to be accounted of as they are God's gifts to be improved for his honour, and as means of preparing us for eternal fellowship with him. 32-35. The reason why I have preferred a single state of life to the married, is, that I would have you as much as possible freed from all the anxious cares and perplexing encumbrances of this present world, that ye may, with less hindrance and distraction, attend the service of God, and pursue the salvation of your souls; for they who are unmarried have most liberty to lay out all their thoughts, time, and labour about what pertains to the service and fellowship of God; whereas they who are married must be employed in providing for their families, and rendering themselves agreeable and helpful to their yoke-fellows.—My whole aim is the advantage of your souls, not to ensnare any into unchaste inclinations or practices;

21 Art<sup>x</sup> thou ealled being a servant?<sup>2</sup> care not for it: but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.<sup>3</sup>

22 For<sup>y</sup> he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman:<sup>4</sup> likewise also he that is ealled, being free, is Christ's servant.

23 Ye<sup>z</sup> are bought with a price; <sup>a</sup>be not ye the servants of men.<sup>5</sup>

24 Brethren, <sup>b</sup>let every man, wherein he is called, therein <sup>c</sup>abide with God.

26 I suppose<sup>7</sup> therefore that <sup>g</sup>this is good for the present distress;<sup>8</sup> I say, that it is good for a man<sup>9</sup> so to be.<sup>1</sup>

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But<sup>h</sup> and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble<sup>2</sup> in the flesh: but I spare you.<sup>3</sup>

29 But this I say, brethren, <sup>i</sup>the time is short:<sup>4</sup> it remaineth, that <sup>j</sup>both they that have wives be as though they had none;

30 And they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not;

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: for the <sup>k</sup>fashion of this world passeth away.

32 But I would have you <sup>l</sup>without carefulness.<sup>5</sup> He<sup>n</sup> that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord,<sup>6</sup> how he may please the Lord:

33 But he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.

34 There is difference also between a wife

<sup>a</sup> For the elucidation of this obscure passage four points must be observed:—
1. That, generally, among the Jews and Greeks celibacy was held dishonourable.
2. That the Essenes among the Jews, and certain austere sects of philosophers among the Greeks, were unfavourable to marriage.
3. That both among Jews and Greeks females lived in a state of great seclusion; and 4. That fathers exercised supreme authority in their marriages, either as to giving or restraining. All these points the apostle proceeds to discuss and answer:—Any man, compared with ver. 38, evidently signifies any father:—virgin is, therefore, virgin-daughter. Need so require—any need; but in time of persecution, the special need arising from the difficulty of protecting his family. and a virgin. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy <sup>a</sup>both in body and in spirit: but <sup>b</sup>she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but <sup>c</sup>for that which is comely, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction.

36 But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely<sup>7</sup> toward his virgin, if she pass the flower of her age, and need so require, let him do what he will, he sinneth not: let them marry.

37 Nevertheless he that standeth steadfast in his heart, having no necessity,<sup>8</sup> but hath power over his own will, and hath so decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin, doeth well.

38 So<sup>r</sup> then, he that giveth her in marriage doeth well; but he that giveth her not in marriage doeth better.

39 The<sup>s</sup> wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; <sup>t</sup>only in the Lord.

40 But<sup>u</sup> she is happier if she so abide, after my judgment: and <sup>v</sup>I think<sup>9</sup> also that I have the Spirit of God.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 To abstain from meats offered to idols. 8, 9 We must not abuse our Christian liberty, to the offence of our brethren, 11 but must bridle our knowledge with charity.

NOW as <sup>a</sup>touching things offered unto idols, we know that <sup>b</sup>we all have knowledge. <sup>c</sup>Knowledge puffeth up, but <sup>d</sup>charity edifieth.

2 And<sup>e</sup> if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the same is <sup>g</sup>known of him.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, ment—yet not my own private opinion of what is expedient, but 'as one that hath obtained mercy to be faithful' in the discharge of his apostolic commission.—Note. This statement, so far from denying inspiration, asserts it in the most positive terms. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Persons married or unmarried, bond or free, should labour to live contented with their lot, and always to the glory of God. And with great prudence should they marry or remain single, as best tends to prevent sinful impurities and promote their more active and undisturbed service of God. In marrying, Christians should make conscience of choosing none but such as appear to fear God, and of entering into that relation with much serious consideration and solemn prayer. And married persons should cultivate the most endeared mutual affection, and live together as heirs of the grace of life, as not only their temporal but their own and their children's spiritual and eternal happiness depend so much thereon. A deep sense of the vanity and shortness of time, and of the importance and length of eternity, ought always to regulate our affections and conduct. That is always best for us that is best for our soul; and whether single or married, our chief aim and endeavour ought to be to please the Lord, and to be holy both in body and spirit.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 1. With respect to what but that, in the most easy and becoming manner, ye may have abundant liberty for waiting upon, keeping close to, and serving the Lord Jesus, and God the Father through him, in all religious duties, without disquiet, perplexity, and wandering of heart. 36-38. But if any parent or guardian find that the restraint of his daughter or pupil from marriage beyond the flower of her age is calculated to ensnare her; or if a young man find that his temper, honour, or chastity call for it; it is very lawful and commendable that they should marry: but if they have no such call to marriage, it is still more advisable and commendable to refrain from it in these persecuting times. Thus parents who give their children in marriage, and children who, having gained their consent, enter into it, act a wise and lawful part; but if, without danger of sin or infamy, they continue unmarried, they better provide against the inconveniences of these troublesome times, and for a more uninterrupted liberty of serving God. 39, 40. But let the state of the church be as difficult as it will, the law of God and nature, and the marriage vow, bind a wife to abide with and cleave to her husband, till death part them, unless he voluntarily and resolutely leave her, or be guilty of adultery; but if he die before her, she may then marry another, but let it always be one who makes a credible profession of Christianity, and with whom she may expect the approbation, presence, and blessing of God in their conjugal relation, that they may dwell together, worshipping God, and religiously training up their children. But, indeed, I think that if she continue single, she will find it most convenient in these dangerous times, and best on religious accounts.—And whatever your new teachers insinuate, I know I have suggested these admonitions under the special direction of the Holy Ghost.

Ver. 14. Sanctified is applied either to persons rendered absolutely holy by the renewing of the Spirit of God, or to those who are merely separated and dedicated to the service of God, without any spiritual change; and in this latter application it must here be understood.—Now are they holy. Dedicated to God by virtue of the conjugal covenant. C.

Ver. 15. Some think this liberation from bondage means—that the marriage is dissolved by the act of desertion, and that the brother or sister is free to marry another. This, however, seems decidedly at variance with our Lord's decision, Mat. 5.32, and the apostle's own direction, ver. 10, 11-39; Ro. 7.1-3. The 'bondage' from which the believer is freed is not therefore the marriage vow, but the following of husband or wife in a false religion. But while difference of religion does not dissolve the marriage bond, if the dissatisfied or irritated unbeliever will separate, the believer may blamelessly submit—remembering, however, that the call of God is not to separation, but rather to the cultivation of domestic affection and 'peace.' C.

Ver. 25. Virgins—unmarried persons of either sex.—No commandment previously delivered of the Lord.—I give my judg-

has been offered to idols by your heathen neighbours, and is either feasted on by the offerer and his friends or exposed to sale in the public market, I allow you and your new teachers to have a great deal of knowledge, and I know that we apostles have no less; but mere notions in men's heads, and a fond conceit of their superior understanding, do but puff up the pride of their heart, and indispose them to receive further instruction: but love to God and to our brethren is that which alone makes us practically improve our knowledge for promoting our own and others' holiness, peace, and comfort. 2. And if any think their own knowledge of things so perfect that they need not consult the sentiments nor regard the edification of others, it is a sufficient evidence that they know nothing in a truly spiritual and beneficial manner. 3. But if any heartily love God, and from that principle improve their knowledge to his glory and the edification of souls, God takes special notice of and approves them. — 4. With respect to the lawfulness of a Christian's eating what has been offered to idols, we all know that the heathen gods have no divine nature or virtue in them to make things either better or worse in themselves, and that there is but one God. 5, 6. For though the heathens have hundreds or thousands whom they esteem and worship as gods, celestial or terrestrial, supreme or subordinate, yet to us Christians there is but one God, from whom, in the person of the Father, all things in creation and providence originally proceed, and in whom we live, move, and have our being; and one Lord Jesus, by whom, as his Father's only begotten Son, all things were created, and by whom, as Mediator, we receive all spiritual blessings, and have our persons and services rendered acceptable to God. 7. There are, however, some professed Christians who do not yet distinctly understand the nullity of all the heathen idols, but continue to eat what is offered to them with a kind of religious regard; and thus their consciences, not being fully instructed in the doctrines of the gospel, are herein defiled by the guilt of idolatry. 8. And however distinct knowledge we or others may have that idols have no divinity in them, it is plain that our eating of food offered to them can never profit our souls or recommend us to God, and our prudent refraining from it can do us no hurt. 9. It is therefore certainly your duty carefully to avoid all use of your freedom, or right to eat of these things, which tends to insnare such as are weak in knowledge or faith, and make them sin in doing that with a doubting or superstitious mind which ye do safely and without any doubt. 10. For if such weak persons see you feasting upon these meats in an idol's temple, will they not be emboldened to eat them with an idolatrous veneration of the idol? 11. And thus, through your knowledge leading you to an imprudent use of your liberty, your weak, mistaken, and doubting brother, for whom you charitably believe Christ laid down his infinitely precious life, is led into damnable sin, or to destroy his own inward peace and comfort. 12. Now, while you thus lead your Christian brethren into sinful and idolatrous practices, and wound, disturb, and defile their tender and unsettled consciences, ye sin not only against them but against Christ, whose members they are; and ye attempt to defeat the designs of his love, in what he suffered for their comfort and salvation. 13. This consideration bears such weight with me, that, if my eating of flesh offered to idols, or even of common flesh, should disturb the conscience of my Christian brother, or occasion his falling into sin, I would never indulge myself in eating any more as long as I live.

Ver. 1. The idol feasts were held in the temples, and the offerers were accustomed to invite their friends to partake with them. To these feasts, it appears, the Corinthian Christians were sometimes invited, and that some went through habit contracted in their heathenism; some, to avoid offence, or retain the favour of idolatrous neighbours; and others, because they knew the idol to be a mere stock or stone, and no god—so that the feast appeared to them no act of religion, but a mere common repast. Still, as this use, or rather abuse, of knowledge might lead the ignorant to conclude that such as attended the festivals venerated the idol, the apostle protests against such compliances of the well-instructed, because they might lead the ignorant into sin. See ver. 10. C.

Ver. 10. See thee who hast knowledge that the idol is a mere stone, or other material substance, and no god. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Fine and extensive notions in our head, without love to God and men in our heart, do but puff us up with self-conceit, and render us detestable to God. And nothing more plainly manifests our want of solid knowledge than our contempt of others as weak and foolish. None are more apt to be self-conceited than such as are remarkably ignorant of things important; and that is always the best knowledge which is most useful in practice. It is a great mercy then to have the saving knowledge of Christ as the alone Mediator, and of God in him as the only true God! And yet, alas! many true Christians are too little acquainted with the vanity of idols, or have but confused and unsettled conceptions of things most important. With tender and exact care ought Christians to avoid dubious or even innocent and indifferent practices, which may grieve their fellow-believers, and occasion their stumbling into sin. For it is highly criminal to grieve the spirits, and destroy the peace and edification of them for whom Christ laid down his life.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 1, 2. It was for this very purpose of avoiding offence that I forbore taking my necessary and due subsistence from you. How absurd then is it to infer from this circumstance that I am not an apostle, when no one can be produced that has a more evident claim to that high office! for did not I receive my commission and instruction immediately from Christ himself when he appeared to me? And are not ye Corinthians, who were converted many of you by my ministrations, an evident proof that Christ hath sealed mine office in your conversion, and your enrichment with many excellent gifts and graces? 3-6. I therefore boldly interrogate your new proud preachers, who dare to question my authority. Have I not a divine right to necessary subsistence, not only for myself, but also for a family, if I chose to have one, as well as James, Jude, Peter, or any other apostle? Am I and Barnabas, who were so expressly appointed to the apostolic work by the Holy Ghost, and no other preacher, obliged to maintain ourselves by the labour of our hands? 7. What can be more unreasonable? Have common soldiers, labourers, or shepherds a universally allowed claim at least to a reward of necessary food and raiment? And must we, who, under Christ as our Captain, fight his battles, pull down the strongholds of sin, Satan, and captivate multitudes of

For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.

11 If<sup>1</sup> we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12 If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless, we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 Do<sup>o</sup> ye not know, that they which minister about holy things live<sup>5</sup> of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?

14 Even so<sup>p</sup> hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.<sup>6</sup> gospel of Christ without charge, that I abuse not my power<sup>1</sup> in the gospel.

15 But<sup>a</sup> I have used none of these things: neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: for it were better for me to die,<sup>7</sup> than that any man should make my glorying void.

19 For<sup>v</sup> though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.

20 And<sup>u</sup> unto the Jews I became as a<sup>2</sup> Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;

21 To<sup>y</sup> them that are without law,<sup>3</sup> as without law, (being<sup>n</sup> not without law to God,<sup>4</sup> but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.

22 To<sup>a</sup> the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak.<sup>5</sup> I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some.

23 And this I do<sup>b</sup> for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know<sup>c</sup> ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? <sup>d</sup>So run, that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we<sup>e</sup> an incorruptible.

26 I therefore so run, not as<sup>9</sup> uncertainly;<sup>6</sup> so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:

27 But<sup>h</sup> I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be<sup>i</sup> a cast-away.<sup>7</sup> sinner to him; we who, under his direction, labour in his vineyard, plant and water the souls of his people; we who watch over, direct, and feed his spiritual flock—have no claim to necessary subsistence? 8-10. Nay, let the law of Moses, of which my judaizing opponents are so fond, decide the point. It expressly forbids to muzzle the mouth of an ox while treading out the corn, in order to prevent his eating mouthfuls of it. Now God never appointed this law merely for the sake of these brutes, but chiefly to direct and bind men to exercise humanity and equity towards those of their own species who labour for their advantage, and especially who labour for the benefit of their souls, and to encourage such to expect a proper reward from those who reap benefit by them. 11, 12. When we have spent our time and strength in dispensing unto you the oracles and ordinances of God, for the conviction, conversion, comfort, and eternal salvation of your souls, could you reasonably grudge us the small return of a temporal necessary subsistence for our bodies? If other preachers, and even your false teachers, claim a right to a proper maintenance, are not we, who first planted and watered your church, much more entitled to it? Nevertheless, to manifest that we have no mercenary aim, but only seek your spiritual and eternal welfare, and that the gospel, which sets forth the offices and grace of Christ, and which he has authorized and committed to our trust, might be the more readily received by you, we neither asked nor received from you our due maintenance. 13, 14. But though we had done both, we should have but exerted our right. Ye, and especially your judaizing pretenders to wisdom, cannot but know that under the Mosaic dispensation the priests and Levites, who officiated for others in the worship of God, had a very large subsistence divinely allotted them out of their tithes, sacrifices, meat-offerings, and gifts.—In like manner, when Christ sent forth his disciples to preach the gospel, he expressly appointed that all faithful preachers should be suitably maintained by those who share the benefit of their labours. 15. But notwithstanding these express laws of both Moses and Christ, I neither have, nor ever intend to ask or receive, any maintenance from you; for I had rather earn my bread with the labour of my hands, or even be starved to death, than give any occasion to think that I preach the gospel for the sake of carnal gain. 16. For let me be as earnest and diligent in publishing the glad tidings of salvation as I will, it is no more than what my commission and command from Christ render my indispensable duty; and should I neglect it, the reproaches of my guilty conscience, and the everlasting damnation of hell, must be my just reward. 17, 18. But if, under all the difficulties of poverty and of providing for myself, I preach from a pure regard to the glory of God and the salvation of men, I have a present inward satisfaction of my faithfulness and zeal. On the other hand, if I should with reluctance receive and manage that trust which Christ has committed to me, what reward could I expect but uneasy remorse of conscience now and eternal misery hereafter? And in these views I preach the gospel freely, when circumstances require it, that none may be prejudiced thereat, or pretend that I rigorously or unreasonably require my dues. 19, 20. For in this, and many other instances of Christian liberty, I have studied, in the most condescending and engaging manner, to accommodate my behaviour to men's different tempers and inclinations, that I may the more effectually sweeten their spirits, and recommend Christ and his ways to them. In order to reconcile the Jews, who reckon themselves still under the law of Moses, I reason with them out of the Old Testament, and indulge the observance of such ceremonies as are not yet absolutely unlawful, always instructing them that none of their works, but the righteousness of Christ alone, must be the ground of their hope towards God. 21. And though I reckon myself indispensably bound by the moral laws of the most high God, as the rule of my duty, issued forth to me through Jesus Christ, yet, in order to gain the Gentiles to Christ, I rest the proof of my doctrine upon the extrinsic evidence thereof, in the undoubted miracles attending it, and its being set home upon their hearts by the Spirit of God; and I neither observe Jewish ceremonies myself, nor encourage them to it. 22. In dealing with weak Christians, who are apt to be easily grieved or stumbled, I condescend to their weakness, and forbear even things which are in themselves lawful and innocent, that I may prevent their taking offence, and may establish them in the more important points of faith and holiness. In fine, by all lawful expedients, I suit myself to men's diversified tempers and circumstances, in order that, in the hand and by the blessing of Christ, I may be instrumental in delivering them from under the slavery of sin, Satan, and the broken law, and bringing them to share the blessings of spiritual and eternal salvation. 23. All this I do from a sincere and zealous concern to prevent unseasonable exceptions against the gospel of Christ, and that I may recommend and propagate it among persons of every character, that in fellowship with you and others I may share the special benefits of it. 24. To take therefore a hint from your own Grecian races, in which many run while they know that one only shall obtain the prize, let us, by diligent receiving of the Lord Jesus, and walking in him, run our Christian course, in which not one, but all who run, shall receive the gracious reward of eternal life and honour. 25. And as by great moderation in diet the wrestlers and boxers prepare themselves for their public combats, so ought we to mortify every worldly and sinful affection that would hinder us in our Christian warfare; and the rather as our crown of glory is infinitely more excellent and durable than their garlands of flowers, pines, myrtles, olives, bays, laurels, or the like. 26, 27. Under this apprehension I labour to run my Christian race, and fight the good fight of faith, in a most careful and judicious manner, directed by the law of God, and in good earnest against my spiritual enemies.—As combatants strive to beat down and conquer their antagonists, so do I, by faith, repentance, watchfulness, fastings and prayer, mortification and self-denial, labour to subdue my inward corruptions, lest after preaching the gospel to others, instead of sharing with them in the blessed fruits of it, I should, in the last judgment, be esteemed as one whose works are unfit to be rewarded.

1 The sacraments of the Jews 6 are types of ours, 7 and their punishments 11 examples for us. 14 We must flee from idolatry. 21 We must not make the Lord's table the table of devils: 24 and in things indifferent we must have regard of our brethren.

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, <sup>a</sup>how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea;

2 And were all <sup>b</sup>baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;

3 And <sup>c</sup>did all eat the same spiritual meat;

4 And <sup>d</sup>did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed<sup>1</sup> them: and that Rock was Christ.<sup>2</sup>

5 But <sup>e</sup>with many of them God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness.

6 Now these things were <sup>3</sup>our examples,<sup>4</sup> to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as <sup>5</sup>they also lusted.

7 Neither<sup>6</sup> be ye idolaters, as <sup>7</sup>were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

8 Neither<sup>8</sup> let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

9 Neither<sup>9</sup> let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents.

10 Neither<sup>10</sup> murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer.

o In this passage the apostle traces a full analogy between the Jewish church and the Christian:—1. Both had the rite of baptism. The Jews were symbolically baptized in the Red Sea, and when in the cloud in the wilderness. By these symbols they were brought into covenant relationship with God, and became members of his church as developed in the Mosaic law. 2. They had also something which was symbolical of the great Christian sacrament of the Lord's supper.

They ate food from heaven, and they drank water from the smitten Rock. Great difficulty has been supposed to exist in the statement that the Rock followed them. The history in the Pentateuch shows that the smitten Rock did not follow the Israelites; and Paul does not here say that it did. But he does say that the spiritual Rock, i.e. CHRIST, followed them. He was, in fact, the source of all the blessings dispensed to them in the wilderness, temporal as well as spiritual.

for ensamples:<sup>5</sup> and <sup>6</sup>they are written for our admonition, upon whom <sup>7</sup>the ends of the world are come.

12 Wherefore <sup>8</sup>let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

13 There hath no <sup>9</sup>temptation<sup>6</sup> taken you but such as is common<sup>7</sup> to man: but <sup>10</sup>God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation <sup>11</sup>also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.

14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, <sup>12</sup>flee from idolatry.

15 I speak as to <sup>13</sup>wise men; judge ye what I say.

16 The <sup>14</sup>cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?

17 For <sup>15</sup>we, being many, are one bread, and one body; for we are all partakers of that <sup>16</sup>one bread.

18 Behold Israel <sup>17</sup>after the flesh: <sup>18</sup>are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?<sup>19</sup>

19 What say I then? <sup>20</sup>that the idol is any thing, or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?

20 But I say, that <sup>21</sup>the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.

when they have full evidence of the Lord Christ's calling them to their work, and granting them success in it. And readily ought they to forego their own liberties or claims if it tend to the success of the gospel. But if they do this, it is base to revile their persons or deny their rights on that account. Nothing can be more evident than that ministers have a divine right to a sufficient maintenance from their hearers. Yet never ought the procuring of that to be their great aim, but the glory of God in the conversion and edification of souls; and every form of lawful condescension is to be practised so far as best answers that end.—With great faithfulness, care, and pains ought ministers and others to run their Christian course, and fight their spiritual warfare, according to God's Word, and duly to govern their passions, appetites, tempers, and conduct. And with humble and holy jealousy ought ministers to take heed to themselves, their doctrines and practices, that neither they nor their labours may be disapproved and rejected by Christ at his second coming.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1-5. And to awaken you to run your Christian race with care, diligence, and resolution, and to guard against every idolatrous or other deviation from it, observe, with the utmost attention and deepest concern, the fate of God's highly favoured Israelitish nation;—how, after he had conducted them by a pillar of fire and cloud, and led them through the Red Sea, thereby solemnly initiating them into a peculiar covenant relation with himself by the mediation of Moses,—and nourished them with excellent manna from heaven, and water from flinty rocks, which prefigured Christ, and followed them through the Arabian wilderness; and which, as symbols, represented the light, comfort, and deliverance of the gospel church, their solemn instalment in their happy state, and their marvellous and unceasing nourishment,—he was so offended by their apostasy, unbelief, idolatry, murmuring, and other provocations, that almost that whole generation were cut off by miserable deaths in the wilderness, falling short of the promised Canaan, and many of them of the heavenly inheritance. 6-10. Now these things happened to them, and are recorded in Scripture as awful examples, representing to us what fearful judgments we may look for, in time and eternity, if we indulge ourselves in the like murmuring against what God provides for us, or in desiring what he forbids. Let none of you, therefore, like them at Sinai, partake of idolatrous feasts, or in any direct or indirect acknowledgment of heathen idols, lest God's wrath overtake you, as it did them.—Neither indulge yourselves in uncleanness, as some of them committed whoredom with the Midianitish women, and were punished by the death of 23,000 in a plague, and 1000 more in a legal process of the magistrates.—Neither let any of you distrust the power, faithfulness, and grace of Christ, to help you under difficulties and discouragements, or, through presumptuous sinning, try his patience or defy his power and justice, as they did, and were destroyed by fiery serpents.—Neither indulge dissatisfaction and repining complaints of the dispensations of God, or of the afflictions which ye suffer for Christ, or against the persons, dutiful behaviour, or divine doctrines of any of his ministers, as they often did in the wilderness, and were destroyed by one judgment after another. 11. Now all these public calamities happened to God's ancient professing and favourite people as examples of what we may expect if we imitate them in wickedness: and they are recorded in God's word for warnings to us who live when the Jewish dispensation is just ending, and under the last dispensation of grace which God intends for his church in this world, that we may avoid their sins, in order to escape their punishment. 12. Let therefore self-conceited professors, who pride themselves on their gifts, privileges, attainments, strength, and stability, watch and pray, and, in a dependence on God's grace, use every other mean of his appointment, to prevent backsliding and apostasy. 13. And let those of you who, having no confidence in yourselves, trust wholly to Jesus Christ, and his free grace, for your preservation in the way of duty, remember that no afflictions or temptations have happened to you but such as are common to men in this evil world and imperfect state, and may, through divine help, be borne or overcome; and that God, who has granted you so many promises of support and deliverance, will infallibly fulfil the same, and will not suffer you to be troubled or tempted beyond the measure of strength which he bestows upon you; and knowing that ye cannot always bear up under them, or struggle with them, will in due time grant you an honourable and complete deliverance from them. 14. Therefore, my dear fellow-Christians, awed by these alarming examples on the one hand, and encouraged by the hopes of all needful assistances on the other, detest and avoid to the utmost all idolatry, and all appearances of it, or approaches to it. 15. These solemn warnings I give you, as persons who are acquainted with Christian principles, and even value yourselves upon your superior wisdom and knowledge; and I appeal to your own reason and conscience, and desire you to ponder the weight of what I am going to say. 16. Is not our partaking of the consecrated bread and wine in the Lord's supper an open profession, token, and mean of our joint holy fellowship with Christ, in the benefits of his incarnation, obedience, and suffering,—and a public acknowledgment of our obligations and purpose to yield all holy obedience to him? 17. And does not our partaking of the same loaf or cup signify, that, however different our persons or circumstances be, we are all spiritually connected in the one mystical body of Christ's church? 18. And did not the ancient priests and Israelites, by eating their respective shares of the peace-offerings, profess their joint fellowship with and dedication to that God to whom part of it was burned on the altar? 19. I do not, by these instances, insinuate that the nominal gods of the heathens have any real divinity in them, or that meats are made any worse in themselves by being offered to them. 20. But what I intend to suggest is, that the heathens, by sacrificing to these idols, and feasting on their sacrifices, do really worship and hold fellowship with devils: and I would by no means have you to hold fellowship with these unclean spirits or their worshippers. 21. For ye cannot, in consistency with the honour of Christ and his Father, or with your seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.

2 It appears that the Christian women at Corinth claimed for their sex an equality with the other, taking occasion by the doctrine of Christian freedom, and abolition of sexual distinctions in Christ, Ga. 3. 28. The gospel unquestionably did much for the emancipation of women, who in the East were kept in unworthy dependence. But the women in Corinth overstepped the bounds of their sex, in coming forward to pray and to prophesy in the assembled church with uncovered heads. Both of these the apostle disapproved,—as well their coming forward to pray and to prophesy, as their removing the veil: here, however, he blames the latter practice only, and reserves the former till ch. 14.

3 In order to confine the women to their true limits, he reminds them of their subjection to the man, to whom again he assigns his place in the spiritual order of creation, and traces his precedence up to God himself (De Ite).—P.

CHAPTER XI.

1 He reproveth them, because in holy assemblies 4 their men prayed with their heads covered, and 6 women with their heads uncovered; 17 and because generally their meetings were not for the better, but for the worse, as 21 namely in profaning with their own feasts the Lord's supper. 25 Lastly, he calleth them to the first institution thereof.

BE ye <sup>a</sup>followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances,<sup>1</sup> as I delivered them to you.

3 But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God.

4 Every man praying or <sup>a</sup>prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.

5 But <sup>b</sup>every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered, dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven.<sup>2</sup>

6 For<sup>i</sup> if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God: but <sup>k</sup>the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For <sup>l</sup>the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man.

9 Neither<sup>m</sup> was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.

Christian profession or edification, at once hold fellowship with Christ and his people in his holy supper, and with devils and their worshippers in their idolatrous feasts. 22. Should we then, who are espoused to Jesus Christ as our spiritual Husband, dare to provoke his jealousy by honouring pretended deities? Are we more able to escape or resist the almighty strokes of his wrath than the Israelites were? 23. No pretence of the indifference of things offered to idols, or of our intending no respect for the idols thereby, can warrant our eating of them: for things very lawful in themselves may become very inexpedient and unedifying in some circumstances, by stumbling others, and drawing them into sin. 24. In such cases Christians must not do what serves their own pleasure, honour, or temporal benefit, but what will tend most to the real and lasting advantage of their neighbours. 25. But though it would be highly criminal and dangerous for any of you to eat meats offered to idols in their temples or idolatrous feasts, yet ye may freely eat whatever is sold in the public market, without any scruple or inquiry whether it has been offered to an idol or not. 26. For God, who is Creator, Proprietor, and Governor of the whole earth and of all its produce, and has now, under the gospel, abolished the ancient typical distinction of meats, allows you to eat whatever can contribute to your health. 27. If therefore any of your heathen neighbours invite you to a meal with them in their own houses, and regard to good manners, and an intention to promote their spiritual edification, incline you to go, eat freely whatever is set before you on the table, without any scrupulous thought or inquiry whether it has been offered to an idol or not. 28. But if he who invited you to the entertainment, or any other, by telling you that it had been offered to an idol, should hint that your eating of it would be a practical allowance of some honour to the idol; then, that neither his, nor your own, nor any other's conscience may be defiled or wounded, and to testify your high detestation of idolatry, eat not of it: for God, who is the proprietor of all the animal and vegetable food on earth, has granted you enough beside what has been offered to idols. 29. Nor ought ye in such points chiefly to regard your own conscience, but the consciences of your neighbours, that they may not by your conduct be grieved, or emboldened to anything unlawful to them: for why should you or I, by an imprudent and unseasonable use of our Christian liberty, tempt other men's consciences to pass a wrong judgment upon our conduct? 30. For if, through the bounty of God's providence, I have an opportunity, and, through the grace of the gospel, have liberty of feeding indifferently upon whatever food is presented to me, yet why should I indulge myself so far as to give any one occasion to reproach me for eating such meats as I receive with prayer to him for his blessing on them, and with religious thankfulness to him for providing and allowing them to me? 31. To close this argument with some important rules:—Not only in your eating and drinking, but in all your conduct, civil or religious, keep the glory of God before you as your principal and last end, and behave as is most conducive toward this. 32. Always carefully avoid whatever can prejudice the minds and hinder the conversion of either Jews or heathens, or may stumble either Jewish or Gentile Christians, or grieve, discourage, or pervert any church-member, strong or weak. 33. And, on the contrary, in Jesus' strength, labour, after my example, to deny yourselves, and study to do or forbear things, as is best suited to the peace, comfort, spiritual advantage, and eternal salvation of all around you.

Ver. 1. The object of the apostle seems to be twofold:—1. To contrast the Jewish with the Christian ordinances and privileges. 2. To remind the Corinthians that the observance of ordinances, and possession of privileges, so far from securing church-members from rejection, may aggravate their guilt and their punishment.—Ignorant. Rather, 'unmindful.' C.

Ver. 2. By following Moses into the cloud, and through the sea, they acknowledged his divine mission, and received a Jewish baptism, typical of that Christian baptism which the Corinthians had received.—Note, Here there is a baptized church, including both the adult and the infant. C.

Ver. 7. Play. The original is a word of very general import, and is applied to leaping, dancing, singing, and all other kinds of festive sport. C.

Ver. 9. Some MSS. have 'Lord,' others 'God,' instead of 'Christ;' but they are few, and of little authority. The exhortation affords an irresistible argument for the Godhead of Christ; as it places the temptation of JEHOVAH in the wilderness and of CHRIST in his church upon equal footing. C.

Ver. 11. The ends of the world. The Jews divided the duration of the world into three aiōnes or ages:—(1) Before the law. (2) Under the law. (3) Under Messiah—the last dispensation of God to men. C.

Ver. 17. The words may be rendered, and perhaps more intelligibly, 'for as there is one loaf, we being many are one body: for we all partake of that one loaf.'—Note, The Jewish paschal loaf, or rather cake, was thin and large, so that a great number might partake of one. See Mat. 26. 26. C.

REFLECTIONS.—No visible relation to God, no sacramental privileges, can screen idolaters, fornicators, tempters of Christ, unbelieving murmurers, or any similar transgressors, from his just wrath. And instances of other men's sins and punishment should deter us from sinful indulgences or self-confidence, lest we fall into the like condemnation. Great is the mercy that God's faithfulness and grace secure for his watchful and humble saints, mitigation of, support under, and seasonable deliverance from all their troubles and temptations; that our Redeemer is so mighty, that we may safely trust him; and that he knows best what afflictions we need, and how long we should be exercised with them.—What a great and holy God we have to do with—infinitely jealous of his own honour! And highly do we affront him if in the least we countenance the worshipping of vain idols and impure spirits in them. Marvellous is his condescension and kindness in allowing us intimate fellowship with himself, and appointing solemn ordinances for that purpose. And totally inconsistent with our communion with Christ, and one another as his members, are the very smallest approaches towards fellowship with devils or lusts, or towards giving occasion of grief or sin to the weakest saints or neighbours. Things that are lawful in themselves must never be needlessly

10 For this cause ought the woman to have power<sup>3</sup> on her head, because of the angels.<sup>4</sup>

11 Nevertheless, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman: but all things of God.

13 Judge<sup>a</sup> in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature<sup>5</sup> itself teach you, that if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a covering.<sup>6</sup>

16 But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom,<sup>7</sup> neither the churches of God.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you, I praise you not, that ye come together, not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there be divisions<sup>8</sup> among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For there must be also heresies<sup>9</sup> among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat<sup>1</sup> the Lord's supper.<sup>2</sup>

at most can only form a conjecture. I offer the following as a possible explanation, which is substantially the same as is suggested by Stanley, Alford, and others:—

'On this account (on account of the statements made in the preceding context) the woman ought to have power on her head (i.e. the sign or symbol of the man's power over her, which is, according to eastern custom, the veil) on account of the angels' (because angels are present in Christian assemblies, and they, when in the presence of God their Head, veil their faces).—P.

22 What! have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not?<sup>4</sup> What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

23 For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you,<sup>5</sup> That<sup>y</sup> the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread:

24 And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat; this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in<sup>6</sup> remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show<sup>7</sup> the Lord's death till he come.

27 Wherefore, whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation<sup>8</sup> to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

or unseasonably used to the ensnaring of others. God, to whom all things pertain, has given them to be used freely, or with restraint, as best tends to edification. And his glory therefore, and the spiritual advantage of our neighbours, ought to be our leading aims in all our actions, natural, civil, or religious.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1. Carefully therefore follow my directions, and imitate my example, in condescension to the weaknesses and prejudices of others for their good; and in everything else which I copy after the perfect pattern of our great Lord and Master Jesus Christ. 2. And indeed, my dear brethren, I cannot but commend you, that, notwithstanding all that your false teachers have done to corrupt you, the better part of you still discover the most dutiful regard to my apostolic authority, reputation, and comfort, and to the most important doctrines which I preached to you, and observe most of the rules relative to worship which I taught you. 3. Many irregularities, however, have been introduced into your church. Some of your women, under the pretext of praying or prophesying by immediate inspiration, appear in your public assemblies unveiled, and thus assume an undue authority over the men, or imitate the heathen priestesses. I beg you would seriously consider, that by divine appointment, suited to the nature of things, the Son of God, who created all things, is made head over his church, and over all men for her benefit; and husbands, according to the superiority of their sex, are the head of government to their wives; and God the Father, who has put all things under Christ, has, in that view, an authority over him as man and mediator. 4. Now the veiling of the head being a badge of modesty and subjection, and uncovering of it a token of superiority, in your country and many others, every man, who, by an extraordinary influence of the Spirit, leads your public worship in praying or preaching with a veil on his head or face, dishonours Jesus Christ, from whom he received his authority. 5. But every woman, who,

by the special influence of the Holy Ghost, pours out her prayers to God, or delivers exhortations to the people, with her head unveiled, shows a disrespect to her husband and his whole sex; for that is all one in signification as if she wore her hair short in the manner of a man. 6. If therefore women will throw off their veils, those badges of modesty and subjection, let them cut their hair short as men do: and if, as every one must, they think that immodest and contrary to custom, let them keep on their veils. 7. For men, being the honourable representations of God's supreme and glorious dominion over all, ought to mark their head with no token of subjection; but women's subjection to men being their distinguished honour, they ought, in all public assemblies, to mark their heads with the tokens of it. 8. For, in the original creation of mankind, Adam was not created out of the substance of Eve, but she was formed of one of his ribs. 9. Nor was Adam originally created for the sake of Eve, who then had no existence; but she was created to be a helpmeet for and comfort to him; plainly intimating that the woman, who was last formed, and out of the man, for his use, ought to live in all reasonable subjection to him. 10. Therefore, especially in acts of public worship, women, in deference to the superiority of those messengers whom Christ hath sent to preach the gospel, as well as in reference to holy angels present—and that evil angels may have no occasion given them to suggest anything proud or immodest—ought always to have their heads veiled, as a token of men's superiority and power over them. 11. Nevertheless, no man must look on himself as an absolute lord over a woman, to command and rule her in a harsh and tyrannical manner, according to his will and pleasure; as now a man can no more be independent of the woman than she of him, both being equally necessary and useful to one another, and mutually obliged to study and promote each other's comfort and advantage; and both, without any alteration of their natural or relative duties, being equally the subjects of Christ's spiritual kingdom, and sharers of spiritual blessings. 12. For as the woman at first was formed out of the man, so all the sons of Adam are conceived and born by women, the two sexes being thus the reciprocal means of each other's being and happiness. And it is God who makes each of the sexes what they are to one another, that they may discharge their mutual duties in the most affectionate manner. 13. I appeal then to your own unbiassed judgment, whether any inspiration from God can ever render it decent for a woman to invert the natural order of her appointment, and publicly mark herself as if equal in authority to a man. 14. Does not even nature itself, which has prompted all civilized nations to preserve an apparent distinction of the sexes, teach you, that, according to the custom of your country, it would be reckoned effeminate in a man to wear his hair in the length and form of a woman's? 15. And that, on the other hand, it is an honour for a woman to distinguish herself from the superior sex by the length and form of her hair, as it was given her by God for this very end.—It therefore follows, that veils, or any mode of dress which betokens modesty or subjection, ought always to be worn by your women in your religious assemblies. 16. But if, after all that I have said, any of your new teachers will contend for such a preposterous practice, know that no such thing is allowed by any apostle of Christ, or used in any New Testament church, whether of Jewish or Gentile converts.—17. Meanwhile, notwithstanding my having justly commended you for following my instructions and pattern, I must with regret reprove your disorderly behaviour in your religious meetings, which makes them turn out to the dishonour of Christ and your spiritual hurt: 18. For I am informed, and I fear too justly, that when ye meet together for the celebration of Christ's ordinances, to the breach of order, peace, and brotherly love, ye fall into parties and unchristian divisions; 19. For, considering the depravity of human nature, and how busy Satan and his instruments are to promote everything dishonourable to God and destructive to 32 But when we are judged, we are <sup>h</sup>hastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man hunger, <sup>i</sup>let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation.<sup>9</sup> And <sup>j</sup>the rest will I set in order when I come.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Spiritual gifts 4 are divers, 7 yet all to profit withal; 8 and to that end are diversely bestowed: 12 that by the like proportion, as the members of a natural body tend all to the 16 mutual decency, 22 service, and 26 succour of the same body; 27 so we should do one for another, to make up the mystical body of Christ.

NOW concerning <sup>a</sup>spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2 Ye know that ye were <sup>b</sup>Gentiles, carried away unto these <sup>c</sup>dumb idols,<sup>1</sup> even as ye were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, <sup>a</sup>that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus <sup>2</sup>accursed:<sup>3</sup> and that <sup>e</sup>no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now <sup>9</sup>there are diversities of gifts,<sup>4</sup> but the same Spirit.

5 And there are <sup>h</sup>differences of administrations,<sup>5</sup> but the same Lord.

6 And there are <sup>i</sup>diversities of operations; but it is <sup>j</sup>the same God which worketh all in all.<sup>6</sup>

7 But the <sup>k</sup>manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man<sup>7</sup> to profit withal.

8 For<sup>l</sup> to one is given, by the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge, by the same Spirit;

* The word translated 'gifts' is peculiar; it denotes gifts of only one kind, namely, eminent endowments, often of a supernatural character, bestowed upon those who in the early ages of the church received the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. These gifts were the outward manifestations of the indwelling Spirit. The bestowal of the Spirit was the foundation, so to speak, of all these supernatural powers.—P.

11 But<sup>u</sup> all these worketh<sup>8</sup> that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

12 For<sup>v</sup> as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ.

13 For<sup>w</sup> by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or <sup>9</sup>Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But<sup>y</sup> now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body?

20 But now are they many members, yet but one body.

men, there cannot fail to be offences, factions, schisms, and great corruptions of doctrine and worship in the church, which God, by his providence, overrules for the trial and honourable manifestation of sincere believers, and the detection of hypocritical professors. 20, 21. And this factious spirit has introduced such profane disorder amongst you in the celebration of the Lord's supper, as hath transformed it into a kind of tumultuous revel, and a feast for your bodies, rather than a solemn ordinance of Christ, appointed for an affectionate and brotherly fellowship with and commemoration of him. They who come first, bringing their provisions with them, fill their bellies without waiting for their brethren: they who bring much with them, like heathens at their idolatrous revels, eat and drink to the full, if not to excess; while the poor, who bring nothing with them, get nothing to eat or drink. 22. Think how absurd and scandalous this conduct is! If ye intend merely to satisfy your animal appetites, have ye not your own houses to eat and drink in? Or do ye aim at pouring contempt upon Christ's ordinances and church, and exposing and discouraging his poor members? 23. Ye cannot but know that it is contrary to the appointment of the Lord Jesus Christ; for, as taught by his own immediate revelation, I declared and recommended to you, that he, as sole King and Head of his church, having a right to institute ordinances, or demand obedience to them, and power to bless them for our spiritual edification, did,—for the sealing of his testament, the confirmation of our faith, and that he might show his constant affection to and great care of his people, and his infinite willingness and steadfast resolution to suffer for them, and that he might the more effectually engage our love to him and regard to this ordinance,—on the very night before his death, in which Judas betrayed him, take a part of the bread which they had left at the paschal supper; 24.

And having prayed over it for a blessing on it, with thanksgiving to God for the riches of his love and grace, and so set it apart for the intended holy use, he brake it, and gave each of his disciples a small piece of it, requiring them to take and eat it as a token and mean of their receiving by faith, and feeding on, his person God-man, which was quickly to suffer and die that he might save them;—and to do all in a believing, humble, joyful, thankful, and obediential remembrance of his person, dying love, extreme sufferings, the blessings thereby secured, and of their obligations to love and duty thereby constituted. 25. In the same manner, after the passover supper, he took a cup with some wine in it, and, setting it apart to a holy use by solemn prayer and thanksgiving, he intimated that this consecrated liquor was to be a standing symbol and mean of applying his blood, or complete sacrifice, by which the conditions of pardon was fulfilled, its blessings secured, and promises confirmed; and required them all to drink it in a humble, affectionate, penitential, grateful, and self-dedicating remembrance of his bleeding love, and tremendous sufferings for their redemption. 26. For as often as ye eat and drink these consecrated elements, ye publicly avow to God, to your consciences, and to the world, that ye glory in your crucified Redeemer, believe and rest upon his death as the only ground of your pardon and reconciliation with God, and of all your hopes of eternal life,—and that in the firm faith of his appearance to judge the world. 27. Whoever therefore shall, contrary to the nature and design of this solemn ordinance, partake of it in an ignorant, irreverent, factious, uncharitable, carnal, and sensual manner, he shall be held guilty of profaning and pouring contempt upon the person and righteousness of the Lord Jesus, and, as it were, crucifying him afresh. 28. In order therefore to a safe and proper partaking of this ordinance, every person ought necessarily to examine his own state before God, his knowledge of the nature, use, and ends of the ordinance,—and his faith, repentance, love, and new obedience; and to discern the Lord's body;—and with these serious inquiries, and in the exercise of these graces, to partake of the consecrated bread and wine in obedience to Christ's appointment, and as his instituted means of fellowship with himself. 29. For he who, neglecting such preparation, eats and drinks this supper of the Lord Jesus Christ from carnal principles and views, with an unfriendly and contentious spirit, or in a hypocritical or irreverent manner, does thereby deserve, and expose himself to, the just judgments of God in this life and that which is to come, as he does not spiritually discern the person and righteousness of Christ, God-man, represented in these elements, but considers and uses them as common food. 30. And it is on account of your shameful disorders in temper and practice, in the partaking of this solemn ordinance, that God has rendered many of you Corinthian professors weak and sickly, and has cut off others by death. 31. Did we indeed seriously and conscientiously search our own hearts and behaviour, and condemn and repent of whatever we found amiss, we should escape God's severe chastisements. 32. And if any of us believers be terribly afflicted on earth, we are therein wisely and mercifully chastised by the Lord Jesus Christ as our Father, that we may be thereby restrained from such sinning as would be inconsistent with a gracious state, and that our future condemnation with the wicked world may be prevented. 33. Wherefore, my dearly beloved brethren in Christ, study for the future to avoid all profanation of this solemn ordinance; and when ye assemble to partake of it, wait for one another, that ye may all communicate together at the same table in truly Christian fellowship with Christ, and with one another as his children and

23 And those members of the body, which we think to be <sup>b</sup>less honourable, upon these we bestow<sup>2</sup> more abundant honour; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness.

24 For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having brethren. 34. And if any of you be hungry, satisfy your craving appetites at home, never at the Lord's table, which was appointed not for satiating natural appetites, but for the spiritual refreshment of souls;—that so ye may no more meet to hurt and endanger yourselves by an uncharitable, carnal, and factious profanation of that holy supper.—Some lesser disorders I expect to rectify when I pay you another visit.

Ver. 2. All things—with the exception of the neglect and error specified, ver. 17.—Ordinances—directions, injunctions, deliverances, whether written or oral (2 Th. 2. 15), or traditions, as in the margin: but this affords no countenance to the Romish doctrine of tradition, for these apostolic traditions regard merely external order; but the Romish traditions relate to doctrines, many of which are represented as kept, as it were, in private reserve for centuries, until a time come for their public revelation. C.

Ver. 3. The head of every man is Christ—believers (the brethren spoken of, ver. 2) being united to him by one Spirit and one human nature.—The head of the woman is the man—she being united to him by one covenant and one common nature; and the head of Christ is God, that is, the Father, Mat. 16. 20; they being united by one spirit and one divine nature. C.

Ver. 4. Covered (that is, with a veil), dishonoureth his head. Some think, his head literally, which he dishonours by dressing as a woman. It seems better to understand it of Christ, whose superiority, in his absence, he thus emblematically assumes. C.

Ver. 5. But every woman . . . with her head uncovered (by a veil) dishonoureth her head. Some think, her head literally, which she thus immodestly exposes—others, her husband, whose superiority, in his presence, she thus emblematically denies. C.

Ver. 18. These 'divisions' (ῥαίσματα) are not separations from the church, but parties in it—not formed by differences of faith, but by the neglect of apostolic order, the adoption of human devices and self-will in the observance of ordinances, and the absence of brotherly-kindness between the rich and the poor. C.

Ver. 24. This is my body. That is, in the same sense as 'that Rock was Christ,' see ch. 10. 4; or, as the original literally has it, 'that Rock was the Christ,' unquestionably meaning a type, emblem, or figure of him; and even so was bread broken an emblem of Christ's body and memorial of his death. C.

Ver. 27. Unworthily. A messenger or letter may be treated 'unworthily' by neglect, contempt, or injury. The bread and wine being the representatives of Christ's body and blood are treated 'unworthily,' when the end of the ordinance—remembrance of a crucified Redeemer, and self-examination—are neglected. C.

Ver. 29. As in the heavens the natural eye 'discerns' nothing but sun, moon, and stars, while yet the intellectual eye 'discerns' the glory of God, Ps. 19. 1; so in the communion the natural eye 'discerns' nothing but bread and wine, while faith in the representative 'discerns' the body and blood of the Lord.—Note, There are two sins peculiar to an unholy communicant and to the unholy neglecter of the communion: (1) Self-unexamined; (2) Christ's body undiscerned. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In Christ alone we find example without defect, and authority without restriction. But whatever is good in his servants or people ought to be carefully imitated; and his ordinances should be conscientiously received from the hand of his ministers. With exact care ought all to observe the natural order of things, and to study a modest decency of dress, especially in worshipping assemblies. And it is hurtful to the interests of religion when church-members fall into a contentious and uncharitable temper and conduct towards one another. Great is the mercy that God overrules this, as well as the heresies, the doctrines, which Satan and his instruments introduce into the church, for the improvement of true believers and the detection of hypocrites. In great kindness hath Jesus appointed his sacramental supper for the spiritual refreshment and mutual fellowship of his people on earth. And it ought to be observed in a simple, but judicious, obediential, believing, and devoutly solemn manner, and for the most important ends. Serious examination of our state, nature, and practice, and of our condition, frame, and ends, should always precede our approaches to it; and in a distinct discernment of Jesus Christ as God-man and the Lord our righteousness, and in delightful but reverential views of his second coming, ought we to receive it.—Heinous is the sin and fearful the danger of unworthily communicating. And often God severely chastises his own

1 The tenderest, and, in that sense, the most 'feeble' member of the body is the eye; yet its importance both to bodily and mental attainment and enjoyment needs no proof. So the weakest believer, with little knowledge, and with the most sensitive trembling conscience, and that shrinking piety that smites upon the breast, and dares scarcely look up to God (Lu. 18. 13), and merely ventures to pray 'God be merciful (through Christ) to me a sinner,' may,

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. Now, with respect to the distinguished gifts of wisdom, knowledge, prophecy, working of miracles, or the like, which have been abundantly bestowed on some of you by the Spirit of God, I would have you to consider their true origin, nature, and end, that ye may no longer make them occasions of pride, envy, and strife. 2. You cannot pretend that you deserved them, when ye were so lately drowned in ignorance, idolatry, and other wickedness, seduced by Satan and your priests to worship lifeless images and fancied deities; nor can ye pretend that such idols could bestow such gifts upon you. 3. To check your own pride, prejudice, and envy, and that ye may discern the difference of your spiritual gifts from all delusive and magical operations, observe that no man who thinks or acts under the influence of the Holy Ghost, whose design and work is to promote Christ's honour, can reject or represent Christ as an impostor, abandoned of God; nor can he work a miracle to confirm such blasphemy: and that no man can heartily acknowledge Christ for the great God, and his only Saviour, Lord, and Master, or preach him as such, and work any miracles to confirm his doctrine, but by the power of the Holy Ghost. 4. To manifest their true original, and also to direct you to the proper use of them, observe further, that though the kinds and degrees of the gifts bestowed upon church-officers and private believers be very diversified and numerous, yet it is the same divine Spirit who bestows and enables rightly to use them all. 5. And that though there be a great diversity of offices and services in the Christian church, yet it is one and the same Lord Jesus who has instituted all these offices, and who calls and qualifies such particular persons to execute them; and they all act under his authority and by his influence, as their Head, Lord, and King. 6. And though there be divers miraculous operations performed in the exercise of these gifts and discharge of these offices, it is the one divine Father who, with the Son and Holy Spirit, grants all these abilities, and the good effects thereof. 7. And to prevent your abuse of these spiritual gifts and offices, always remember, that all these demonstrations of the peculiar presence, light, and power of the Holy Ghost, and of the Father and Son along with him, are not granted to those who receive them for their own private advantage or honour, but for the instruction, edification, and confirmation of the whole church or mystical body of Christ. 8. For this common end the same Holy Spirit endows one with a clear understanding of the doctrines of the gospel, and skill duly to preach and apply them to his hearers, that they may know and believe them to their own salvation; he endows another with a deep insight into the types and predictions of the Old Testament, and an ability to explain them to others, and show how they are fulfilled in Christ, and what relates to him. 9. To another he freely grants a most assured persuasion of the truths of the gospel, an undaunted boldness in preaching them, and an unshaken dependence on Christ for that assistance which is necessary in any dangerous or difficult service. To another, for the confirmation of the gospel, he grants a power of healing all manner of bodily distempers in an instant, without the use of ordinary means. 10. To another he gives a power of inflicting plagues on notorious offenders, or of raising the dead, or of conferring miraculous powers on others. To another he grants an ability to foretell future events, which, when fulfilled, tend to the confirmation of the gospel. To another he gives an ability to discern whether other men be actuated by the Spirit of God or by the devil; and whether their tempers, designs, and qualifications render them fit for being employed in any public affairs of the church. To another he gives an ability to speak whatever foreign languages are necessary for the propagation of the gospel. And, in fine, to another he gives an ability to interpret, with propriety and exactness, whatever is said in an unknown tongue, to such as do not understand it. 11. But whatever be the diversity of the gifts in their kind or degree, or of the persons to whom they are granted, or of the noble purposes for which they are designed, they are all conferred by the same Spirit of God, who, for the general benefit of the church, bestows his gifts upon particular persons, in whatever form or degree, or with whatever success, is best. 12. For as our head, eyes, ears, hands, feet, and other parts of our outward man, do all concur to form one body, actuated by one soul, so, in the church of Christ, all the members unnumbered, in their inexpressibly diversified stations and conditions, do, in union with Jesus Christ their Head, form one complete mystical body, or catholic church. 13. For without any regard to our being Jews or Gentiles, slaves or freemen, or any other condition of outward life, we are all, by these gifts, and by our participation of baptism and the Lord's supper, and by the renovation which we have experienced, and the spiritual nourishment we receive, divinely connected into one Christian church, and entitled to all the blessings and privileges thereof. 14. And as in the natural body, so in the spiritual body of Christ, many members, some of superior, and others of inferior excellence and use, do all necessarily conduce to the perfection and beauty of the whole; 15, 16. How absurd were it to pretend that any particular member is not a part of our body, because it is not some other more excellent and useful member! And no less absurd were it to pretend that those members of the church whose gifts and graces are of an inferior degree, are of no necessity or advantage to the whole church of Christ, or the advancement of his glory. 17. If all our bodily members were fitted for one use, we must want all the senses but one; and if all the members of the church had but one sort of gifts and graces, the beauty, pleasure, and advantage of its rich variety would be lost, to the great detriment, or rather ruin, of the whole. 18. But as in the natural body, so also in the church, God has placed and connected every member to the best advantage, and furnished it with proper powers, which must be exercised for the common benefit of the whole. 19-22. Nay, there could not be either a human or a spiritual body unless there was a variety of members fitted for different purposes, and wisely connected together, so that the members which have superior excellence or usefulness as necessarily depend on the inferior ones as they on them.—Yea, the very weakest members of our body, such as the organs for digesting our food, or circulating our blood and animal spirits, are more necessary to the life and vigour of our body than some of the strongest; and so weak Christians are often more useful than some apparently stronger. 23-25. And as we bestow more pains to conceal and finely cover some uncomely parts of our body, so, in this imperfect state, the less graceful members of the church ought to have their infirmities covered with a mantle of love; for as our face, hands, and other comely parts of our body, need not to be adorned or concealed, but only those which are less graceful, so, in the church, while the more eminent ministers and Christians easily approve themselves to the consciences of all around, the Lord requires that 29 Are<sup>o</sup> all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all <sup>5</sup>workers of miracles?

30 Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret?

31 But<sup>p</sup> covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet show I unto you a more excellent way.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 All gifts, 2, 3 how excellent soever, are nothing worth without charity. 4 The praises thereof, and 13 prelation before hope and faith.

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of 'angels, and have not <sup>b</sup>charity,<sup>1</sup> I am become as sounding brass,<sup>2</sup> or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And<sup>c</sup> though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

others who are weaker, but sincere and faithful, should have their infirmities tenderly concealed and borne with, and that they should be assisted and encouraged in everything good.—26. God has thus adjusted the excellency, usefulness, strength, or honour of the different members of the body, natural or spiritual, that there might be no discord, alienation, or disrespect among fellow-members, but all solicitously care for one another's welfare; and that the union and mutual sympathy might be such, that the griefs, pleasures, honours, or dishonours of every particular member might affect the whole. 27. Now, to apply all this to our present purpose—ye, considered in your church state, are a mystical body, of which Christ is the Head, and connected in holy fellowship not only with your fellow-Christians at Corinth, but with all those who anywhere profess their union and communion with Jesus Christ, and therefore ought, in your several stations, to employ all your offices, gifts, and graces for the good of the whole, and to sympathize with one another in trouble, and rejoice in the prosperity of others as if it were your own. 28. And for the edification of the church God has appointed in her officers of many diversified forms—such as, (1) Apostles, who receive their commission immediately from Christ, are infallibly furnished with wisdom and knowledge, are founders of churches, and have authority over the whole visible church; (2) Prophets, who either foretell future events, or explain dark passages of the Old Testament, by the word of knowledge; (3) Teachers, whether evangelists, who are fixed to no particular church, but are itinerant assistants of the apostles; or fixed pastors, who have particular charges; or preachers, who authoritatively proclaim Christ's messages to men; (4) Workers of miracles in general; (5) Miraculous healers of the sick; (6) Deacons, who assist church-rulers in providing for the table of the Lord, the ministers, and the poor; (7) Ruling elders, who, without preaching, inspect the manners of the people, censure offenders, and govern the affairs of congregations, in sessions, presbyteries, or synods; and, in fine, speakers in foreign languages, or interpreters thereof. 29, 30. To pretend that all the members, or even all the officers of the church ought to be apostles, prophets, preachers, workers of miracles, speakers with tongues, or interpreters, would be as absurd as to pretend that all the members of our human body should be of one sort, or fitted for every use, to render all the rest needless. But God hath so diversified these stations, offices, and qualifications, and yet so connected them, that none may either neglect, despise, or envy another. 31. It is indeed laudable, with humble submission to God's will, to desire earnestly the most eminent gifts, in subordination to Christ and his grace; but it is far better to improve whatever gifts God gives you, be they more or less, with a spirit of love for each other's edification.

Ver. 13. By one Spirit are we all baptized. The apostle is treating of persons amply endowed with various spiritual gifts; consequently the baptism of which he speaks is not the mere

It signifies love in its highest and best form. It is, says Stanley, 'the practical ex-

C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the stupidity of men if left to their own hearts' lusts. And alarming was the wickedness and wretchedness of the Gentile world when God called them by his gospel and grace. Very necessary is the indwelling operation of the Holy Ghost to procure Christ his due honour and obedience. And manifest is his supreme Godhead, who supplies the whole church with furniture, miraculous or gracious. With great wisdom and tenderness he bestowed his extraordinary influences for the confirmation and spread of the gospel in the primitive church, and continues his ordinary gifts and graces in the church till the end of the world. And all his gifts are given not so properly for the receiver as for the glory of God, in the conversion and edification of others. Marvellously are church members and officers connected into one body under Christ their head. And mutual usefulness, love, and sympathy ought to spread through the whole. The very meanest member should be esteemed and honoured as dear to Christ and useful to the church. No necessary office or officer is wanting in her; and all ought to remember that a gracious principle of love to Christ and his people is more excellent than any gifts whatever.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1. Such is the transcendent excellency and necessity of that true Christian love which, from regard to Christ, and in obedience to his commands, earnestly seeks the good of others, that though I or any other could, by the special gift of the Holy Ghost, speak all the languages of mankind with the eloquence of angels, we should be as a mere empty noise or useless show if we were destitute of this. 2. Had we the gift of prophecy, qualifying us to foretell all future events, or explain and apply all the predictions of the Old Testament; or had we the clearest insight into the sublime mysteries of the gospel or revelation, and the greatest compass of human knowledge that ever a mere creature attained; and had we the strongest faith of miracles that we could remove mountains at pleasure; yet, without this true Christian love to God, and to men for his sake, we could not exercise these gifts for his glory and their good; nay, could have no real grace, no true Christianity. 3. And though we were so liberal as to dispose of all that we have in the world for the relief of the poor, and showed so much zeal, fortitude, and self-denial, as to suffer the most cruel martyrdom for the truths of Christ, yet if we had not sincere love to him, and his members, interests, and honour, it would be of no advantage to our spiritual or eternal happiness, but merely procure a transient and empty character among men.—4. This true Christian love of which I speak is a most amiable, generous, and operative grace: it endures injuries, affronts, and provocations, with great patience and long-suffering; it is always courteous, affable, and beneficent, ready on every account to do good; it never grudges nor murmurs at the prosperity, riches, honours, gifts, or graces of others; it never behaves with insolence, contempt, or scorn towards persons of inferior rank or attainments, nor acts rashly or perversely to the hurt of others; nor does it fill a man with proud conceit of his own person, gifts, graces, or worldly privileges. 5. It never disposes men to act anything indecent, base, vile, or unsuitable to their station, age, calling, or Christian profession; it never aims at nor pursues any private personal advantage, to the hurt of others, nor inordinately seeks after riches, honours, or pleasures, at the expense of others; it is not angry without cause, nor easily provoked with the greatest injuries, nor disposed to any unchristian resentment; it is never ready to suspect evil of others, or to put the worst construction upon their conduct; much less does it seek to find fault, to aggravate what is really amiss, or to devise mischief of any kind. 6. It takes no pleasure in falsehood or unrighteousness, either in ourselves or others, but grieves at our and their sins and failures, and rejoices in their just and regular department, and in our own sincere and faithful behaviour towards God or men; and delights to see the truth of the gospel, and real, vital, and practical religion flourish in ourselves or others. 7. It covers the faults of others, as far as can be done without sin; bears their infirmities, and suffers many injuries, rather than requite them: it is inclined to believe good of every one, till it have convincing evidence to the contrary; and even where things look suspicious, it hopes the best as long as it can, and that, by the grace of God, what is wrong may be afterwards amended; and it continues steadfast, patient, and Christianly brave, under all the hardships and ill-usage it meets with. 8. This super-excellent grace of love to God, to Christ, and to his people is never utterly lost out of the heart, and is of perpetual use in every circumstance of life in this world, and in the other it will be perfected, and shine forth in all its glory; whereas the gifts of foretelling future events, speaking with divers tongues, or of immediate inspiration in the mysteries of the gospel for the instruction of others, are only useful for a little while in the church on earth, and will be of no use at all in the eternal state. 9, 10. For even the best and wisest of us have here but a very imperfect knowledge of the divine mysteries or future events represented to us in the Word of God; but when we arrive at the heavenly state of perfection for which we are looking, hoping, and longing, all the defects which attend our own knowledge, or communication of it to others, will be removed, and we shall have as plain and extensive views of things present and future as the most perfect happiness of the most exalted creatures can require. 11. For as when we grow up to manhood we put away our childish, weak, confused, crude, and mistaken notions, and our silly and trifling manner of speaking of things, so, when we arrive at the state of perfect men 10 But <sup>1</sup>when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When<sup>a</sup> I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought<sup>5</sup> as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For<sup>o</sup> now we see through a glass, darkly;<sup>6</sup> but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

13 And now <sup>a</sup>abideth faith, hope, eharity, these three; but <sup>a</sup>the greatest of these is eharity.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Prophecy is commended, 2, 3, 4 and preferred before speaking with tongues, 6 by a comparison drawn from musical instruments. 12 Both must be referred to edification, 22 as to their true and proper end. 26 The true use of each is taught, 29 and the abuse taxed. 34 Women are forbidden to speak in the church.

FOLLOW after<sup>a</sup> eharity, and <sup>b</sup>desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

3 But <sup>h</sup>he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and eomfort.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but<sup>h</sup> rather that ye prophesied: for greater is in Christ, we shall correct multitudes of our present mistakes, and shall have inexpressibly more just and clear apprehensions of divine things than in our present state of childhood on earth. 12. For in this mortal state of imperfection we obtain no more through the Word and ordinances of God than an obscure, confused, and perplexing view of the mysteries of his nature, perfections, purposes, and works of creation, providence, and redemption; but in the state of glory above we shall know these matters in the most immediate, clear, distinct, perfect, and satisfying manner—like to that in which we are now known by our most familiar friends, or shall be known by God, angels, and glorified saints. 13. Not only is this Christian love preferable to every spiritual gift, but even to every saving grace; for in this present life, faith, hope, and love constantly reside in us, and ought to be exercised by us, as all absolutely necessary in our salvation; but love is the most excellent, as it relates not only to God and ourselves, but also to our neighbours: it is the evidence of true faith and hope; it is our brightest conformity to God, who is love; and when faith and hope shall, as it were, give place to immediate vision and full enjoyment, love to God, to Christ, to saints, and holy angels will for ever flame with the most disinterested and delightful ardour, as a great part of our happiness.

Ver. 5. Unseemly. In a manner unnecessarily offensive to the opinions, habits, or even the prejudices of others.—Seeketh not her own, exclusively, selfishly; but pays an equal attention to the prosperity and comfort of others.—Thinketh no evil. Does not note down or journalize, as it were, injuries received—does not impute them; that is, forgives them. C.

Ver. 7. Beareth. Rather, covers, conceals, all the errors of men that it is right to hide.—Believeth all things that have any reasonable evidence; whereas prejudice and malignity will not believe 'though one rose from the dead.' C.

Ver. 12. That glass, such as the moderns possess, was manufactured by the ancients, is now beyond dispute; the only difference being that the moderns have attained the art of rendering it more transparent. The apostle therefore intimates that spiritual objects are now seen as natural objects through a dim or dingy glass, but that they soon will be seen as distinctly as those who see each other 'face to face.'—Lord, hasten the time of this blessed vision! C.

Ver. 13. 'The foregoing passage stands alone in the writings of St. Paul, both in its subject and in its style. This epistle finds its climax here, as that to the Romans in the conclusion of ch. viii., or that to the Hebrews in ch. xi. Whatever evil tendencies he had noticed before in the Corinthian church, met their true correction in this one gift. . . . Unlike the mere rhetorical panegyrics on particular virtues which are to be found in Philo and similar writers, every word of the description tells with double force, because it is aimed against a real enemy. It is as though, wearied with the long discussions against the sins of the Corinthian church, he had at last found the spell by which they could be overcome, and uttered sentence after sentence with the triumphant cry of eureka! (Stanley). The language is beautiful, approaching the highest standard of Attic purity; the rhetorical structure is conceived with the most consummate skill; the imagery and rhythm are chaste, musical, and wonderfully impressive. None can read this noble passage without feeling that the highest human genius is here inspired with a power greater than human. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Men may make splendid and pompous appearances in the church, and yet be destitute of real principles of grace. No gifts, however miraculous; no liberality, however extensive; no sufferings for the cause of Christ, can avail, unless they be connected with a principle of saving faith in Christ, and love to him and to his people. Marvellous is the excellency and usefulness of true evangelical love. What benevolence, meekness, patience, humility, forbearance, candour, willingness to believe and hope the best; what disinterested sympathy and generosity; what tender and friendly care it produces! It is much more durable than all spiritual gifts, and, in some sense, than its sister graces of faith and hope, which are so useful in this world. And thrice happy will it be when saints arrive at a perfect knowledge of God; and when love, for the promoting of which faith and hope were but means, shall eternally flame in all our breasts to JEHOVAH, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as our ALL and IN ALL, and towards our fellow-sharers in happiness on his account.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1. Let me therefore earnestly entreat and charge you to cultivate, improve, and exercise this important grace of Christian love; and in subordination to it be zealously concerned to abound in spiritual gifts, provided it be with a view to glorify God and edify your neighbour: and I recommend to you chiefly the gift of prophecy, by which, under the direction of the Holy Ghost, ye may explain and apply the oracles of God, for instructing, edifying, and confirming one another upon the principles and in the exercise of Christian love. 2. For as to the gift of speaking unknown languages, which some of you are

* It appears from the whole scope of the passage that some had the gift of speaking in other tongues—of pronouncing words and sentences so as to convey definite ideas to those who understood the language spoken—while the speaker himself did not understand the meaning of what he said. He was an instrument miraculously employed by the Spirit of God. Paul did not set a high value on this gift by itself. Except an interpreter were present, it was useless—a mere exhibition of miraculous power he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the echureh may receive edifying.

6 Now, brethren, <sup>1</sup>if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?<sup>3</sup>

7 And even things without life, giving sound, <sup>1</sup>whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the sounds,<sup>4</sup> how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the <sup>1</sup>trumpet give an uneertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?

9 So likewise ye, execept ye utter by the tongue words easy<sup>5</sup> to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall <sup>1</sup>speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be,<sup>6</sup> so many kinds of voiees in the world, and none of them is without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voiee, I shall be unto him that speaketh a <sup>1</sup>barbarian; and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even<sup>o</sup> so ye, forasmueh as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts,<sup>7</sup> seek that ye may exeel to the edifying of the echureh.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue, pray<sup>8</sup> that <sup>1</sup>he may <sup>9</sup>interpret.

so fond of, it is much less useful; for let a man deliver the most important and seasonable truths, under the immediate direction of the Spirit of God, in a language which his hearers understand not, they are nothing instructed or edified by all that he says. 3. But he who explains the Old Testament types or predictions, or publishes articles of gospel truth, in plain language, speaks to his audience in a manner calculated to enlighten their understanding, awaken their conscience, warm and comfort their heart, and direct and excite them to the duties of holiness. 4. He who speaks to an audience in the now disused Hebrew, or any other unknown language, or in a style above their capacity, may express what tends to his own spiritual edification; but he who explains the Scripture, and makes known the will of God relative to the salvation of men, not only profits his own soul, but becomes instrumental in the conversion of new members to the church, or in promoting the knowledge, faith, love, and holy obedience of those formerly converted. 5, 6. I could heartily wish that ye could all speak foreign languages, but much rather that ye were skilful in explaining and applying the doctrines of divine revelation; for it is of far greater use and importance plainly to explain the mysteries and predictions of God than to discourse of his most wonderful works in a language which the hearers cannot understand. 7-9. For (to illustrate the point by similitudes) as a pipe or harp cannot excite the different passions, or direct different motions in mourning or mirth, unless the sound be made distinct and answerable to them; nor can a trumpet direct the march, the charge, or retreat of soldiers in war, unless it be distinctly and answerably sounded; so, your words are all lost unless you speak in intelligible language; and ye might as well speak to the wind if your hearers do not understand you. 10. There are perhaps as many different languages in the world as there are different nations in it, and all of them useful to convey ideas to such as understand them, but to none else. 11. If I then should meet with one who talks in a language which I do not understand, and who understands nothing of mine, neither of us could instruct, or be instructed by, or even sensibly answer one another. any more than if we were wild savages of different nations; and this will be the very case with you, if ye 15 What is it then? <sup>a</sup>I will pray<sup>2</sup> with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also.

16 Else, when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say <sup>a</sup>Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?

17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I thank my God, <sup>a</sup>I speak with tongues more than ye all:

19 Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding,<sup>3</sup> that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

20 Brethren, be <sup>a</sup>not children<sup>4</sup> in understanding: howbeit in malice <sup>b</sup>be ye children, but in understanding be men.<sup>5</sup>

21 In the <sup>a</sup>law it is written, <sup>b</sup>With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord.

22 Wherefore tongues are for a <sup>a</sup>sign, <sup>a</sup>not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not,<sup>6</sup> but for them which believe.

23 If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say <sup>b</sup>that ye are mad?

24 But<sup>c</sup> if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all:

deliver divine truths to others in an unknown language.

12. Let me then beseech you who are so zealous to obtain spiritual gifts, to be less careful in speaking strange languages, and more earnest for such gifts as may increase the number and promote the knowledge, faith, and holiness of your fellow-Christians. 13. And if any be still fond of a miraculous speaking of foreign languages, let him supplicate God for ability to interpret what he says to his hearers in their mother tongue, that they may be profited by the discourse. 14. For if I or any other should pray as the mouth of a company who understand not my words, my own heart might be engaged in the prayer, but the impression of what I say on my own mind could be of no use to them who know not the meaning of my words. 15. It is therefore manifestly proper that in leading the prayers and praises of a congregation, not only I myself should understand and be affected with what I utter, but that my language should be plain to all who profess to join with me, that they may with understanding heartily join in the work. 16. Or else if any of you, under the immediate direction of the Holy Ghost, offer thanksgiving and praises to God in a public assembly in an unknown language, he who understands nothing but his mother tongue, and comes to learn by your administrations, can never give his assent or consent, either in heart or voice, because he knows not the meaning of your words. 17. You may have performed this part of worship in a very judicious, spiritual, heavenly, and affectionate manner; but the hearers, who do not understand what you say, cannot be profited by it. 18, 19. For my part, I thank God that, in the extensive course of my ministry, I have been enabled to speak, as occasions required, in many more foreign languages than any if not all of your teachers. But instead of priding myself in this talent, I had rather utter a few plain words, calculated for the instruction and edification of my hearers, than make ten thousand discourses in a language which they do not understand, and so cannot be profited by them. 20. Never, my brethren, show yourselves weak and childish in affecting novelties or pompous appearances; as, for instance, the speaking of unknown languages. Be like children in the meekness, harmlessness, and humility of your disposition and behaviour, and in freedom from all malicious, proud, and envious designs; but in knowledge, judgment, and discretion, especially in your apprehensions and management of spiritual things, it becomes you to think and act like men grown up to ripeness of understanding. 21, 22. To make you less fond of speaking in unknown languages, and that you may use them only in a proper manner, remember that God threatened to punish his incorrigible people by nations whose language they understood not, as well as to enable his ministers to speak in divers languages, without any happy effects.—The being spoken to in unknown languages is therefore but an occasional mean of punishing obstinate unbelievers, or a miraculous mean of converting heathens to Christ at first, by manifesting the power of God; whereas the explaining and applying the doctrines of the Old Testament is, by the ordination and blessing of God, a standing mean of gaining sinners to Jesus Christ, and of building up saints in holiness and comfort through faith unto complete salvation. 23. If then, while ye or other churches are met for worshipping God in your public assemblies, and every one that speaks, in preaching, prayer, or praise, is using an uninterpreted language which the audience does not understand, some heathen, who knows not a word of what is said, should come in, would your use of unknown languages be a likely mean of convincing or converting him; or would he not rather condemn you, as a number of frantic enthusiasts, or men possessed by the devil, rather than conducted and influenced by the infinitely wise Spirit of God? 24, 25. But if, where every minister preaches or prays plainly in a well-known language, a heathen or ignorant person come in, he has, in every discourse, a fair opportunity to be, by the Spirit of God, effectually convinced of his sin and misery, and made to condemn himself as guilty. Thus his state and secret dispositions, thoughts, and actions, being exactly laid open to his conscience by the preachers, struck with a reverential awe of God's majesty, he will be constrained, with brokenness of heart, to a deep humiliation for sin and supplication for mercy, and will report to his friends that God attends his ordinances among you with extraordinary power and influence. 26. How absurd is it, brethren, that in your meetings for public worship one of your public teachers should raise a psalm, another tender an instruction or exhortation, another speak in an unknown language, another deliver some immediate inspiration, another interpret what is delivered in an unknown tongue—perhaps all at once, or as if each were fond first to display his talents! Let these gifts of the Spirit, and everything else, be used in such an orderly and seasonable manner as to prevent all confusion, and as may be most effectual for enlarging the church of Christ, and promoting the spiritual growth of every member of it. 27. And if, after all that I have said, some of you will use foreign languages, let it be at suitable times, and in a regular manner, so that there may not ordinarily be above two or three speakers at a time, and they one after another; and let one faithfully interpret what they have said in the vulgar tongue, that all may receive instruction. 28. And if no one present can interpret it, let none use his gift of tongues, as the assembly cannot be profited by it; and let him be contented to use it in his own secret devotions.—29. And with respect to the gift of prophecy, let but two or three of them who have it speak at one of your public meetings, and that in an orderly manner, without interrupting or interfering with one another; and as many false prophets are gone abroad in the church, let everything uttered by one prophet be carefully examined and tried whether it agree with the tenor of Old Testament predictions and New Testament revelations. 30. And if any important intimation of God's mind be made to another prophet who is in the assembly as a hearer and judge, let the speaker, upon a proper signal given, stop, and give him an opportunity to declare it. 31. In this orderly manner all your teachers may have successive opportunities to declare the truths of Christ, for the instruction and comfort of one another and of the whole church. 32. And it is certain that no inspiration of the Holy Ghost can render men frantic or disorderly, as diabolic influences render the heathen priests; but it leaves every one to govern himself becomingly, either as to the matter, manner, or time of his discourse. 33. For that infinitely wise God who inspires them can never be an author, abettor, or encourager of any disorderly, unseasonable, and tumultuous conduct in his worship; but, as the God of peace and order in all the assemblies of sanctified believers, he is the commander, approver, promoter, and author of everything regular, pacific, and edifying. 34. And as for your women, let them never, except in extraordinary cases of inspiration, speak at all in your public assemblies, but learn, according to the law of God, to discover the utmost humility and modest subjection to the other sex. 35. And if they want more thorough information about anything said in public, let them ask their husbands at home concerning it; for it is unbecoming the modesty of women, except when inspired, to presume to discourse or debate in public religious assemblies. 36. Why should ye indulge practices different from those of all other Christian churches? Ye cannot pretend that ye are the only or even the first planted church from which the truths of the gospel, and an original pattern of conduct, were conveyed to others. Are ye not then equally tied down to the institutions of Christ, the common King and Head both of you and them? 37. If any of your high pretenders to an uncommon share of spiritual gifts think himself authorized to give laws to your church, let him know that the directions which I have given you were communicated to me by the Spirit of Christ, and are founded in the general rules which he laid down in his personal ministry. 38. And if any one will perversely persist in his ignorance, contempt of, or opposition to these rules, let him do it at his peril before God, whose mind I have declared. 39. On the whole, I advise you to be most desirous of the gift of prophecy, which is most useful for general edification; and, nevertheless, I do not forbid nor discourage the regular use of the gift of tongues. 40. But in everything carefully avoid all appearance of childishness, frenzy, or other indecency, in the public worship of God, and labour to perform it in a manner exactly answerable to the commands now given you from Christ, which will most glorify God, honour his doctrines, ordinances, and ways, and edify the souls of his people.

Ver. 34. This prohibition seems to contradict ch. 11. 5, 13, where the prophesying of women appears to be taken for granted. The simplest solution of the difficulty seems to be—that the speaking here prohibited is not praying or prophesying, but asking questions and entering into discussions in the church (see ver. 35)—a custom that prevailed in the Jewish synagogues between the rabbis and the people; which had been thence transfused into the Christian church, and which, under the proper management of humility and love, seems still well calculated for the public edification. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What diversified gifts God bestowed upon his Christian church in her infant state! And those gifts which are most useful and edifying ought to be chiefly prized and sought after. What is most showy is ordinarily least useful. And every gift 25 And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so, falling down on his face, he will worship God, and report that <sup>d</sup>God is in you of a truth.

26 How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, <sup>e</sup>every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. <sup>f</sup>Let all things be done unto edifying.

27 If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God.

29 Let<sup>h</sup> the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge.<sup>7</sup>

30 If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the <sup>i</sup>first hold his peace.

31 For<sup>j</sup> ye may all prophesy<sup>8</sup> one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted.

32 And<sup>k</sup> the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.<sup>9</sup>

33 For God is not the author of confusion,<sup>1</sup> but<sup>l</sup> of peace, as in all churches of the saints.

34 Let<sup>n</sup> your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak: but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law.

35 And if they will learn any thing, <sup>o</sup>let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.

36 What! came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you only?

37 If<sup>a</sup> any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.<sup>3</sup>

38 But<sup>r</sup> if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.<sup>4</sup>

39 Wherefore, brethren, <sup>s</sup>covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues.

40 Let<sup>t</sup> all things be done decently and in order.

CHAPTER XV.

3 By Christ's resurrection, 12 he proveth the necessity of our resurrection, against all such as deny the resurrection of the body. 21 The fruit, 35 and manner thereof, 51 and of the changing of them that shall be found alive at the last day.

MOREOVER, brethren, <sup>a</sup>I declare<sup>1</sup> unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand;

2 By<sup>b</sup> which also ye are saved, if ye keep<sup>2</sup> in memory<sup>3</sup> what<sup>4</sup> I preached unto you, <sup>c</sup>unless ye have believed in vain.

3 For <sup>d</sup>I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, <sup>e</sup>how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

4 And<sup>f</sup> that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures;

5 And<sup>h</sup> that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve:

6 After that, he was seen <sup>i</sup>of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater ought to be improved for the good purposes for which God bestows it upon men. It is absurd to preach or pray in a language which the assembly do not generally understand; and both absurd and criminal to preach in an uncertain general manner that can neither distinctly inform the mind nor closely impress the conscience. Those discourses are best which are calculated to penetrate into the hearts and consciences of hearers, the most ignorant not excepted.—The envy, malice, and self-conceit of members, especially of preachers, are highly injurious to any church. But it is very becoming and happy when all are humbly inclined to learn, careful to keep their own station, and zealous in their exact adherence to all the ordinances of God, without any mixture of human inventions.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1, 2. Moreover, with respect to the resurrection of the dead and the certainty of a future state, I will again set before you the great fundamental truth—which I preached unto you, and which ye were convinced of, and embraced as the foundation of all your hope towards God; and in the profession and faith of which the generality of you still persevere, notwithstanding all the pains of false teachers to corrupt you; and by means of which all of you who truly believe were brought into a state of salvation, having already the beginning and earnest, and a full security for the complete perfection of it:—3, 4. This great and fundamental truth, which I received from God by immediate inspiration, and first and chiefly delivered unto you in my preaching as a most sacred and valuable trust, to be inviolably kept by you, was, that Jesus Christ, the Son of God in our nature, according to the manifold types and predictions of the Old Testament, died in our stead, to make atonement for our sins and reconcile us to God, and was buried by Joseph of Arimathea and other friends; and by his own, his Father's, and the Spirit's almighty influence, rose from the dead on the third day. 5-7. And that, to manifest the absolute certainty of his resurrection, and instruct his apostles concerning the form of his New Testament church, he continued on earth forty days, and appeared, on several occasions, to the most unexceptionable witnesses, who could neither be deceived themselves, nor were under any temptation to deceive others.—Thus, on the very day of his resurrection, he appeared to Peter, and at night to ten of his disciples, and that day seven-night to eleven of them. Some time after he appeared to five hundred of his followers in Galilee; most of whom still live to attest it, though some of them have, by death, fallen asleep till the general resurrection. After that he was seen of James the son of Alphaeus, his kinsman according to the flesh, and then of all the apostles, if not also the seventy disciples, just before his ascension to heaven.—8. And after all these repeated and undoubted appearances to his friends, several years after his ascension, he appeared to me in an extraordinary manner, that, as an eye-witness, I might be able to attest his resurrection; though, alas, I was not among his followers during his life, but was converted and called to the apostleship out of the ordinary time, and by an uncommon extension of free grace! 9. For however remarkably Jesus Christ has enriched me with qualifications for, and success in, the apostolical work, I was utterly unworthy of that office, or even of the smallest mercy, because, during my ignorance of Christ, instigated by a furious zeal for the Jewish religion, I outrageously persecuted the church, which God intended to organize in Christ, and which he owns and blesses, and in and by which he will be forever glorified.—10. But by the free, tender, infinite, and transcendent favour of God, I, a blasphemer, persecutor, and injurious person, have found Christ, and am qualified with every proper endowment; and that grace and apostleship, freely bestowed upon me, was not unprofitable: for under a deep sense of his marvellous grace, I have unweariedly, and amidst difficulties and sufferings unnumbered, exerted myself and all my gifts and graces, for his honour and the good of souls, more than any other apostle did. I mention this to confute my reproachers; but do not attribute my diligence and success to any excellency or care of mine, but wholly to the loving and assisting grace of God:—11. But whether ye ascribe your conversion and edification to me, or to any other instrument, the doctrine of the death and resurrection of Christ is what we all preached, and ye always professed to believe and depend on, as the sole ground of your eternal salvation. 12. Now, if the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to immortal life and glory, as the Head of the church, has been so uniformly preached with undoubted evidence of its certainty, how absurd is it for any who bear the Christian name to pretend that there neither is, nor can be, a real and proper resurrection of men's dead bodies to eternal happiness or misery! 13. For if there be no resurrection of the dead, then, contrary to the most abundant and incontestable evidence, Christ himself cannot have risen from the dead, as the earnest, pledge, pattern, cause, and first-fruits of them that sleep in him. 14. And if Christ be not risen as the public Head of his people, the whole gospel of salvation, which we apostles and others preach, is a mere fable, unworthy of regard, and your faith in it and in him is a mere empty conceit. 15, 16. Nay, if Christ be not risen from the dead, we who have testified his resurrection at the hazard of all that was dear to us in the world, and with the greatest simplicity and integrity, must be the most impious and abandoned miscreants, who have forged lies for God, and have wilfully published a damnable falsehood in his name, as if he had raised up Christ from the dead;—when it is certain he neither did nor could raise him up, as a public person and Head of his church, if his members are not to rise after him, and in virtue of his resurrection. 17. And if it were true that Christ still continues in the state of the dead, your faith in him is quite useless, and it is absolutely foolish to expect any benefit from his crucifixion. For unless he has not only suffered death for your sins, but risen again for your justification, ye must remain for ever under the guilt and power of your sins, and thus shut up to the guilt of eternal sin. 18. And in this case, they who have died in the closest union to and fellowship with him, and in the most assured hopes of eternal life through him, or who have part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen of James; <sup>j</sup>then of all the apostles.

8 And<sup>k</sup> last of all he was seen of me also, as of <sup>5</sup>one born out of due time.<sup>6</sup>

9 For I am <sup>l</sup>the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, <sup>n</sup>because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But <sup>o</sup>by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but <sup>p</sup>I laboured more abundantly than they all: <sup>q</sup>yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

11 Therefore <sup>r</sup>whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

12 Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, <sup>s</sup>how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But <sup>t</sup>if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen.

even suffered death for his sake, must for ever perish without remedy, disappointed of all their hopes in and from him. 19. And if, after all our faith in Christ, and dependence on him, and all the self-denial, mortifications, and sufferings to which we have submitted for his sake, we have no prospect of happiness from him beyond this present life, we Christians, and especially ministers, must be the most silly, deluded, and wretched creatures on earth, who, for nothing real in time or eternity, part with all the conveniences, delights, and advantages of this world, and submit to calamities unnumbered. 20. But we have sufficiently proved that Christ, in consequence of his full sacrifice for our sins, is actually raised from the dead, and become not only the first, in order of time, who rose to an immortal life; and the chief, in respect of dignity, who, as Head of his church, rose by his own power; but also the earnest, pledge, and security of the resurrection of all his people. 21. And since, by the disobedience of the first Adam, death and ruin were brought upon all mankind; therefore God, in infinite wisdom and mercy, has appointed the happy resurrection of the faithful to eternal life, to be brought in by Jesus Christ, the second Adam or new-covenant Head. 22. For, as in the first Adam, as their common parent and covenant head, all men by sin are subjected to death, temporal as well as spiritual and eternal; so in Christ, as their new-covenant Head, who fulfilled the law for them, and communicates all vital influence to them, all the race can, by the merit of his death and power of his resurrection, repent of sin and believe in Jesus Christ, so that, in their bodies as well as their souls, they may for ever reign with him in glory—and as all who were in Adam die, so all who are in Christ shall be made alive.—23. But indeed he, and each of his members, must partake of this life in their proper rank, time, and order; he, as the first-fruits, who is already risen as their public Head, Representative, and Pattern, to insure their resurrection, and sanctify them to the service of God; and then they who repent of sin, and whom he has pardoned by his blood, conquered by his power, graciously subdued by his Spirit, united to his person, and furnished with his grace,—at his second coming to judge the world. 24. Then shall come the end of this world, and of all the changes, temptations, sins, and snares under which believers now groan, and of all the instituted means of grace, and of those ministerial assistances of angels and men, which they now need. And Christ, having finished the whole work of his administration of providence and grace in its present form, and having abolished every form of civil and ecclesiastical government, and all the usurped powers of men and devils, shall solemnly deliver up his commission, trust, and charge to God the Father, from whom he received it,—and present all his members together as one glorious church. 25. For, according to the purpose, love, and promise of the Father. Christ, as Man and Mediator, must sit at his right hand, and reign over all persons, causes, and things, till all his enemies, temporal and spiritual, be placed in absolute and actual subjection to him, as captives of war brought under his feet. 26. And the last enemy, which, for the sake of his people, he shall utterly destroy and abolish, is death, which now prevents the complete happiness of their persons, and must be destroyed by the raising of their dead bodies to immortal life. 27. For Christ must reign till all, except JEHOVAH himself, who delegated to him his mediatorial power and authority, be manifestly subdued by or subjected to him. 28. And when his mediatorial methods of government have had their full effect, in the conversion, sanctification, and complete glorification of all who believe, and the conquest of all his incorrigible enemies, he shall lay aside the present forms of administration as the appointed mediatorial governor of the world, and shall surrender up himself as such, and his whole church, to his Father, to be for ever honoured and blessed, each in their due order, with the full and immediate enjoyment of the Godhead, as their ALL and IN ALL. 29. Moreover, to return to the point in debate, if there be no resurrection of the dead, to what purpose are professed believers baptized in the name of Christ, in hopes of a happy resurrection through him? Or why are they induced to it by what they have seen and heard of martyrs dying triumphantly for Christ in the assured hopes of such a resurrection? Or why are the children of the deceased baptized on their parents' account, in order to fill up their room in the church? 30. And if the dead rise not, how weak and absurd is it for us Christians and ministers continually to expose ourselves to the greatest losses, hazards, and troubles for his sake, in hopes of an eternal life and reigning with him in glory? 31. I solemnly protest, that, as really as the blessed Comforter dwells in our hearts, and makes us to rejoice in God through Christ in hopes of eternal life, I am daily exposed to, and stand ready for, sufferings of every form and degree for Christ's sake. 32. Now to what purpose have I struggled with men, outrageous, malicious, furious, and unreasonable as beasts, or been exposed to, or am ready to encounter, devouring wild beasts for the sake of Christ and his cause, if there be no future blessedness, no resurrection to eternal life? I had much better act the epicurean, indulging myself in sensual pleasures, as I know not how soon death may deprive me of every opportunity.—33. But let no seducer thus decoy you from the faith of the first principles of all Christianity, nay, and of morality.—Frequent and familiar conversation with persons of an atheistical and luxurious turn will insensibly and deeply corrupt your minds and morals, and destroy every principle of religion and virtue. 34. Be therefore sober, and rouse up yourselves to serious and just consideration, and to a righteous and holy life; and beware of being seduced into delusive errors and sinful practices: for, by their denying the resurrection of the dead, I perceive that some of your teachers are ignorant of

<sup>t</sup> The resurrection is the great subject of this chapter. The resurrection of Christ is the foundation of the doctrine. If Christ be not risen a general resurrection cannot be proved; if Christ be risen, his rising forms at once the evidence and earnest of ours. Paul establishes with great clearness and force the historical fact that Christ rose. Evidence such as no court could question, no unprejudiced man could doubt, is produced. His death and burial were public acts. He was seen alive afterwards by single persons at different times, by the whole of the apostles, and by above 500 witnesses at one time, most of whom were still alive when the apostle wrote. Last of all Paul himself saw him. Proof superior to this could not be produced regarding any fact of history, ancient or modern.—P.

14 And <sup>u</sup>if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found <sup>v</sup>false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

16 For<sup>w</sup> if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised:

17 And <sup>x</sup>if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins.<sup>7</sup>

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

19 If<sup>z</sup> in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

20 But<sup>a</sup> now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept.

21 For<sup>b</sup> since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For<sup>c</sup> as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

23 But <sup>d</sup>every man in his own order: Christ

God and his perfections manifested in the gospel. And this hint ought to make them ashamed of themselves, and you ashamed of countenancing them. 35. Perhaps, indeed, some of your self-conceited doctors will ask me how men's dead bodies can be raised to life, after rotting into dust, and being scattered and intermingled with bodies unnumbered? Or in what form, power, or capacity they will be raised, answerable to the happiness of the glorified souls reunited to them? 36. How foolish and absurd is it to set up your weak notions in opposition to the power and wisdom of God!—Even in common things, do we not see that seeds cast into the earth spring not up till they first rot and die under the clods? 37, 38. And do we not see, that however many forms God causes the bare grains of wheat, &c., to assume in their growth and ripening, yet they at last produce a body answerable to the seed? 39-41. And is it not evident, that out of the same original dust God forms animals, whose flesh and qualities are extremely different; and that of the same matter he hath formed bodies, some grosser, others more refined; and that the properties and glories of the heavenly luminaries, though all sprung from one original, are extremely different? 42, 43. In like manner the wisdom and power of God operate in the resurrection of the dead, particularly of the saints, rendering their bodies fit companions for their souls in the glorified state. In this world their bodies are frail, mortal, and, by death, subjected to putrefaction; but they shall be raised free from all corruptibility, dissolution, or decay, and rendered immortal, never more to die. In this world they are mean, contemptible, liable to deformity and defilement, and feeble and weak, liable to sickness, pain, weariness, fainting, and death, incapable of defending themselves from surrounding evils;—and being laid in the grave, become loathsome carcasses, an easy prey to the weakest worm; but they shall be raised, beautiful, glorious, and shining as the sun or stars; and with such vigour, health, and strength as will enable them to keep pace with their glorified souls in every operation. 44. In this world they must be maintained by food, sleep, and air as the bodies of brutes, and in the grave they are quite destitute of sensation: but in their resurrection, the Holy Ghost dwelling in them shall so refine them, as to make them need no animal refreshments, and render them inexpressibly light and active. 45. Thus the diversified conditions of our bodies will answer to our two different covenant heads; the first Adam being made a living soul, which could communicate sensitive life to his own body, or that of his seed; whereas Christ, the second Adam, is a quickening Spirit, who conveys spiritual and immortal life to the bodies of his saints at the resurrection, by his Spirit dwelling in them. 46. Nay, these conditions of our bodies will answer to the very order in which Adam and Christ stand connected with us; that which is natural and less excellent, according to God's ordinary method, preceding that which is spiritual and inexpressibly the first-fruits;<sup>8</sup> afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then cometh the end, when he shall 'have delivered up the kingdom<sup>9</sup> to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power.

25 For<sup>9</sup> he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 The<sup>h</sup> last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

27 For he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith, All things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted which did put all things under him.

28 And<sup>j</sup> when all things shall be subdned unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.

29 Else what shall they do which are <sup>k</sup>baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?

30 And<sup>i</sup> why stand we in jeopardy every hour?

35 But some man will say, "How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?"

36 Thou<sup>u</sup> fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die:

<sup>7</sup> In the interpretation of this passage it is necessary to keep in view the subject which Paul is discussing—it is the nature of the resurrection body as compared with the present mortal body. Though both are material, they are not necessarily the same. He illustrates this by the fact that there are various kinds of flesh, and that in nature there are great diversities of appearance and constituent elements in different bodies. From this observed fact he concludes that the resurrection body may be essentially different from the present body. It will be observed that there is not in this passage the slightest reference to different degrees of glory among the saints in heaven.—P.

<sup>9</sup> Of the nature of 'a spiritual body' no man can speak certainly, except that it will be 'fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body' (Phi. 3.21), and that probably it means a body rendered as obedient to spiritual laws as now it is obedient to mechanical laws. 37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain:

38 But<sup>a</sup> God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 All<sup>y</sup> flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

41 There<sup>z</sup> is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.<sup>7</sup>

42 So<sup>a</sup> also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown<sup>8</sup> in corruption; it is raised in incorruption:

43 It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power:

44 It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a <sup>b</sup>spiritual body.<sup>9</sup>

45 And so it is written, 'The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit.

46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The<sup>d</sup> first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven.<sup>1</sup>

48 As<sup>e</sup> is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

50 Now <sup>q</sup>this I say, brethren, that <sup>h</sup>flesh and excellent and glorious. 47. For the first Adam was formed out of the dust, and was of an earthly constitution; whereas the second Adam is the eternal Son of God, who, descending from heaven, assumed our nature, into a union with his person, and who will at the last day descend from heaven to raise the dead bodies of his saints, and receive them to himself. 48. They who descend from the earthly Adam derive from him an earthly, animal, and mortal body, such as he had in his fallen state: and they who are spiritually begotten by Christ, born from above, and formed with heavenly dispositions for heavenly enjoyments, shall derive a spiritual, heavenly, and immortal body from him, such as he has in his exalted state. 49. And as we believers bear the debased image of our first father and covenant head in the carthy, animal, sickly, and mortal state of our bodies, and in their putrefaction and corruption in the grave; so, by virtue derived from Christ our new-covenant Head, our bodies, at the resurrection, shall be conformed to his immortality, strength, glory, and honour, that we may for ever bear his image in our whole person. 50. And indeed this great alteration of our bodies is absolutely necessary, as in their present gross, animal, sluggish, and corruptible nature, they could neither share the visions and pleasures, nor join in the services of the heavenly state, where God is ALL and IN ALL. 51-54. And, to inform you of a thing never before plainly revealed, the bodies of all believers shall not die or rest in graves, but some shall undergo a surprising and glorious change, equivalent to dying and rising again. For in that moment in which Christ shall awfully and efficaciously call up the dead bodies from their graves, the living ones shall be changed from corruptible and mortal to incorruptible and immortal, answerably to the everlasting glories given through faith.—And when our bodies shall be thus glorified and immortalized, death, that formidable tyrant, who had so long conquered and reigned over the believers' outward man, shall, with respect to every one of them, be finally conquered and totally abolished. 55. In the view of these things all real Christians may now by faith triumph over death and the grave, as things which can do them no real hurt, and which shall be obliged, by Jesus Christ, to restore them back with inexpressible advantage. 56. It is the unremoved guilt, power, and pollution of sin which renders death either hurtful or painful; and it is the holy law of God, which, by condemning to death, spiritual as well as temporal and eternal, in a mysterious but awful manner, founds and fortifies the reigning, enslaving, and destructive power of sin. 57. But thanks be to God, who, through the merits and power of Jesus Christ as our loving Head, gives us deliverance from the guilt, power, and pollution of sin, and a complete victory over death and the grave, and every other opposer.—58. In the views then of all that has been taught you concerning the death and resurrection of Christ, and our glorious resurrection to eternal life through him, let me beseech you, as beloved of God, and dear to my soul, to excite, animate, and encourage yourselves to a firm and constant steadfastness in the faith, hope, and holy profession of the gospel, and to be invariably increasing and abounding in every good work towards God or men,—fully persuaded that your almighty, gracious, and faithful God will, through Christ, assist you in your obedience and suffering, and freely reward you with endless life and glory.

Ver. 5. The apostles, after the fall of Judas, are distinctly called 'the eleven,' Mat. 28.16; Mar. 16.14; Lu. 24.9, 33; Ac. 1.26; 2.14. Guyse and others suppose that, 'the twelve' having been the original name of the apostles taken collectively, they still retained it when their number was reduced to eleven, as a centurion, ruler of a hundred, would still retain his title were his company reduced to a few, or altogether cut off; and this mode of speech is certainly common in history. But this supposition is not necessary: for Matthias, who was subsequently numbered with 'the eleven,' may have been actually present with them when our Lord appeared. This view is rendered highly probable, if not certain, by Lu. 24.9, 33. C.

Ver. 22. All men are in Adam as branches are in a tree; and as the root died, so must all the branches: and as many as are in Christ—being born of the Spirit,—because he lives they shall live also. This does not preclude or gainsay the resurrection of the wicked, which is elsewhere most plainly revealed, Da. 12.2; Jn. 5.28, 29. But the apostle here speaks merely of the resurrection of 'all' that are 'in Christ,' a distinction which our Lord was also accustomed to make. See Jn. 6.40, 44. C.

Ver. 28. The difficulty in this passage will be removed by considering that, so long as men are sinners, 'Christ is all and in all,' Col. 3.11. But when sinners shall have been converted and delivered to the Father 'as dear children,' then shall Christ cease to be 'all in all,' and God, that is, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, to whom the name of 'God' is alike common, will be 'all in all.' C.

Ver. 32. Fought with beasts, might figuratively signify contests with men as unreasonable and savage as beasts. But, in that case, why particularize Ephesus, seeing he had met with such cruel men in many other places? See Ac. xix.; 2 Co. 1.9, 10. It is much more likely that the apostle had been literally condemned to fight for his life with beasts in the amphitheatre—a blood<sup>2</sup> cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 Behold, I show you a mystery: <sup>1</sup>We shall not all sleep,<sup>3</sup> but we shall all be changed, 53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory.

Ver. 36. Except it die, has been alleged as an error in the physiology of plants, inasmuch as the seed that grows does not die. Now, in one sense, this is true—in another, incorrect: for as it is correct to say that a man dies, while yet his body only dies, and the spirit returns to God; so the visible body of the seed perishes, while the invisible germ survives. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How fully confirmed, and infinitely important and delightful, are the doctrines of Jesus' atoning death and glorious resurrection, and of our resurrection to eternal life through him! The Scriptures of the Old Testament and the witnesses of the New join to attest them.—God's grace can make a most wonderful change on the most perverse transgressors. And many sorrows do they escape who are the earliest partakers of it. All true ministers harmoniously determine to know and preach nothing but Christ, and him crucified and glorified. And wonderful are the methods of God's grace; that, as by a sinning man came death, so by a dying and rising God-man came the happy resurrection of the dead! It is highly absurd to deny these fundamental principles of our Christian religion; for if these be false, all apostles are downright deceivers; Jesus' death, and all our faith and hope, and all our services and sufferings, are in vain; yea, all morality and religion are an unavailing farce. But certain is his glory and high exaltation; and no less certain our resurrection and future glory together with him. Wonderful are the works of God in creation and providence, and much more in redemption, of which the former are but emblems. And marvellous is the change that shall be made on our bodies to qualify them for their heavenly glories. With what joy may we even now, through Christ, triumph over death and the grave! And the believing views of our future, our eternal glories, should animate our hearts to unremitting activity in Christ's service.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 1. As to the charitable collection desired of you for the Christians in Judea, who, through persecution and the public calamities of their nation, have been reduced to great poverty, I give you the same directions which I gave to the Christian brethren of Galatia, whose ready compliance therewith will, I hope, excite you to benevolence, who are much their superiors in temporal wealth, as well as in spiritual gifts. 2. Upon every first day of the week, when you, as other Christians, assemble for public worship in commemoration of our Saviour's resurrection, let every one of you, according to his income, or the success of his business, lay by him a certain proportion, and put it into the common stock for the poor, that when I come to visit you, and receive it, everything may be ready. 3. And whomsoever of your brethren ye think most proper, prudent, compassionate, and faithful, I will readily concur at their being appointed to carry it to our brethren in Judea: 4. And if it be thought of any advantage to that benevolent and pious design for me to accompany them, I shall readily grant them all the assistance and encouragement I am capable of. 5. Now, if the Lord will, I am determined to visit you whenever I have finished this tour through Macedonia, which I intend to begin as soon as I can have finished my present work at Ephesus. 6. And I hope that, after I have continued among you a considerable time, for our mutual edification and comfort, some of you will kindly and respectfully accompany me to some other place. 7. For such is my ardent affection towards you, and concern for your welfare, that I cannot think of paying you only a transient visit, but wish and expect, through the loving care of the Lord, to continue some time to assist you in your spiritual affairs. 8. But I find it needful for me to stay here at Ephesus till I shall have but just enough time to go up to Jerusalem at the feast of Pentecost, which I purpose to attend, that I may make known what I have preached, and with what success, to the multitudes of Jews and proselytes who assemble there on such occasions. 9. For here at Ephesus the Lord has given me a great opportunity of boldly and successfully preaching the gospel; and I am called to make a resolute stand against the subtle and furious enemies of my person and ministrations. 10. Meanwhile, if Timothy, my dearly beloved and faithful fellow-labourer, whom I have sent to you, arrive safe, see that ye receive him and treat him in a friendly, peaceable, and orderly manner, and let him not be discouraged or insulted by any of your factious preachers; for he comes to you upon the same important business, and with the same temper and sincere affection for you, as I wish to come. 11. Let none of you think or behave disrespectfully towards him, or slight what he delivers to you in the name and authority of Jesus Christ, because of his youth or bodily infirmities, but use him kindly: and when he returns to me, which I long for, I expect that you will furnish him for his journey, and some of you attend him for his protection. 12. I entreated our dear and eloquent brother Apollos, whom some of you admire, to come to you with the bearers of this letter, in hopes of his exerting himself to extinguish your party divisions; but being afraid that his presence might rather encourage the party which is zealous for him, or be interpreted as an attempt to ingratiate himself, he absolutely refused to come just now, but intends to see you whenever it may appear more seasonable. 13. And to conclude my directions at this time, I beseech you to keep a watchful eye upon all those that would, either by craft or terror, seduce you from the truth or holiness of the gospel: watch over your own deceitful and inconstant spirits; watch unto prayer and every other duty; stand fast in the knowledge, faith, love, profession, and practice of the important truths which have been preached unto you, living by faith on them, and appearing zealous in their defence. Notwithstanding all opposition or danger, prudently, boldly, and resolutely cleave to the truths and ways of the Lord, resisting sin, and every temptation thereto, and performing duty like men ripened in judgment, strong in grace, and firmly established in Christ. 14. And see that whatever ye do in the maintenance or practice of the truths of Christ, be done with meekness and love, for promoting the peace, holiness, and edification of others, as well as your own. 15. And I earnestly beg that you will show a particular respect to the family of Stephanas, which were the first converts to Christ in your country, and a pledge and earnest of the great multitudes which have since been converted, and which have all along behaved themselves as the sincere disciples and faithful servants of the Lord Jesus, and have, in an orderly manner, devoted themselves to assist and supply his ministers or poor members. 16. Instead of being carried away by new upstarts, take your direction or pattern in a respectful manner from such as have already signalized themselves in faithfulness to Christ and his church, or in the laborious spread of the gospel. 17, 18. I am extremely glad that ye sent me your letter by such prudent and worthy brethren, who gave me a more clear and comfortable account of your church affairs than your letter did, and who, to your honour, by their Christian behaviour, as well as by their candid and charitable representations, exceedingly quieted and refreshed my spirit. I hope that ye will show to such valuable, faithful, and affectionate brethren the highest regard. 19-21. The Christians here, in Lesser Asia, particularly Aquila and Priscilla, and their pious family, along with me, send you their Christian good wishes of all temporal or spiritual prosperity: and see that ye, in every pure, tender, and affectionate manner, express your regard one to another. 22. Meanwhile remember, that if ye, or any of your new preachers, persist in enmity to the person, offices, grace, doctrine, and commands of our dear Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, or obstinately apostatize from your profession of faith in and love to him, ye not only deserve to be esteemed as execrable and abominable by the church, and cast out from their fellowship, but shall be monuments of God's distinguished and just displeasure, both here and hereafter. 23. But to prevent this, may the free favour of Jesus Christ, our common Lord and Saviour, be extended to and continually abide with you, in all its abundant manifestations and blessed fruits, for your present establishment and edification in faith, comfort, and holiness, and for your eternal salvation! 24. And notwithstanding my severity in reproofing you, which indeed ought rather to be considered as a kindness, my best wishes, and most ardent affection, attend you all in Christ, and for his sake, and on account of your relation to him and the privileges ye have received from him.

REFLECTIONS.—Charitable relief of our poor brethren is a duty of great importance: and ministers ought 6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may bring me on my journey whithersoever I go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way; but I trust to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit.

8 But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost.

9 For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries.

10 Now if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear:<sup>3</sup> for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.

11 Let no man therefore despise<sup>4</sup> him: but conduct<sup>5</sup> him forth in peace, that he may come unto me: for I look for him with the brethren.

12 As touching our brother Apollos, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his will was not at all to come at this time; but he will come when he shall have convenient time.

13 Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.

14 Let all your things be done with charity.

15 I beseech you, brethren, (ye know the house of Stephanas, that it is the first-fruits of

The first epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi by Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, and Timotheus.

to encourage and promote it, and see that the liberality of churches under their care be duly applied. And in proportion as God succeeds our temporal affairs, we should join in it, and even beforehand provide for it; yea, all ought cordially, and from love to Christ, to vie with one another in it according to their ability. And as a part of worship, collections for the poor should attend our public devotions.—Ministers ought to go or stay wherever Christ in his providence calls them; and to rejoice in great opportunities of preaching the gospel, whatever opposition from adversaries attend them. Devoid of jealousy or envy, highly should they honour one another, and readily receive such as appear faithful and heartily devoted to the service of Christ. Inexpressible need have real Christians to be always watchful and steadfast in the faith, profession, and practice of the gospel. And it is delightful when in all their conduct they appear closely united in cordial affection one to another, and when the gracious influences of Christ qualify them for every necessary duty. But, alas, dreadful is the end which awaits those who, under the gospel dispensation, continue enemies to our gracious Redeemer! And most terrible to such is his blessed coming.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

It is impossible to read the foregoing epistle without remarking how early self-will and heathenish customs began to deform the Christian ritual, and error to infect the apostolic creed.

The invasion of the ritual may be seen most remarkably in the case of the Lord's supper, ch. 11. 17; in which case a heathenish custom had expelled the holy ordinance of the Lord, and obliterated the instructions of Paul as to its origin, order, and intention. The Corinthians, like some other Greek cities, had been accustomed, during their heathen state, to celebrate frequent public festivals; to which every family brought their own provisions, and in which the will or taste of individuals was the only check upon indulgence. At these feasts, it would appear, the poorer citizens were originally provided for by the rich. But, as luxury soon begets selfishness, and selfishness soon extinguishes charity, it also appears that while the custom of feasting was continued, the provision for the poor began to be neglected. Accordingly, it is recorded of Socrates, that when, at a public feast at Athens, he saw the rich citizens feasting, and the poor neglected, he distributed among them all the provisions he had brought for himself and his friends, and reproved his fellow-citizens for their inhospitality. The custom of the Corinthians seems to have been exactly similar; and to the same level they appear to have reduced the Lord's supper:—"Every one took before others (not the Lord's, but) his own supper: and one was hungry, another was drunken." To this downward tendency there is no competent restraint beyond a strict adherence to apostolic example and simplicity. The moment human will and national or local customs are permitted, in the smallest degree, to encroach upon and model Christian ordinances, that moment a principle is admitted that, while it pretends merely to accommodate itself to prejudice, and render Christianity more acceptable, must, in the end, overwhelm it in superstitious rites or heathen principles and practices.

The infection of the apostolic creed may be seen in the fifteenth chapter: whence it appears that the plainest and most palpable of all Christian doctrines, the resurrection of Jesus Christ and the final resurrection of his saints, was cast aside by the authority of a vain philosophy. And yet few things can appear more unlikely than that any doubt should arise concerning this doctrine. Nothing could be more conclusively attested as a fact—nothing could appear more necessary as an evidence of life and immortality—nothing more analogous to the annual resurrections (as they may justly be called) which an observant philosophy must have witnessed through so many departments of nature. Yet some among the Corinthians utterly denied the resurrection of the dead—a heresy the existence of which would be scarcely credible were it not attested upon apostolic authority. Its origin, however, is easily accounted for.—Some of the systems of heathen philosophy had pronounced material substance to be essentially evil, and incapable, by any process, of being rendered good; and relying upon this dogma of philosophy, they rejected the authority of the Word of God, which foretold the resurrection of Christ, and the testimony of apostles, who had witnessed it. This fact stands forth as a beacon light to all who study the Scriptures. How near was the Corinthian church to making total shipwreck of the faith! And why? The admission of one single unsupported dogma in opposition to a fact implies such a surrender of sound judgment as breaks down the walls of truth, and opens the way for the introduction of any and every error. Christianity lays its foundations in facts, not in dogmas. These facts can never be historically gainsayed or rationally disproved—upon these facts, as precious stones, it builds its temple of doctrine; and rejects 'the wood, hay, and stubble' of a fanciful and arbitrary philosophy. Not that philosophy is to be underrated, despised, or rejected. On the contrary, philosophy rightly defined is, in all its departments, the handmaid of Christianity. But philosophy, the love of wisdom, is not the love of one department of knowledge, but of all departments; it does not seek its lights from one source of evidence and truth, but from all sources; above all, it does not set up human dogmas in opposition to divinely-attested facts; and, in depths which it cannot fathom, and in heights to which it cannot soar, it thankfully acknowledges the aid of that 'wisdom which cometh down from above,' which has God for its author and salvation for its end. C.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

Informed by Titus, ch. ii. vii., of the good effects of his former epistle upon the generality of the Corinthians, Paul, about a year after, wrote them this second letter, probably from Philippi, after his return from Troas in Lesser Asia, and while Timothy was with him, ch. 9. 2; 1. 1; 2. 12, 13; with Ac. 19. 22; 20. 1-4.—After a preface, he apologizes for delaying his visit, and recommends the restoration of the penitent incestuous person to church-fellowship, ch. i. ii.:—boldly exhibits his apostolic character, labours, success, sufferings, and encouragements, for the confutation of their false teachers, ch. iii.—vi.: and shows himself every way superior to those proud calumniators, ch. x.—xiii. 4: inculcates practical holiness, evangelical repentance, cheerful collection for the poor, self-examination, and other necessary duties, ch. vii.—ix. xiii.

[References appear in this epistle to the following parts of the Old Testament:—Ex. 16. 18; 28. 24; 29. 45; 34. 1, 28, 29, 35; Le. 26. 12; Is. 25. 7; 49. 8; Je. 31. 1-9. 33; Eze. 11. 19; 16. 18; 28. 24; 36. 26; 37. 26, 27. C.]

CHAPTER I.

3 The apostle encourageth them against troubles, by the comforts and deliverances which God had given him, as in all his afflictions, 8 so particularly in his late danger in Asia: 12 and calling both his own conscience and theirs to witness of his sincere manner of preaching the immutable truth of the gospel, 15 he excuseth his not coming to them, as proceeding not of lightness, but of his lenity towards them.

PAUL,<sup>a</sup> an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and <sup>b</sup>Timothy our brother, unto <sup>c</sup>the church of God which is at Corinth, with <sup>d</sup>all the saints which are in all Achaia:

2 Grace<sup>e</sup> be to you, and peace,<sup>1</sup> from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Blessed<sup>g</sup> be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, <sup>h</sup>the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort;

4 Who<sup>i</sup> comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.

5 For <sup>j</sup>as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.

6 And<sup>k</sup> whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation, which is effectual<sup>2</sup> in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.

7 And our hope of you is steadfast, 'knowing that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant <sup>3</sup>of our trouble which came to us in Asia,<sup>3</sup> that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life:

9 But we had the sentence<sup>4</sup> of death in ourselves, that <sup>5</sup>we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead:

10 Who<sup>6</sup> delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us;

11 Ye<sup>7</sup> also helping together by prayer for us, that for the gift<sup>5</sup> bestowed upon us by the means of many persons, thanks may be given by many on our behalf.

12 For<sup>8</sup> our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to you-ward:

13 For we write none other things unto you, than what ye read or acknowledge; and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end;

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1, 2. I, Paul, whom Jesus Christ has immediately called to the high office of apostleship, according to the divinely gracious appointment of his Father; and Timothy, my beloved and faithful fellow-Christian and minister of the gospel—to all those at Corinth and the places adjacent that have accepted Christ and are regenerated and sanctified, and set apart to the holy services of Christ—wish the most abundant manifestations and fruits of God's full favour and mercy through Jesus Christ. 3. Magnified, adored, admired, loved, and praised for ever be that infinitely great and gracious JEHOVAH, who, from eternity, in an inconceivable manner, begat our Lord Jesus Christ; who constituted him our Mediator, and prepared for him his marvellous manhood; and who, in and through him, appears full of the most tender compassion, and is the author of all pardoning and relieving mercies, and bestower of all comfort, temporal, spiritual, or eternal: 4. Who, by his Word, Spirit, and providence, supports, assists, and comforts us ministers and Christians in all our painful and pressing troubles, outward or inward, particularly in such as we endure for adhering to his truths; and that not merely for our own benefit, but that we may be thereby experimentally taught, disposed, and qualified to sympathize with and administer suitable and seasonable encouragement and comfort to others in their afflictions, for animating their faith and hope to expect the like refreshment and deliverances. 5. For as we have been uncommonly troubled and persecuted for the sake of Christ, so, through union to and intimate fellowship with him, we have been proportionally filled with spiritual comforts to balance it. 6. And all these things are divinely intended and ordered for your unspeakable advantage. If we be pressed with troubles, it is that ye, beholding us enabled to bear them with Christian courage, patience, and joy, may be emboldened to persevere in your holy profession and practice unto complete salvation, and to undergo similar troubles on Christ's account. 7. And from what I have heard of my former epistle, I rest assured that, as God has made you willing to sympathize with and share in our sufferings for Christ, he will, in his rich grace and faithfulness, make you partners with us in our abundant comforts as your condition shall require it.—8. Passing over many other afflictions which we have met with, ye perhaps have heard that we were so terribly persecuted and cruelly abused for preaching the gospel in Lesser Asia, that we had scarcely any hopes of escaping with our life. 9. But God reduced us to this apparently desperate extremity that we might learn to live by faith on him, and have no dependence on our own wisdom or strength, or the favour or influence of friends, but only upon his life-giving, preserving, and restoring power, goodness, wisdom, and faithfulness, for our protection and deliverance. 10. And we firmly trust that this God who, by marvellous interpositions, did, and still does, preserve us in life amidst the greatest dangers, will continue to deliver us from doing evil ourselves, or being hurt by the wickedness of others, and enable us to reach his heavenly kingdom: 11. And that, in answer to your prayers, as well as our own, such marvellous preservations and deliverances, procured by many prayers, and intended for the spiritual edification of multitudes, may issue in abundant thanksgivings of men to God. 12. For what-

14 As also ye have acknowledged us in part, that<sup>s</sup> we are your rejoicing, even as ye also are ours in the day of the Lord Jesus.

15 And<sup>t</sup> in this confidence I was minded to come unto you before, that ye might have a second benefit;<sup>6</sup>

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on<sup>u</sup> my way toward Judea.

17 When<sup>v</sup> I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness?<sup>7</sup> or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according to the flesh, that with me there should be yea yea, and nay nay?

18 But <sup>a</sup>as God is true, our word<sup>8</sup> toward you was not yea and nay.<sup>9</sup> ever reproaches and troubles I and my faithful fellow-preachers of Christ have met with, we have in our own breasts the heart-ravishing and triumphant testimony of our consciences, in every reflection upon our principles, tempers, motives, views, and conduct, that with an ingenuous undisguised sincerity and singleness of heart, and with the most upright aims to promote the glory of God—not with any cunning artifices of carnal policy, or selfish or secular designs or motives, but by a governing principle of grace which God hath wrought in our hearts, and by the gracious directions and assistance which he, in tenderness, continually affords us—we have conducted ourselves in the whole of our ministerial and personal behaviour, and in a particular manner towards you. 13, 14. What I have now hinted is nothing more than ye have read in my former letter, and which I understand ye generally acknowledge to be true; and I hope that, by the grace of God, ye shall never have occasion to think otherwise; even as the better part of you have already, with great pleasure, honourably acknowledged me and my fellow-preachers to have been the instruments of your conversion and spiritual comfort: and we have rejoiced on account of the gifts and graces bestowed upon you, and expect to see you presented, as the seals of our ministry, before our Lord Jesus Christ in the last judgment.—15. And being satisfied of our having mutual comfort in one another, I truly intended to have made you a second visit before now, that, by my preaching and conversation, ye might be further refreshed and built up in Christ, and others converted to him. 16. I intended not indeed to visit you on my way to Macedonia, as then I could have merely seen you, but to continue with you some considerable time after my return from thence, and that some of you should help me forward in my way to Judea with the collection for the saints there. 17. In forming this design, which has not yet been accomplished, I did not, as your new preachers pretend, act inconsiderately or lightly, regardless of what I said or did; nor was it a compliment to flatter and deceive you; nor did I alter my resolution without sufficient ground, or as influenced by any carnal and secular considerations; nor did I, like a wicked man regardless of his word, affirm and deny the same things by turns. 18, 19. No; I dare appeal to the infinitely true and faithful JEHOVAH, that in my whole conduct I have acted consistently with truth and sincerity, and that the subject of my own and my brethren's ministrations are the stable and unchangeable truths of God; for with uniform evidence of certainty we preached Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, in his person, offices, and benefits, which are for ever invariably the same. 20. For in him, the faithful and true Witness, all the great and precious promises of the new kingdom given forth by the unchangeable God, and clearly exhibited under the New Testament dispensation, are infallibly and invariably the same—all established and put in force by his death, that they may be gloriously and completely fulfilled in their proper time and order to his people, to the praise and glory of God's truth, faithfulness, and grace, by our ministrations. 21, 22. And it is this great and unchangeable God who establishes and strengthens us, ministers and people, to abide in the truth through virtue of our union to Christ, and by his Spirit furnishes us with all necessary gifts and grace; who has also graciously distinguished, marked, and blest his followers; confirmed his promise to us, assured us of our interest in it, and imprinted his holy image upon us; and has given us his Spirit to dwell and shed abroad his love and influence in our hearts, as a pledge and earnest of our eternal inheritance.—23. And I dare appeal to him in the most solemn manner that I delayed my visit to you merely from tender affection to you, that I might come, not to exercise my power in censuring and reproving you, but in kind and meek encouragement and comfort. 24. Not that I or any other minister of Christ have any right to domineer over your faith by requiring you to believe or practise anything in religion which is not required by Jesus Christ, the only Head of the church; but we are authorized by God, and sincerely desire and endeavour, to promote your spiritual comfort, by recovering you from what would hinder it, and by establishing your faith in Christ, and the promises which are confirmed in him; for it is by such a divine faith, founded on God's own authority and faithfulness, that ye have stood, and may continue to stand, in your state of grace to eternal salvation.

19 For the <sup>u</sup>Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and<sup>z</sup> Silvanus and Timotheus, <sup>a</sup>was not yea and nay,<sup>1</sup> but in him was yea.

Ver. 13. It is not improbable that some factious members, seeing that he had not come according to his purpose, 1 Co. 4. 19, had accused him of ambiguity—of writing one thing and meaning another; or of holding some private intercourse with one party which was withheld from the others. C.

Ver. 20. 'For how many soever be the promises of God, in him (Christ) is the yea, and in him the amen.'—Yea, the answer to the question, Is it so? Amen, the declaration that the answer is truth. C.

REFLECTIONS.—An unbounded source of mercies and blessings is a reconciled God in Christ. And delightful is it to have the God and Father of Christ ours also. Faithful ministers and Christians may expect to meet with great troubles on earth. But it is enough if God proportion their comfort to their tribulations, and make all to issue in the edification of his church. Yea, thus God often delightfully prepares his ministers, by their own trials and comforts, to comfort others. It is happy to see all our troubles and comforts wisely ordered by God, to draw us off from resting in creatures to a sole dependence on himself; and to be enabled so to live amidst reproaches and persecutions as our consciences cannot but attest our uprightness and holiness.—Joint fervent prayers bring down remarkable blessings upon ministers and others. And if God answer our prayers in remarkable benefits to many, abundant thanks should be rendered to him for his kindness. Happy is it when ministers earnestly pray, faithfully preach, and prudently vindicate their own character, in order to promote the remarkable edification of the church. And wonderful is the blessed provision which God hath made in promises and spiritual influences for the instruction, comfort, establishment, and eternal salvation of all people.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. From a tender and affectionate regard to you I chose rather to delay my promised visit, that your having rectified your disorders 20 For<sup>b</sup> all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us.

21 Now he<sup>c</sup> which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God;

22 Who<sup>d</sup> hath also sealed us, and given the earnest<sup>2</sup> of the Spirit in our hearts.

23 Moreover<sup>e</sup> I call God for a record upon my soul, <sup>u</sup>that, to spare you, I came not as yet unto Corinth.<sup>3</sup> 24 Not<sup>h</sup> for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy: for by faith ye stand.

CHAPTER II.

1 Having showed the reason why he came not to them, 6 he requireth them to forgive and to comfort that excommunicated person, 10 even as himself also, upon his true repentance, had forgiven him, 12 declaring withal why he departed from Troas to Macedonia, 14 and the happy success which God gave to his preaching in all places.

BUT I determined this with myself, <sup>a</sup>that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

2 For<sup>b</sup> if I make you sorry, who is he then before I came might render it more welcome to you and agreeable to myself. 2. For if by sharp reproofs and censures I had grieved any of you, nothing but the deep repentance and remarkable reformation of those very persons could have turned my sorrows into joy. 3. And for this reason I did, and do now again, write to you, that all your disorders may be rectified before I come, that I may not have my mind burdened with grief by you, whose steadfastness in the faith, holiness, and order of the gospel, should be a comfort to me; and I hope that everything relative to the glory of Christ and the good of his church will be your joy as well as mine. 4. For it was in great distress of spirit, on account of their deplorable and dangerous condition, that I directed you to excommunicate the incestuous person, or other manifest apostates from Christ. And I mention it now, not to awaken and renew your grief, but to manifest my deep concern for you and other Christians, and for the repentance and salvation of the most notorious delinquents. 5. But if the incestuous person, or others notoriously scandalous, have, by their drawing upon themselves that awful censure, given uneasiness to me, or to such of you as are conscientiously concerned for the glory of God or good of their soul (for I did not intend in my former epistle to charge you all as connivers at his criminal conduct); 6, 7. Yet now, when the censure passed upon him by your church-rulers, according to my direction, has been blessed by God to render him deeply penitent, ye ought to regard him as pardoned by God, and to encourage, comfort, and restore him to your church-fellowship, and behave towards him in the most compassionate manner, lest, through the overwhelming distress of his mind, he sink into utter despair. 8. I did not more earnestly charge you to censure him when he was persisting in his wickedness than I now beseech you to restore him to your religious fellowship, and behave towards him as a brother, that he may plainly see that your censure of him proceeded from your earnest care to promote his spiritual advantage. 9. And by your restoring as well as excommunicating him you will give full proof of your submission to my apostolic authority, which indeed was a part of my end in writing to you. 10. And to encourage you to this restoration of him to church-fellowship, I, who concurred in his excommunication, hereby declare myself satisfied with his repentance; and to testify my concern for his and your order, peace, and comfort, I do, in the name and as in the presence of Jesus Christ, declare him forgiven by God, and fit to be restored to the communion of the church. 11. And I am the more concerned for his being kindly and speedily restored, lest Satan, who envies the success of my ministry, the recovery of offenders, and the edification and increase of the church, should take occasion to prejudice any against us, as if we were of a rigid and unforgiving temper, or to discourage other offenders, and hurry them into despair or apostasy; for we have had much experience of his malicious designs and subtle stratagems to hinder the success of the gospel, and the peace and prosperity of the church. 12. that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For<sup>d</sup> out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love<sup>1</sup> which I have more abundantly unto you.

5 But<sup>e</sup> if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all.<sup>2</sup>

6 Sufficient to such a man is this punishment,<sup>3</sup> which was inflicted of many.<sup>4</sup>

7 So<sup>g</sup> that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, <sup>h</sup>that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.

10 To<sup>i</sup> whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it in the person<sup>5</sup> of Christ;

great success which the Lord gave me at Troas, helped also to retard my visit to you. 13. Yet amidst that comfortable success which I had there, such was my anxiety for the return of my dear brother Titus from you, to inform me of your spiritual concerns, and what effect my former epistle had upon you, that it made me set off and travel into Macedonia to meet him, where, to my great satisfaction, I found him, and received from him a comfortable account of your affairs. 14. Now blessed be the Father of mercies and God of all comfort, that, notwithstanding all the opposition, trouble, and vexation which have befallen me and my fellow-labourers in the gospel, he enables us always to rejoice in what Christ is to us, and hath done and will do for us; and that by our ministrations he spreads abroad his precious, heart-captivating, and delightful declarations and offers of redeeming grace, and makes our labours acceptable to himself through Christ. 15. For in the faithful discharge of our commission we are well-pleasing to God in Christ's name, and through the reference which our doctrines and services bear to him, whether our hearers be willingly wrought upon by it to the salvation of their souls, or whether they obstinately reject it to their everlasting undoing—he favourably accepting our labours in his Son, not according to our success, but according to the right principles, motives, and ends, diligence and integrity, in fulfilling them. 16. As to some indeed our preaching of this pure, precious, and heart-ravishing gospel of Christ is altogether disagreeable to their carnal and corrupt heart, and through their obstinate rejection and perverse abuse of it eventually increases their spiritual death, condemnation, and everlasting destruction; but to others it conveys, with inexpressible delight, spiritual quickening, pardon, and comfort, and issues in their complete enjoyment of eternal life.—What man then, without the special assistance of Christ and his Spirit, is able to discharge this important work in a duly humble, holy, disinterested, zealous, faithful, earnest, and affectionate manner? 17. For we are not like your judaizing or upstart preachers, who adulterate and debase the pure and glorious gospel by mingling with it legal observances and human inventions to serve their own pride and avarice, but with the utmost integrity and plainness we preach it true and genuine, without any additions, alterations, or secular views, as by the authority and direction, and in the presence and view, of God himself, and looking for all assistance and acceptance through Christ, who is the great subject of our ministrations.

Ver. 2. He who, being brought to godly sorrow by my reproof, causes me to rejoice by this evidence of his repentance unto life.—Note, What could give greater earthly joy to a parent than the recovery of a dear child from a disease that threatened death? Such was the joy of the apostle at the rescue of a sinner from the snare of Satan. C.

Ver. 10. For your sakes. That by setting you an example of a forgiving spirit I might confirm you in the spirit of tenderness and forgiveness.—In the person of Christ. Acting in his name and under his authority. C.

Ver. 11. Lest Satan should get an advantage of us. By leading the guilty into despair or apostasy, or the church into undue severity of discipline—a fault which disfigured some portions of the primitive, as much as relaxation or neglect many portions of the modern churches. See the Canons called Apostolical, Canons of the Council of Nice, History of the Donatists, Novatians, &c. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What tender love and deep concern ministers ought to have for the edification of their people! And great is the sympathy and charity they ought to exercise towards them. With grief and pain should they observe their faults, or proceed in necessary censuring of them, uniting therewith an earnest care to promote their repentance and restoration to church-fellowship. And church-censures ought to be taken off whenever the proper ends for which they are inflicted are gained. To deny our forgiveness to such as we have ground to hope God has forgiven is a disobedience to Christ, and gives Satan an opportunity of rendering the persons censured desperate or profane, and of representing Christ's followers as odiously rigid. For many are the wiles of Satan to dishonour Christ's cause and prevent the salvation of souls. But God, to the joy of his servants, makes the gospel of his grace gloriously triumphant at last, to the salvation of all who believe in Jesus Christ. How delightful then and blessed the work of a minister, and how important and difficult is the work of a gospel minister! Great grace from God is necessary to enable men to preach his gospel purely, heartily, candidly, and conscientiously, always dependent on Christ. And, alas! awful is the guilt, the danger of multitudes, who adulterate it with human inventions, or who preach it 11 Lest<sup>j</sup> Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, when I came to <sup>k</sup>Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and <sup>l</sup>a door was opened unto me of the Lord, 13 I<sup>o</sup> had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother: but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia.

14 Now<sup>p</sup> thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and <sup>q</sup>maketh manifest the savour<sup>6</sup> of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God <sup>r</sup>a sweet savour<sup>7</sup> of Christ, in them that are saved,<sup>8</sup> and in them that perish:

16 To<sup>s</sup> the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life. And <sup>t</sup>who is sufficient for these things?

17 For we are not as many, which <sup>u</sup>corrupt<sup>9</sup> the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the <sup>v</sup>sight of God, speak we in<sup>1</sup> Christ.

CHAPTER III.

1 Lest their false teachers should charge him with vainglory, he sheweth the faith and graces of the Corinthians to be a sufficient commendation of his ministry. 6 Whereupon, entering a comparison between the ministers of the law and of the gospel, 12 he proveth that his ministry is so far the more excellent, as the gospel of life and liberty is more glorious than the law of condemnation.

DO we<sup>a</sup> begin again to commend ourselves? Or need we, as some others, <sup>b</sup>epistles of in an unfaithful manner, and from carnal motives and ends, or who make the work of the ministry but a secondary business.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. Do ye imagine that by thus avowing my own and my brethren's integrity I wish, like your vainglorious preachers, to set forth our own praises? No; it is merely for your sake and the gospel's that I have touched on that point. Or do we, like your false apostles, need letters of recommendation from one church to ingratiate us with another? 2. No; ye yourselves are the dear seals of our ministry. The grace of God, planted in your hearts by means of it, and manifested in your holy conversation, is, to our inexpressible comfort, a demonstrative evidence to all of our divine call to and assistance in our work. 3. In respect of your gifts, graces, and holy conversation, ye are our recommendatory epistle from Christ, formed, through our ministrations, by the almighty Spirit of that God who has all life in himself, and is the fountain and bestower of it on others—an epistle written not with ink, as is the best we could have from men; nor even on tables of stone, as Moses received the law from God; but in the tender, pliant, living, and sensible tables of your renewed hearts, truly susceptible and retentive of every spiritual and holy impression. 4. And as our ministrations have had these effects upon you, we trust in the promise, power, and grace of God, that they will continue to have the like effects upon others—to their salvation, our vindication, and his own honour. 5. Not that we pretend to have any power of ourselves to convert or edify any man, or even to think one truly good and spiritual thought; but all our fitness and success are wholly and only of God, by the operation of his Spirit. 6. On him alone we depend for it, and to him we ascribe the glory of it, who has graciously furnished us with every needful qualification, and gives us all seasonable assistances, to render us faithful and successful ministers of the gospel, which holds forth the promise of grace in its utmost evidence, freeness, and fulness, as now confirmed by the death of Christ—not ministers of the law, which God wrote on tables of stone, and which, in its long-continued dispensation, was comparatively weak and dead, condemning men to death and destruc-

This is the punctuation of the Syriac, is adopted by Griesbach and others, and seems necessary to give distinct meaning to the passage. C.—Paul here reverts to the case of the incestuous person mentioned in the first epistle, and recommends that, as he had repented, he should be readmitted into the church. The construction of this verse is difficult, and the meaning of the Greek is not brought out in our version. Alford gives it as follows:—'Now if any one hath occasioned sorrow (a delicate way of pointing out the one who had occasioned it), he hath grieved, not me, but, more or less, that I be not too heavy on him, all of you.' Paul indicates that he was not the party aggrieved, but the church in which the scandal had taken place.—P.

q Paul draws a comparison between the law and the gospel.

The former was a ministration of death, because it convicted of sin, and declared death to be sin's necessary punishment.

The latter is a ministration of the Spirit, and imparts life from Him who is the source and author of life.

If, therefore, the glory of the law was great, much greater must be the glory of the gospel.—P.

* It is evident from several allusions in this epistle that Paul had enemies at Corinth who had misrepresented and defamed him. Against their false charges he here defends himself.

They had affirmed that he had no commendatory letters from the apostles, that he ought not therefore to be received as a commissioned minister of Christ.

He replies that he needs no commendations from men. The fruits of his labours were sufficient evidences of his apostleship.—P.

1 He declareth how he hath used all sincerity and faithful diligence in preaching the gospel, 7 and how the troubles and persecutions which he daily endured for the same did redound to the praise of God's power, 12 to the benefit of the church, 16 and to the apostle's own eternal glory.

11 For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

12 Seeing then that we have such hope, <sup>2</sup>we use great plainness<sup>7</sup> of speech:

13 And not as Moses, <sup>3</sup>which put a vail over his face, that the children of Israel could not steadfastly look <sup>4</sup>to the end of that which is abolished:

14 But <sup>5</sup>their minds were blinded;<sup>8</sup> for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which vail is done away in Christ.

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the vail is upon their heart.

16 Nevertheless, <sup>6</sup>when it<sup>9</sup> shall turn to the Lord, the vail shall be taken away.

17 Now <sup>7</sup>the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But <sup>8</sup>we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, <sup>9</sup>are changed into the same image <sup>10</sup>from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER IV.

1 He declareth how he hath used all sincerity and faithful diligence in preaching the gospel, 7 and how the troubles and persecutions which he daily endured for the same did redound to the praise of God's power, 12 to the benefit of the church, 16 and to the apostle's own eternal glory.

THEREFORE,<sup>a</sup> seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not;

2 But<sup>b</sup> have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty,<sup>1</sup> not walking in craftiness, nor hand-

tion;—but ministers of the gospel, which, by the marvellous agency of the Holy Ghost, is powerful for the quickening, converting, comfort, and eternal life of men, Gentiles as well as Jews. 7, 8. Now, if the law, the ministration of which tended to condemnation, death, and destruction, and which was written on tables of stone, was delivered at Sinai with so much glorious pomp and awful majesty, and attended with a transient impression of glory on the face of Moses, who conveyed it to the people, how much greater glory, and that of a spiritual nature, must there be in the delightful dispensation of the gospel, by which the Holy Ghost conveys his enlightening, quickening, sanctifying, and saving influences into such multitudes of souls; and how much more excellent that abiding glory which it imprints upon the duly qualified, authorized, and faithful ministers of it? 9. For if the ministration of the law and legal ceremonies, which left men under a sentence of condemnation and death, was attended with such awful glory and majesty, the ministration of the gospel, in which the righteousness of God for the justification of believers is revealed and offered, and by means of which the faith whereby we believe unto righteousness is exercised by us, must be much more abundantly transcendent in its endearing excellency and honour. 10. Nay, the legal dispensation, which was introduced with so much glorious pomp at Sinai, has no glory at all when compared with the glory of the gospel dispensation of light and grace. 11. For if that legal dispensation, which is now abolished and set aside as weak and imperfect, was so glorious, much more must the New Testament dispensation, which is so excellent in itself, and abides till the end of time unalterable in its privileges and ordinances, be truly, emphatically, and beyond all comparison glorious! 12. Being therefore, upon such considerations, fully persuaded of the superior worth and excellency of the gospel above the legal dispensation, and humbly trusting to the Lord to make it powerful for the salvation of souls, we are emboldened to use great freedom, openness, and plainness in our preaching this word of his grace, without any reserve, fear, or disguise on the one hand, or any embellishments of human art on the other. 13. We do not wish in any manner to conceal its intrinsic native beauties, as Moses covered his shining countenance with a vail to hide it from the Israelites—intimating that, partly through the obscurity of his dispensation, and partly through the carnal blindness of their own minds, they could not distinctly by faith behold the true scope and design thereof in Jesus and his work thereby typified. 14. And indeed both the ancient and modern Jews have been generally so blinded and hardened in their hearts that they did not conceive the proper meaning of the Old Testament types and predictions. Yea, it is only by the manifestation of these things in the gospel and in the heart that those things can be understood. 15. And even to this day most of the Jews, when they read the law of Moses and the prophets, do not discern their true reference to Christ any more than their fathers discerned the glory of Moses' face through the vail that covered it. 16. Nevertheless, as Moses took the vail off his face when he went in before the Lord, so, when the generality of that nation shall be converted to the Lord Jesus Christ, the vail of ignorance shall be removed from their hearts, and their understandings shall be enlightened to discern how all the types, figures, and predictions of Scripture have their complete and glorious accomplishment in Christ and his work of redemption. 17. Now the Lord Jesus, who will thus remove their vail of ignorance, is a divine, a *quicken*ing spirit, and the words which he speaks are spirit and life. He is the spirit and substance of all those ancient laws and ceremonies, and he conveys the Holy Ghost to all the people, to help their dead souls live by means of the gospel; and wherever the Spirit of Christ is truly accepted savingly in the heart, there is enjoyed a blessed freedom from natural ignorance of spiritual things—from the bondage of the legal dispensation—from the law as a covenant, and from the guilt and power of sin; and a holy and delightful freedom of access to God and communion with him. 18. And all of us who are endowed with this Spirit, and brought into the open light and full liberty of the gospel dispensation, do now, by faith, in a manner far more clear than under the law, and yet far short of the heavenly vision, behold the unveiled glory of the Lord Jesus, in whom the law is fulfilled, and all the divine perfections illustriously displayed and harmoniously exalted; and are by these views gradually and graciously rendered more and more like to him in grace and holiness, in a manner answerable to the love, grace, power, and influence of the Holy Ghost, who is himself a divine Person, and is sent by Jesus Christ for the conversion of men.

Ver. 6. Not of the letter, but of the spirit. Rather, 'not of letter, but of spirit.' Not of mere outward ceremonial observances, but of their internal spiritual import and design—the guidance of man to Christ Jesus, 'the end of the law for righteousness.' Note, Πνευμα being without the article, is thus translated. See Middleton on Gr. Art. p. 167, sect. 4, and comp. Jn. 4. 24; 6. 63, last clause.—The spirit giveth life. Πνευμα has here the article prefixed, and, according to Middleton's doctrine of 'renewed mention,' is to be understood and translated as in the former occurrence. (See Gr. Art. p. 46, sect. 1; p. 167, sect. 5.) But the action of quickening here ascribed to 'the spirit' seems rather to point to the Holy Spirit personally. See Middleton, Gr. Art. p. 311, edit. 1808. C.

Ver. 8. The gospel is called 'the ministration of the Spirit,' because its distinguishing characteristic was the promise, not of an earthly inheritance, as was the case with the law, but of the gift of the Spirit of God, as an earnest of a heavenly kingdom, Jn. 14. 16, 17, 26; 15. 26; 16. 7-15; Ac. 2. 16-21; 2 Co. 5. 5. C.

Ver. 10. That which was made glorious was the face of Moses. —The glory that excelleth was the glory of God, from which the glory of Moses was a derivative. See 2 Pe. 1. 17. C.

Ver. 13. Moses did not put on the vail to prevent them from seeing; but typically to intimate that, as his countenance presented a reflected glory which their weakness of vision prevented them from steadily examining, so the law, beneath its types and requirements, contained an essential glory—an end—even Christ—which an evil heart of unbelief would prevent themselves or their posterity from discovering. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy are those ministers whose remarkable success in the conversion of sinners attests their call to their office; whose care is not to please men's humours, but to awaken the conscience and touch their heart; and who, in proportion to the success of their ministry, become more humble and sensible of their insufficiency for their work! And happy are those hearers whose hearts are by the gospel powerfully conformed to Christ! It is a mercy that we ling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3 But if <sup>c</sup>our gospel be hid,<sup>2</sup> it<sup>d</sup> is hid to them that are lost.<sup>3</sup>

4 In whom<sup>4</sup> the<sup>e</sup> god of this world hath blinded<sup>g</sup> the minds of them which believe not, lest <sup>h</sup>the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is <sup>i</sup>the image of God, should shine unto them.

5 For we preach <sup>j</sup>not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake.

live in that period in which the terrible, the servile, the dark, the deathful, the figurative, and legal dispensation of God's truths is exchanged for the amiable and glorious, the lightful and liberating, the quickening, the substantial, and lasting ministration of the gospel. The veil of ignorance and error has been already in part removed by the influence of God's Spirit; and a time is coming when it shall be more fully removed from both Jews and Gentiles, and they be converted by multitudes to Christ. And thrice happy are they who, by believing views of him in the gospel, are gradually conformed to his image, till at last they become perfectly like him by seeing him as he is.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. Since therefore this dispensation of the gospel, which is so glorious in itself, and so efficacious and transforming in the hearts of true believers, is committed to me and my fellow-labourers, we are animated by the grace of God bestowed on us, and his mercy towards us, amidst all our weakness, tribulation, and reproach, to discharge our important trust without despondence, cowardice, or shrinking. 2. And notwithstanding manifold temptations, we have with abhorrence kept at the remotest distance from all secret and dishonourable artifices and contrivances, and all overreaching and insnaring the souls of men by sly, subtle, and false pretences; and all attempts to corrupt or falsify the Word of God, or to accommodate it to the depraved taste of our hearers; and have endeavoured to preach the gospel, and nothing else, with the greatest simplicity and upright freedom, answerably to every one's case and conscience, as in the sight of that all-seeing and heart-searching God to whom we must at last give an account of our conduct. 3. But if, notwithstanding our plain and faithful publication of the gospel, any of our hearers still remain ignorant of its attracting glory and saving power, it is merely because, by their wilful obstinacy and unbelief, they continue in their natural, lost, and perishing estate, in which, if they persist, they must be inevitably undone for ever. 4. And because the devil, whom the idolatrous Gentiles worship, and carnal men everywhere serve and obey, has, by the malignant influence of his allurements, terrors, and delusive suggestions, increased and confirmed the natural blindness and stupidity of their minds, and led them into wrong notions concerning the things of God and their eternal interests, that so the bright discoveries of the glory of Christ,—who, as the Son of God, is the express image of his Father's person, and as Mediator, God-man, is the representative image of God, in which all his perfections appear harmoniously exalted and illustriously displayed,—may not, by this gospel, penetrate through their natural ignorance and error, enlighten their hearts, and dispose them to abandon the slavery of Satan, and receive Jesus Christ by faith. 5. For in preaching the gospel, we do not conceal the glory of it by attempting to promote our own honour or interests, authority or inventions, passions or prejudices; but labour plainly to exhibit the person, offices, relations, righteousness, grace, and government of Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of lost sinners and Lord of all, and to represent ourselves as no more than servants, who are called by him to consider your weakness, wants, temptations, and dangers, and to labour by all means to promote your spiritual and eternal welfare, to the praise of the glory of his grace. 6. For God, who in the creation of the world did, by his own powerful and efficacious word, cause light to shine out of the dark chaos, has graciously enlightened the minds of us apostles and ministers, and even ordinary believers, with discoveries of his own being, perfections, purposes, and will, relative to our eternal salvation, as they are displayed, with the most endearing lustre, in the person, offices, relations, states, and work of Jesus Christ our Redeemer. 7. And he has committed the ministration of this infinitely precious and enriching truth and grace of the gospel to us, who are but frail, contemptible, mortal, and sinful men like yourselves, that the transcendent excellency and infinitely powerful influence which attend it for the conversion, comfort, and sanctification of men, may appear to be wholly of God, and in no respect or degree from us the preachers of it, who, on account of weakness, persecution, and trouble, need his almighty power to support and preserve us. 8. We are oppressed with manifold afflictions from all quarters, and by all means that men or devils can invent; yet neither straitened in our minds, oppressed with anxiety, hindered from preaching, or irrecoverably entangled.—We often know not what course to take in present dangers, or how to avoid further trials; but are never left to distrust or despair of God's wisdom, power, goodness, and truth, to uphold us under, carry us through, and in due time deliver us from all our troubles, and make them work for his own glory and our good.—9. We are persecuted for righteousness' sake in our persons, characters, liberties, and properties, by every method of reproach and violence; but never left to ourselves, abandoned by our God, or deprived of his acknowledgment, assistance, and comfort.—In our wrestling with sinful lusts, seducing devils, unreasonable men, or even our own infirmities, we are sometimes dejected, foiled, and cast down; but by faith we rise again, and neither we nor our cause are slain or defeated.—10. In these daily and severe hardships and sufferings which we endure for Christ, we carry about an external resemblance of those which he endured for the salvation of men; while, by our fellowship with him in the virtue of his death, resurrection, and eternal life, we are enabled to bear them with faith, patience, constancy, and courage. 11. For we who live spiritually, by quickening influence derived from him as our vital Head, and in conformity to him as our great Pattern, and who, by his marvellous providence, are still preserved in our natural life, are perpetually betrayed and delivered up by our restless enemies into the hands of secular powers or outrageous mobs, and are always surrounded with dangers and exposed to death for preaching and professing our faith in Christ as the only Saviour—in order that our wonderful preservations and deliverances, and our continued boldness in preaching the gospel with divine energy, may be an evident demonstration of the great power and glory by and to which our living Redeemer was raised from the dead, and that his holy and heavenly life may be conspicuously exemplified in our holding fast our faith, and holding on in our ministrations and holy practice with submission, patience, and undaunted resolution, amidst all the infirmities and oppressions which attend our abiding in mortal flesh.—12. Thus we ministers are exposed to distress and danger in the most hideous forms, while ye, my Christian friends, dwell in safety, and enjoy all the comforts of life; and all the troubles which we endure in preaching the gospel, and for the confirmation of it, are, by the power and wisdom of Christ, made means of promoting your spiritual and eternal life. 13. But whatever difference there be in our outward circumstances, yet, being animated by the same lively principle of faith, helped by the Holy Ghost, as you and the Old Testament saints were influenced by, we, after their example, having firmly believed the gospel revelations, and experienced them to be faithful and true, 6 For God, <sup>k</sup>who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath<sup>l</sup> shined<sup>l</sup> in our hearts, to <sup>m</sup>give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God <sup>n</sup>in the face of Jesus Christ.

7 But we have <sup>o</sup>this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.

8 We<sup>p</sup> are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in <sup>q</sup>despair;

9 Persecuted,<sup>a</sup> but not forsaken; east down, but not destroyed;

10 Always<sup>r</sup> bearing about in the body the do persist in boldly preaching them, and openly avowing our hopes of complete deliverance and eternal life according to them; 14. Being fully assured that God, who raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, as an evident testimony of his having perfectly fulfilled his law and fulfilled his justice for the sins of the world, will, for and through Jesus Christ, by his Spirit, raise us up to a blessed immortality at the last day, and will solemnly approve and present us faultless before an assembled world with exceeding joy. 15. For all the labours and sufferings of Christ's ministers or people, and everything else relative to the gospel dispensation—yea, all the providential dispensations of God—are by him intended, ordered, and made powerful for your spiritual edification and eternal salvation, that the overflowing streams of his grace and mercy might, through Christ, issue in abundant grateful acknowledgments, thanksgivings, and praises of converted multitudes to himself as the Father of mercies and God of salvation. 16. And these realizing views and contemplations of the blessed fruits of our ministrations bear up our spirits amidst every danger or distress; and though, by numberless fatigues and hardships, our mortal bodies and outward enjoyments gradually decline and waste, yet our immortal souls, as regenerated by the grace of God, are daily revived and strengthened in holiness and comfort by fresh supplies from Christ's fulness of grace, and gradually increase in desire of and meetness for the heavenly perfection. 17. For however burdensome and tedious our multiplied tribulations may appear to carnal men, yet to our faith, and in comparison of that important and endless happiness which we look for, they appear extremely light and momentary; and meanwhile, by the all-gracious management of Providence without us, and the sanctifying influence of the Holy Ghost within us, they all, in a marvellous connection, issue in and prepare us for an incomparable, inexpressible, inconceivable, and everlasting glory and happiness, in the full enjoyment of God in Christ, as our ALL and IN ALL. 18. While, in order to promote this astonishing co-operation of our troubles, we, by faith, overlook the visible and transient things of this world, as altogether unsuitable and insufficient to be a portion for our souls, and intently look at, desire after, and hasten towards the invisible things of heaven, which, like God himself, shall for ever endure in their glory and delightful usefulness.

Ver. 2. Renounced. Rather, according to Doddridge, 'set at defiance;' for the apostle, even when a persecutor, acted not from any dishonest motive, but merely from a mistaken principle (Ac. 23. 1; 1 Ti. 1. 13), and therefore could not 'renounce' principles and practices he had never adopted or followed. C.

Ver. 4. God of this world—Satan, whose lies unbelievers receive, while they reject the testimony of God.—Christ, the image of God. Christ is 'the image of God,' as he is God the Word speaking to men; as he is 'God manifest in the flesh,' and seen of angels and men (1 Ti. 3. 16; Jn. 1. 14), by rendering visible, as Mediator, the almighty power, unerring wisdom, spotless holiness, and eternal love of the Father. See ver. 6; Jn. 14. 9. C.

Ver. 10. Exhibiting in our bodily afflictions a distant likeness of the persecutions and death of Jesus—that the fact of his resurrection and life might be seen in the power by which he sustains our faith and patience. C.

Ver. 15. For all things are for your sakes. All these sufferings and perils we have borne and encountered 'for your sakes,' for your example, for your encouragement, 'lest you should be weary or faint in your minds.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are they who are divinely called to, qualified for, supported under, and rendered faithful in the gospel ministry! It is not enough to begin well, but they must courageously persevere unto the end. And in all things they must recommend themselves to the gracious approbation of God and to the consciences of their hearers, by a candid and open publication of truth. Not themselves, but Christ in dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.<sup>7</sup>

11 For<sup>s</sup> we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

12 So then 'death worketh in us, but life in you.<sup>8</sup>

13 We having "the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, "I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak;

14 Knowing<sup>x</sup> that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you.

15 For<sup>y</sup> all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might, through the thanksgiving of many, redound to the glory of God.

CHAPTER V.

1 That in his assured hope of immortal glory, 9 and in expectance of it, and of the general judgment, he laboureth to keep a good conscience, 12 not that he may herein boast of himself, 14 but as one that, having received life from Christ, endeavoureth to live as a new creature to Christ only, 18 and by his ministry of reconciliation to reconcile others also in Christ to God.

FOR<sup>a</sup> we know,<sup>1</sup> that if <sup>b</sup>our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have <sup>c</sup>a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

2 For <sup>d</sup>in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:

3 If<sup>e</sup> so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked.

4 For<sup>f</sup> we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would his spiritual characters, must be the matter and end of their preaching; and they must take pleasure in serving the spiritual and eternal interests of his church for his sake. How excellent is the gospel treasure, which is put into weak, despicable, mortal, and sinful ministers, for the enriching of themselves and others! And wisely hath God thus ordered it, that all the good found in or done by them may appear to be by faith. With great subtlety, labour, and force Satan strives to hold fast his slaves of mankind through their ignorance of the gospel. And nothing can more clearly discover men in a lost and perishing estate than obstinate ignorance of gospel truths. Thrice happy then are those who have had its illustrious, amiable, and penetrating light shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost! Like Christ, their sufferings may be great and many, but they shall be supported and honourably carried through them all. If, like the ancient prophets and saints, they stand fast in the faith, no tribulation shall overwhelm or cause them to faint. While bodily troubles waste their outward man, Jesus' Spirit makes their inward grace increase, and their souls to advance in spiritual strength and ripeness for glory. Never should saints murmur at their troubles, when they are so light and transient, and yet so inexpressibly useful. But how inconceivably delightful and glorious is our eternal felicity! And the more we set our eyes and affections on things above, the more remarkably will our troubles prepare us for, as they bring us nearer to, this eternal happiness.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1. What encourages us thus to look at things eternal, and to bear up cheerfully and labour diligently under our innumerable afflictions, is that, from the testimony of God's Word, and the witnessing of his Spirit with our spirits, we are assured that whenever this frail, mean, and changing body, in which our soul dwells during our present state of pilgrimage and warfare, shall be dissolved by death, our soul shall immediately enter into a far more fixed, lasting, glorious, and happy state, prepared by God, in his infinite wisdom, power, and grace, in his own immediate presence in heaven; and at the last day our body, being raised in glory, shall be rendered immortal, that, in union with our soul, it may be for ever with the Lord. 2. And in the believing views of this inconceivable happiness, we, being oppressed by manifold troubles and indwelling corruptions, do often, in extreme anguish, sigh, mourn, and groan under them, and vehemently desire and long for our heavenly home, in which we shall be clothed with light, holiness, and joy, and our body at last put on immortality and honour: 3. And the rather because, being then surrounded, adorned, and rendered safe and happy with this glory, we shall never more be exposed to any want, misery, defilement, or shame. 4. For in our present mortal state we cannot but earnestly long to be fully delivered from all our burdens of trouble, and especially our sinful corruptions, which so offend our gracious God and hinder our fellowship with him—not that we would be rid of our body, or chiefly desire to get out of this evil world, but that we may enter into the full possession of perfect holiness and happiness; and that all our natural and sinful infirmities may be, as it were, drowned and lost in the transcendent and undefiled felicities and glories of the future state. 5. Now, for the further confirmation of our faith and hope, God hath not only revealed and promised this future blessedness, but, by his regenerating and sanctifying grace, hath formed in our hearts spiritual and holy dispositions and desires to make us meet for it; and by the inhabitation, comforts, and witnessing of his Spirit in us, hath given us an earnest, pledge, token, and foretaste of it, to ascertain our speedy entrance on the full enjoyment of it. 6. And in the views, and under the influence of these things, we are always enabled to face our trials, sufferings, or death, with undaunted courage, and unshaken hopes of a glorious deliverance from them—knowing that, while we continue dwelling in these mortal bodies, we live like persons in a state of pilgrimage and warfare, at a great distance from the immediate presence of our dear Saviour and Lord, Jesus Christ. 7. For in this present mortal state of afflictions, we live and regulate all our behaviour by faith in Christ and his promises, which overcomes this world, and is the evidence of things not seen; and not by the immediate sight and enjoyment of God any more than by carnal sense or spiritual feelings. 8. But bearing up under all our hardships and dangers, and having unshaken hopes of their happy issue, we would be glad to leave our present mortal body and life, with all the natural and sinful infirmities attending them, in order to enter into the immediate presence of Christ, and be perfectly transformed into his image, by seeing him as he is. 9. Having therefore these satisfying hopes of and earnest desires after the heavenly blessedness, we zealously labour that, whether we die or live, all our services and sufferings, as well as our persons, may be graciously accepted by Christ, through our living faith, at his tribunal. 10. For in a little time all of us, ministers or people, Jews or Gentiles, must personally appear before him at the last judgment, when our whole state, qualities, and works shall be impartially laid open before the world and our own consciences, that every one of us, saint or sinner, may have the eternal gracious reward of our good deeds, or the just punishment of our sins, assigned to us, in proportion to the degree of the habitual and governing turn of our thoughts, words, or actions, in which we lived and died. 11. Being therefore convinced, from the Word of God and our own experience, of the inexpressible terribleness of that future judgment to hypocritical and unregenerate men, we compassionately labour to beseech and persuade men to flee from their natural, sinful, and dangerous estate, by receiving Jesus Christ the Judge for their full and everlasting salvation; and whether they hear or forbear, we can appeal to God that we have been sincere and earnest therein, and can appeal to many of your consciences, who have observed our preaching, sufferings, and conduct. 12. Indeed, after the experimental knowledge which ye have had of our faithfulness and diligence, we have no need to recommend ourselves to you; but we suggest these things that ye may have occasion to rejoice and glory in the favour which God hath vouchsafed to us, and may thereby silence the vain boasts of your judaizing teachers, who, without any just consciousness of their own sincerity, talk proudly of their mere appearances of religion. 13. For in my own and my faithful fellow-ministers' zealous vindication of our character, and fervent contentings for the equal admission of believing Gentiles as well as Jews to all the privileges of the gospel church, and in our self-denial and calm instructions and entreaties, we have only aimed at manifesting the riches of God's grace, and promoting men's eternal salvation, particularly that of the Gentiles. 14, 15. For the faith and sense of the exceeding greatness, freeness, and endearments of Christ's dying love, powerfully draw, excite, incline, and aid us, as it were, by a holy and delightful constraint, to do all that we can in imitation of and obedience to him, for the glory of God, in the salvation of Gentiles as well as Jews; for we thus think and judge that if, according to the gospel revelation, Christ, the only Saviour, died in the stead and for the salvation of sinful men, Gentiles as well as Jews, then both parties were, by nature, equally condemned in law, and dead in trespasses and sins, none having more right to or fitness for gospel privileges than another; and that he died for sinners of all nations, that all they who accept Christ in justification, and are quickened by the Holy Ghost, should no longer pursue their own carnal, selfish, or secular aims, nor indulge their own lusts and passions, nor make their own honour, ease, or pleasure the chief end of their living in this world, but wholly devote themselves to the service and glory of their great Lord and Saviour, who died to atone for their sins, and rose again for their justification and eternal life. 16. For this reason we, faithful ministers of the gospel, think ourselves bound to preach it to all nations. Gentiles or Jews, poor or rich; nay, though some of us once viewed and valued Christ as a circumcised Jew or temporal Deliverer, being now enlightened by the gospel, we view and value him only as the spiritual, the divine Prophet, Priest, and King of the new kingdom of grace, for men's spiritual and eternal salvation. 17. It is therefore the principal point of the Christian religion, that if any man, Jew or Gentile, be in Christ by vital faith, as well as by external profession, an entire change of his state, nature, and practice hath be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.<sup>2</sup>

5 Now he that hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.

6 Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord:

7 (For we walk by faith, not by sight:)

8 We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

9 Wherefore we labour,<sup>3</sup> that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.

10 For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.

11 Knowing<sup>4</sup> therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; but we are made manifest unto God; and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences.

12 For we commend not ourselves again unto you, but give you occasion to glory on our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to answer them which glory in appearance,<sup>5</sup> and not in heart.

13 For whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.

14 For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:

15 And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, been produced in him by the all loving power of God; his former habitual principles, inclinations, motives, ends, and course of conversation, are mortified and laid aside, and others, directly contrary to them, and conformed to those of Christ, are implanted and fixed in their stead. 18. And God, the Creator and Preserver of the world, is the Author of all things respecting the new creation and redemption of men, Jews or Gentiles; and hath, by the incarnation, obedience, and death of his Son, made salvation possible, and restored friendship between himself and all believers; and in infinite condescension and grace hath honourably intrusted us apostles and ministers to preach and hold forth this method of reconciliation to men. 19. The sum and tenor of which is, that God, from all eternity, hath determined to save all who believe, and, in prosecution thereof, hath, through his mediation and atoning sacrifice, manifested himself a God of peace, pardoning all the iniquities of them that believe, Gentiles as well as Jews, and for awakening and converting sinners hath appointed us apostles and ministers to preach the glad tidings and offers of reconciliation through the whole world, as we have opportunity. 20. Wherefore, as his highly dignified messengers, sent to deal with you in his stead, we do, in the name and authority of Christ and his Father, beseech and entreat you, by everything endearing or awful in heaven, earth, or hell, and in time or eternity, to consider and accept of God's graciously prepared, dearly secured, and freely offered peace, favour, and friendship, and to surrender up yourselves to him, to be espoused to Christ, saved by him, and entirely and heartily devoted to him and his service. 21. For in justice to himself, his law, and government, and in rich mercy and grace to Jews and Gentiles, God the Father hath saved from sin by his own perfectly holy and only-begotten Son, as our Saviour, and hath fully laid them on him, that, in consequence of our spiritual union to his person, his complete righteousness of obedience and suffering, which for ever resides in him, but was contrived, fulfilled, and accepted by God for us, might be imparted to us, to render us perfectly free from guilt, when we fully accept him by faith.

Ver. 3. This verse presents great difficulty, and has produced correspondent variety of interpretation. May not the difficulty be removed either by translating ἐν τῇ σαρκί, as in Ga. 3. 4, 'Since being (once so) clothed, we shall not be found naked,' or, as it may equally be rendered, 'Although being (now) clothed?' &c. C.

Ver. 8. How vain is the Romish signment of purgatory—the dream of a sleep of the spirit—or the conjecture of an inferior and intermediate state between death and the resurrection! Believers when 'absent from the body are present with the Lord.' And surely where the Lord is, there is the highest heaven, the greatest happiness, and the brightest glory! C.

Ver. 14. Then were all dead. Tindal translates it, 'then are all dead;' and Scholefield, 'then all died'—that is, all the members died when the head died. See Ro. 6. 3-11; 1 Pe. 2. 24. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Frailty, sinfulness, and sorrows attend the best of men on earth. But happy they who have a blessed assurance of eternal fellowship with Christ in heaven! No wonder they long for it, and groan to be delivered from their present pressures and plagues. And happy they who are fitted for it, and have the Holy Ghost dwelling in their hearts as an earnest of it, and who are by faith daily walking forward to it, and diligently finishing the work which God hath allotted them in this life! How tremendous will be the last judgment, in which all men that are, have been, or shall be, must appear together before Christ, and have their eternal state publicly and irreversibly fixed, according to their qualities and works!—In a most conscientious and active manner ought ministers and others to behave in the view of it. And slumbering sinners must be awakened by these terrors of the Lord. But it is most delightful to be persuaded by the faith and sense of Jesus' love to live and labour always for his glory and the salvation of men. And but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

16 Wherefore<sup>6</sup> henceforth know we no man after the flesh:<sup>6</sup> yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.<sup>7</sup>

17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

18 And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;

19 To wit, that God was in Christ,<sup>9</sup> reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them;<sup>1</sup> and hath committed unto us<sup>2</sup> the word of reconciliation.

20 Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.

21 For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER VI.

1 That he hath approved himself a faithful minister of Christ, both by his exhortations, 3 and by integrity of life, 4 and by patient enduring all kinds of affliction and disgraces for the gospel. 10 Of which he speaketh the more boldly amongst them, because his heart is open to them, 13 and he expecteth the like affection from them again, 14 exhorting to flee the society and pollutions of idolaters, as being themselves temples of the living God.

WE then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.

2 (For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation.)

14 Be ye not <sup>unequally</sup> yoked together with unbelievers: <sup>for</sup> what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?<sup>4</sup>

15 And <sup>what</sup> concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for <sup>ye</sup> are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, <sup>"I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and "I will be their God, and they shall be my people.</sup>

17 Wherefore<sup>e</sup> come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, 18 And<sup>y</sup> will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

CHAPTER VII.

1 He proceedeth in exhorting them to purity of life, 2 and to bear him like affection as he doth to them. 3 Whereof lest he might seem to doubt, he declareth what comfort he took in his afflictions, by the report which Titus gave of their godly sorrow, which his former epistle had wrought in them, 13 and of their loving-kindness and obedience towards Titus, answerable to his former boastings of them.

HAVING<sup>a</sup> therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.<sup>1</sup> pursue the great designs of salvation, by our abundant meekness and patience towards men, and calm resignation and submission to the will of God, in the manifold tribulations which we suffer for Christ's sake, and in our extreme want even of necessary provisions, and the great straits and perplexities to which we have been often reduced—in our enduring ignominious and painful scourgings; in hard imprisonments under the custody of cruel officers; in outrageous insurrections of insulting and furious mobs; and in the want of ordinary sleep and food. 6. Which patience hath been promoted by and carried on in great integrity, in preaching the gospel with a single eye to the glory of God and the good of precious souls; and in a modest and chaste behaviour, and purity of doctrine and manners; in a believing acquaintance with gospel truth, and a spiritual wisdom and understanding answerable to it; in such lenity and forbearance as to put up with affronts, and bear calmly every provocation; in such kindness of temper as makes us to delight in doing good to all, and rendering good for evil; and by the special assistance of the Holy Ghost, in his gifts and graces, which furnish us for, direct and animate us in, the work of the Lord: 7. By the light and comfort of the gospel which God, who cannot lie, hath published; and which we believe without doubting, and preach without any mixture of error; and by the almighty power of God, which assists and supports us under all our trials and labours; and, in fine, by the whole armour of God, by which we are completely furnished, to war valiantly, acceptably, and successfully against all our spiritual enemies, of every kind, and on every side. 8. And being thus fortified against all our trials, we, with steadiness of temper, go through every change and form of our much diversified lot; through the good esteem of some, without being puffed up; through the contempt and abuse of others, without being dispirited; through hard speeches and slanders, without being discouraged; and through commendations and applause, without being proud of them. For, in the holy providence of God, we are represented as hypocritical impostors who seduce mankind; and yet, as true servants of Christ, we are sincere and faithful in preaching the gospel in all that we say or do. 9. Some, ignorant of our true character, represent us as mean, worthless, and obscure; others, from their own experience of our powerful ministrations, holy conversation, and unshaken patience in suffering, and from the information of such as have experienced the like, know us to be highly honoured of God. We are in perpetual jeopardy, as persons in the jaws of death, and yet God wonderfully preserves us in life and comfort. We are severely chastened by the hands of both God and men, and yet both our lives and hopes are maintained. 10. In outward appearance we are in a very melancholy and miserable condition; and yet we are inwardly full of the joys of faith and of a good conscience, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. We are indeed poor with respect to this world, having none of its affluence or accommodations; and yet we are instruments in Christ's hand of making many rich towards God in faith and good works, and heirs of his kingdom, along with ourselves. We scarcely possess any earthly enjoyments, and look down upon them with holy indifference; and yet we have all things spiritual, temporal, and eternal in Christ our Head, who hath received them for our use. 11. My dear Corinthians, we thus freely open our mind to you that ye may be encouraged by thus hearing of our behaviour, supports, and consolations under all our sufferings for Christ, and be able to vindicate our character against those who reproach us; and our hearts are so full of affection to you, and concern for your spiritual edification and eternal salvation, that we think nothing too much for promoting them. 12. There is no want of love in our heart or of zeal in our work to promote to the utmost your establishment and growth in light, faith, love, comfort, and holiness; nor is there any deficiency in the gracious doctrines, promises, and privileges which we preach; but there are some of you whose hearts, through the working of unbelief, carnality, and coolness of affection, are shut against us, and against the consolations which are in Christ for you. 13. But now, in return for our great love to you, and our earnest desires and labours to promote your spiritual welfare, I beg that ye, as loving children, would enlarge your affection towards us, and cheerfully receive the truths and blessings of the gospel which we recommend to you.—14. And I earnestly insist that ye never intermarry with such as appear destitute of the knowledge and grace of the gospel; never cultivate any unnecessary familiarity with them; and, above all, never join with them in any of their idolatrous worship, which would amount to a practical renouncing of your communion with Christ. For what holy and delightful friendship can there be between one who is renewed and sanctified and one who remains under the dominion of sin? What religious fellowship can there be between a savingly enlightened Christian and one who knows nothing of God, of Christ, or the gospel, but is plainly a subject of Satan, the prince of darkness? 15. What harmony can there be between the true members of Christ and the manifest children of Satan, that lawless arch-rebel against God? Or what comfortable joint portion can one who believeth in Christ have with one who in profession and practice rejects him? 16. And what proper agreement can there be between you who are the divinely consecrated temples of God, and, according to his promise, honoured with his special presence, as your God, Master, and Lord, and them who are the temples of idols and devoted to their service? 17. Remember therefore, that as God required his ancient people the Jews to improve their distinguished privileges in abstaining from all unnecessary connection with idolaters, so he requires you and other Christians, whose privileges are much more glorious, to renounce all the unfruitful works of darkness, and have no fellowship with idolatrous or profane persons beyond what the civil duties of life require. 18. To encourage you to which, he promises to make up all your losses, by allowing you the most familiar fellowship with himself here and hereafter, and with all the kindness of a divine Parent blessing you, as heirs of himself, with all spiritual blessings in Christ.

REFLECTIONS.—It is very honourable to be a faithful minister, a worker together with God, in that glorious cause which is founded on Christ's suffering with the Father, that sinners might be accepted in him. And earnestly should we improve present opportunities in receiving Christ and his fulness, since they may quickly be irrevocably ended and gone. Ministers have need of much grace in them and much prayer for them, that they may approve themselves faithful to God in all their labours, and under all their manifold sufferings. And it is shameful when their affectionate regard to their hearers is rewarded with neglect and contempt.

2 Receive<sup>b</sup> us; 'we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, we have defrauded no man.

3 I<sup>d</sup> speak not this to condemn you; for I have said before, that ye are in our hearts to die and live with you.

4 Great<sup>e</sup> is my boldness of speech toward you, great is my glorying of you: 'I am filled with comfort, I am exceedingly joyful in all our tribulation.

5 For,<sup>h</sup> when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears.

6 Nevertheless 'God, that comforteth those that are east down, comforted us by the coming of Titus;

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us 'your earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For<sup>k</sup> though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, though I did repent:<sup>2</sup> for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 Now<sup>l</sup> I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner,<sup>3</sup> that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

* The translation here obscures the meaning of the original. The Greek words rendered repentance, and not to be repented of, are radically different, and ought not to be confounded. The former signifies repentance springing from a regenerate heart, and manifested by a hatred of sin and a turning from it—the latter merely indicates regret or remorse, which may spring from a fear of punishment, and may speedily pass away. 10 For<sup>n</sup> godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of:<sup>4</sup> but<sup>o</sup> the sorrow of the world worketh death.

12 Wherefore though I wrote unto you, <sup>2</sup>I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that suffered wrong, but that our care for you in the sight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore we were comforted in your comfort: yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we for the joy of Titus, 'because his spirit was refreshed by you all.

14 For 'if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I am not ashamed; but as we spake all things to you in truth, even so our boasting, which I made before Titus, is found a truth.

15 And his inward affection<sup>2</sup> is more abundant toward you, whilst he remembereth the 'obediencce of you all, how with fear and trembling ye received him.

16 I<sup>d</sup> rejoice therefore that I have confidence in you in all things.

Great care is necessary in Christians to keep at a proper distance from wicked persons and things. And if God graciously become ours, and make us his, and dwell in and with us, no idol ought to be harboured in our heart.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1. Having therefore an interest in, and in some measure the possession of, all these exceeding great and precious promises, let us, my dear brethren, in a dependence on God's promised grace, and in hopes of his promised glory, by believing applications of Jesus' word, blood, and Spirit, and by careful watchfulness over our hearts and lives, and impartial mortification of our indwelling corruptions, labour to purify ourselves from all uncleanness, drunkenness, intemperance, and other fleshly lusts which render us like to brute beasts; and from all falsehood, pride, malice, and other vices which immediately pollute our souls and render us like devils; and let us press after universal perfection in holiness, under the influence of a holy and filial reverence of God in his greatness, majesty, and mercy.—2. And to return to the point in hand, see that ye receive us faithful ministers into your most cordial affection, embrace the doctrine which we preach in Christ's name, and submit to the authority which we have received from him; for God and your consciences know that we never wronged your persons, characters, or estates, nor ever corrupted your minds by errors, flatteries, or bribes, nor ever overreached you for our own secular advantage. 3. I do not mention these things as if I thought the better part of you had ever reproached us with them; for, as I have already hinted, such is our ardent affection to and entire confidence in most of you, that we could venture our character and life in your hands; and if God did not call us to labour in other places, we could willingly spend and be spent for you, and cheerfully live and die with you, as our beloved and affectionate friends. 4. It is from a tender concern for you that I so plainly warn you against every disorder; and it is from the firm confidence that I have in the generality of you that I so rejoice in and glory of you as my obedient children in Christ; and amidst all my reproaches and sufferings it is an inexpressible comfort to my spirits that things are much better among you than I feared. 5. For when I came in great anxiety from Troas to Macedonia to find Titus, and be by him informed concerning your spiritual estate, the anxiety I felt from not finding him, the fears I had concerning you, and the contests I endured with surrounding adversaries, rendered me for a time restless in both body and mind. 6. But at length our gracious God, the Father of mercies, who always takes a peculiar pleasure in comforting those who are dejected and distressed, greatly comforted me by the seasonable and happy arrival of Titus. 7. Not so much indeed by his safe return as by the delightful accounts of his satisfactory reception among you, and how earnest ye were to comply with the injunctions I sent you, and of your deep lamentations over the offences which had happened among you, and of your affectionate zeal for and regard to my person, character, and authority as an apostle of Christ. 8. For though it was with no small concern that I wrote my former reproofs, and not without great fear lest some might abuse them to their own hurt and the dishonour of Christ, yet, now that they have produced such happy effects, I do not repent the freedom which I used; for though it pained you at first, it nevertheless quickly influenced you to rectify your disorders. 9. I therefore now heartily rejoice, not in your vexation and grief, but that it issued in an ingenuous and sincere repentance for the evils amongst you; for, like true penitents, ye mourned with a self-abasing and heart-broken sense of your sin as against God, and with hatred and humble confession of it, and a full purpose to turn from it to him, by the assistance of his Spirit, and to the glory of his name. Thus, instead of being either provoked or discouraged by my letter, ye were greatly profited by it. 10. For spiritual brokenness of heart like yours, which is produced by apprehensions of the mercy of God in Christ, affects persons with a sense of their sins as committed against God and his law, and works that thorough change of mind, heart, and life which issues in, and gradually prepares for, a complete deliverance from sin and misery, and advancement to perfect and eternal holiness and happiness; and so ye will never need to repent of it, but to rejoice in and bless God for it: but the anxiety, trouble, and vexation of spirit which unregenerate men have on account of their worldly losses and troubles, or on account of apprehended wrath and undoing for their sins, promote spiritual death, prepare for eternal death, and even hasten natural death, by methods more or less violent. 11. But think what blessed fruits demonstrate the gracious and acceptable nature of your repentance; what care and diligence to rectify what was amiss! what concern to manifest your aversion at the least fellowship in sin! what hatred of and warm resentment against everything sinful, and what loathing of yourselves on account of it! what holy awe of God and his righteous judgments! what earnest desire to have your hearts, lives, and church purged from everything sinful, and to perform whatever tends to the glory of God, or your own or others' edification! what holy zeal for the honour of God, and the purity, peace, and order of his church! what holy resentment against yourselves, or the scandalous offenders! Thus ye have manifested that your hearts are purged by the blood of Christ, and that as a church ye are no more chargeable with your former disorders. 12. This cannot but exceedingly delight me; for though I wrote unto you with some sharpness, particularly about the incestuous person, I did it from no angry resentment at him, or partial regard to his father, who had been so horribly injured; nor was it barely to reclaim the one and do justice to the other, but principally from a deep concern that God and Christ might be honoured, and your church preserved from that infection and reproach which his continuance among you might have occasioned. 13. We were therefore greatly refreshed to hear that, for your own peace and comfort, ye had in an orderly manner excommunicated that heinous transgressor, and rectified your other disorders, and to find that Titus, your most affectionate friend, had been so greatly revived, cheered, and delighted with your reformation and Christian behaviour. 14. And as I always in the greatest sincerity preached to you the pure truths of the gospel, I am now extremely glad that your conduct hath answered to the high commendations which I had given of you to Titus; 15. Whose very heart and bowels of love are warmed as often as he thinks on your ready obedience to my injunctions, and on my deep concern that he might not meet with anything to grieve his spirits in any contempt of his faithful, kind, and tender advices to you. 16.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 He stirreth them up to a liberal contribution for the poor saints at Jerusalem, by the example of the Macedonians, 7 by commendation of their former forwardness, 9 by the example of Christ, 14 and by the spiritual profit that shall redound to themselves thereby; 16 commending to them the integrity and willingness of Titus, and those other brethren, who upon his request, exhortation, and commendation, were purposely come to them for this business.

MOREOVER, brethren, <sup>1</sup>we do you to wit<sup>2</sup> of <sup>a</sup>the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia;

2 How that, <sup>b</sup>in a great trial of affliction, the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality.<sup>3</sup>

3 For<sup>c</sup> to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power, they were willing of themselves;

4 Praying us with much entreaty<sup>d</sup> that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of the ministering to the saints.

5 And<sup>e</sup> this they did, not as we hoped,<sup>4</sup> but<sup>f</sup> first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God.

6 Insomuch<sup>h</sup> that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same <sup>g</sup>grace<sup>5</sup> also.

7 Therefore, as ye <sup>i</sup>abound in every thing, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace<sup>6</sup> also.

8 I<sup>k</sup> speak not by commandment,<sup>7</sup> but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love.

9 For <sup>l</sup>ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.

10 And<sup>n</sup> herein I give my advice: for this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be forward<sup>8</sup> a year ago.<sup>9</sup> p Gr. willing. q The meaning is as follows:—Paul had given directions in his former epistle that the collection for the poor Christians in Judea should be taken up as soon as possible. On meeting Titus he learned that it had not yet been completed, though the churches of Macedonia, which were much poorer than that of Corinth, had long since given their contribution. He now presses the subject on the Corinthians, not giving any authoritative command, but simply an earnest recommendation. He says:—I give my advice (as distinguished from a command) in regard to this matter. For this is expedient for you (i.e. for such as they were it was better to give an advice than a command, seeing that you began (to make the collection) before them (the Macedonians), not only to do, but also the will to do, from a year ago, i.e. you anticipated the Macedonians not only in your first action, but in your purpose to act.—P.

Mat. 7.12. t The apostle seems to refer to a well-known fact in the statistics of commerce—the alternate depressions and resuscitations of trade in different cities and countries—the prosperity of one place being often contemporaneous with the calamity of another. And upon this he grounds his appeal to the Corinthians, whose trade seems then to have been prosperous, while that of Macedonia was depressed; and he reminds them that the time may come when the revival of trade in Macedonia may enable them to supply the deficiencies from depression in Corinth.—C.

11 Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which we have.

12 For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 For<sup>p</sup> I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened:

14 But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance<sup>1</sup> also may be a supply for your want: that there may be equality:

15 As it is written, <sup>q</sup>He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack.

16 But<sup>r</sup> thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you.

17 For<sup>s</sup> indeed he accepted the exhortation; but being more forward, of his own accord he went unto you.

It is therefore an inexpressible pleasure to me that, instead of being disappointed in my expectations concerning you, I have now further evidence that ye will pay a dutiful respect to my character, and religious regard to my apostolic injunctions, when I shall be permitted to visit you.

Ver. 10. Godly sorrow is so called because it is commanded by God, Joel 2. 13: it is wrought by his Spirit, and it has authority, mercy, and glory for its object.—Sorrow of the world. Such as arises from a sense of the injury that worldly men have done to themselves—to their peace of mind, their reputation, their health, or their property; and not from any regard to the law they have violated, or the God they have denied, Ps. 14. 1; Tit. 1. 16. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Gospel promises afford abundant assistance and encouragement for daily progress in true holiness of heart and life. With boldness and freedom may ministers deliver their messages and bear their troubles when their hearers cannot but attest their integrity and disinterested concern for their spiritual welfare. But it is painful to be obliged to distress those whom we wish to comfort. And it is a great honour to Christians when they are manifestly and evangelically penitent for their sins, and are an honour to Christ and comfort to his ministers.

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 1. Being thus confident of your distinguished love and regard, I must again recommend to your Christian compassion the poor saints at Jerusalem; and for your excitement inform you that the powerful influence of God's grace hath determined the Christians of Macedonia to make a very liberal collection for them. 2, 3. And that, notwithstanding their own grievous persecutions and deep poverty, they have, with uncommon generosity and gladness, bestowed their part, not only answerable to but even beyond their ability. 4. Yea, so far were they from needing any excitement from me or my fellow-ministers, that they importunately urged us to accept their free-will offering, and take the trouble of conveying and distributing it to their poor brethren. 5. And this they did with the greatest cheerfulness and generosity that could be expected; and not merely so, but, acting herein upon truly religious principles, before they put their contributions into our hands, they made a joint and solemn surrender of themselves and all that they had to the honour, service, influence, government, and disposal of the Lord Jesus Christ, as their Head, Saviour, and King; and then, according to the will and directing influence of God, to us as his servants, to conduct them in their spiritual concerns according to the rules of his Word. 6. This their excellent behaviour made us to entreat Titus, our fellow-minister of Christ, who had been so acceptable among you, and had begun your charitable collections, to return to you, and, by his advices and encouragements, to complete them. 7. And as many of you, by the grace of God, are remarkable in the knowledge and faith of gospel mysteries, in eloquence of speech, in earnest endeavours to reform your church, in your affectionate regard to faithful ministers, and in other excellencies, I beg and hope that ye will proportionally abound in this grace of Christian benevolence. 8. And as I mean that it should be wholly a free gift, I lay no command upon you, nor impose any particular sum; but wish that, by showing yourselves equally forward with your poor brethren of Macedonia, ye may give further proof of your love to me and to the saints, and especially to Christ, in imitation of and thankful return for his unparalleled and endearing love towards you. 9. For by infallible information and your own experience ye know the astonishing favour, love, and bounty of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who, though he was the eternal Son of God, possessed of all the riches, glory, and blessedness of the Godhead, and rightful proprietor of all the riches of the universe, yet, to effect your salvation, assumed our nature in a most debased and impoverished condition, veiled his divine glory, and submitted to poverty, meanness, and suffering, that by this means ye might be enriched with all the abundant blessings of grace and glory, and even with those temporal benefits which ye enjoy in a spiritual state. 10, 11. Affected with his engaging example, I expect that ye will now complete and put into one sum the collections which ye began to lay by you about a year ago when ye received my former epistle. 12. For wherever there is a cheerful and determined inclination to acts of benevolence, and sincere contrivances and endeavours to be able to distribute somewhat to the glory of God and the necessities of his people, it is acceptable not only to ministers and churches, but even to Christ himself, be it more or less, if answerable to men's circumstances and abilities. 13. For I do not wish that ye should reduce yourselves to poverty by giving too largely to the enriching of these poor saints in Judea, nor that the whole burden of supplying them should fall on you, to ease or excuse other churches that are able to assist in it; 14. But I am desirous that at many things, but now much more diligent, upon the great confidence which I have<sup>5</sup> in you.

23 Whether any do inquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellow-helper concerning you: or our brethren be inquired of, they are the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ.<sup>6</sup>

24 Wherefore show ye to them, and before the churches, the proof of your love, and of our boasting on your behalf.

CHAPTER IX.

1 He yieldeth the reason why, though he knew their forwardness, yet he sent Titus and his brethren beforehand: 6 and he proceedeth in stirring them up to a bountiful alms, as being but a kind of sowing of seed, 10 which shall return a great increase to them, 13 and occasion a great sacrifice of thanksgivings unto God.

FOR as touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you:

2 For I know the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, that Achaia was ready<sup>1</sup> a year ago; and your zeal hath provoked very many.

3 Yet<sup>c</sup> have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf; that, as I said, ye may be ready:

4 Lest<sup>d</sup> haply if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not ye) should be ashamed in this same confident boasting.

5 Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort

6 In the second clause of this verse Paul speaks of 'the messengers of the churches;' in the Greek it is 'the apostles of the churches;' i.e. those who were commissioned by the churches to do a certain work. It will be observed that they are called 'the apostles of the churches,' not 'the apostles of the Lord.' The concluding phrase, 'the glory of Christ,' is intended to be descriptive of these apostles; they were men whose labours tended to promote the kingdom of Christ.—P.

the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your bounty, whereof ye had notice before,<sup>3</sup> that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness.<sup>4</sup>

6 But<sup>g</sup> this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

7 Every<sup>i</sup> man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:

9 (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness<sup>5</sup> remaineth for ever.

10 Now<sup>l</sup> he that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness;) <sup>6</sup>

11 Being<sup>o</sup> enriched in every thing to all bountifulness,<sup>7</sup> which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.

12 For the administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God;

13 While by the experiment of this ministration they glorify God for your professed this time ye, out of your abundance, should supply their extreme necessities, that if ever, by the providence of God, ye should be reduced to like straits, they or others may be able and inclined to supply your need:

15. Of which brotherly communication we have an agreeable example in the Israelites' distribution of the manna, giving whatever they gathered more than enough for themselves to such as, through age and infirmity, could not gather what was sufficient for their daily support. 16, 17. And blessed be God that he hath inspired our beloved brother Titus with the same fervent zeal as myself to engage you in this excellent service, for your own profit as well as the relief of the poor Jews; and indeed such was his abundant affection for you and zeal for this work, that he scarcely needed to be urged to promote it. 18, 19. And I and my brethren who are concerned in it have sent along with him on the same errand another eminent minister of great repute in the churches for his insight into the gospel, and his zeal, faithfulness, and diligence in promoting the interests of it; and who hath been chosen by the churches here to attend and assist us in distributing their collection to the poor Christians in Judea, to the honour of Christ and of all the cheerful contributors: 20, 21. We being desirous to have some other respectable ministers of Christ joined with us in bearing and distributing these large collections, that none might have occasion to suspect we had embezzled or misapplied any part of them; for we wish to execute this important trust in such a manner as may approve itself not only to God, who knows our hearts and ways, but also to the consciences of all mankind, whether friends or foes, who may observe our conduct. 22. And with these two brethren we have sent a third, of whose activity and faithfulness we have had the strongest proofs; and who, from the commendations of you which he hath heard from me, will exert himself to the utmost to complete your honourable liberality. 23. If any strangers desire to know the character of these three brethren, let them understand that Titus is my assistant in everything relating to your comfort and edification, and that of other Christians: and that the other two are approved messengers of the churches here in Macedonia, who also have been greatly instrumental in promoting the glory and honour of Christ.

24. Receive them therefore in such a respectful manner as will manifest to them and to the churches your love to Christ, to them and to me, and to the poor Jewish saints; and show that my boasting of you as a generous, faithful, and kind people hath been perfectly just and well-grounded.

REFLECTIONS.—What an excellent virtue is Christian benevolence! Wrought in us by the power of divine grace, it proves the sincerity of our love to Christ, and to his members for his sake. It is a delightful imitation of him in his redeeming kindness, and never fails to turn out to men's own advantage. But it is shameful to be outdone in it by persons poorer than ourselves.—It is highly honourable for professors first solemnly to give up themselves to Jesus Christ as his members and subjects, and, in consequence thereof, to the direction of his faithful ministers.—And happy is it when everything in charitable benevolence or other church matters is managed with such prudence, faithfulness, and disinterestedness as leaves not the least ground for a suspicion of fraud, partiality, or selfishness, and when ministers and saints so behave as to be generally beloved and extensively commended.

CHAPTER IX. Ver. 1. But the pious generosity and compassion of your own tempers renders it altogether superfluous to suggest any other arguments for enforcing your liberality on this occasion. 2. For I sufficiently know your forward inclinations to it, which made me boast to the Christians of Macedonia that ye and your neighbours in Achaia had begun your collections a year ago; and the fame of your fervent zeal herein hath raised a noble emulation in the breasts of many. 3, 4. But notwithstanding my confidence in you, I thought proper to join in sending Titus and his two brethren to you, that your money may be collected and just ready for us whenever we call for it, lest if any of the Macedonian brethren come along with me, and find your collection not completed, it should expose both you and me, who have boasted of you, to shame and reproach. 5. I therefore thought it necessary for your and my own honour, and the common credit of Christianity, to entreat these brethren to come beforehand and inform you when ye may look for us, who are to receive, carry, and distribute it, that your bountiful contribution may be fully ready, and appear a grateful acknowledgment of God's kindness to you, cheerfully given, without any importunate instigation on our side. 6. And though the quantity to be given must be left to your own consciences, yet remember that, in allusion to the niggardly or plentiful sowing of seeds in the earth, God will ordinarily proportion his kind blessings to the straitness or liberality of your charitable contributions. 7. In view of this, let each of you give what he thinks proper in his circumstances, and that cheerfully, not like persons who grudge to part with it, or wish to be excused; for the infinitely bountiful God takes pleasure in them who give with an open hand and heart, and cheerfully improves every opportunity of making their condition comfortable. 8, 9. And this all-sufficient God, who delighteth in mercy, is able to make a liberal disposition, as well as all other gifts and graces, to abound in you, that ye, being content with what ye have, and plentifully supplied with everything pertaining to life and godliness, may be still more and more engaged in such charitable work, and thus attain to the inspired character of the merciful man, who, by his liberal distributions to the poor, procures himself lasting honours before God and men. 10. May therefore God, whose blessing maketh rich, and who multiplies grain to the sower, and supplies the necessity of liberal persons, and inclines them to supply others, give you always whatever is needful, restore your present liberality a hundred-fold into your bosoms in both spirituals and temporals, and enable you more and more to abound in all the fruits of righteousness! 11. May he plentifully enrich you with every blessing of time and eternity, and make you more and more inclined and able to abound in such disinterested liberality as may engage many souls in thankfulness to God for raising up by our means such instruments of supplying their wants! 12. For the proper distribution of this collection will not only be an ample relief to the poor Christians of Judea, but will redound to the honour of God, through the manifold thanksgivings of those who are supplied and other friends of Christ: 13. While by this experimental proof of your brotherly affection the receivers of your charity, and even they who hear of it, will adore and bless God for your unfeigned submission to the authority of Christ in subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men;

14 And <sup>1</sup>by their prayer for you, which long after you for the <sup>2</sup>exceeding grace of God in you.

CHAPTER X.

1 Against the false apostles, who disgraced the weakness of his person and bodily presence, he setteth out the spiritual might and authority with which he is armed against all adversary powers, 7 assuring them that at his coming he will be found as mighty in word, as he is now in writing being absent: 12 and withal taxing them for reaching out themselves beyond their compass, and vaunting themselves into other men's labours.

NOW I Paul myself beseech you <sup>1</sup>by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who in <sup>2</sup>presence <sup>1</sup>am base among you, but being absent am bold toward you.<sup>2</sup>

2 But I beseech you, that <sup>1</sup>I may not be bold when I am present with that confidence, where-with I think to be bold against some, which think<sup>3</sup> of us as if we walked according to the flesh.<sup>4</sup>

3 For <sup>1</sup>though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh:

4 (For<sup>2</sup> the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through<sup>5</sup> God to the pulling down of strong holds;)<sup>6</sup>

5 Casting<sup>7</sup> down imaginations,<sup>7</sup> and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and <sup>8</sup>bringing into captivity<sup>8</sup> every thought to the obedience of Christ;

6 And<sup>1</sup> having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when <sup>2</sup>your obedience is fulfilled.

7 Do<sup>1</sup> ye look on things after the outward appearance? <sup>2</sup>If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again, that, as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's.

reader will observe a marked change in the tone and style of the epistle from this verse onwards. In the preceding part there is a gentleness of appeal, an affectionate earnestness of pleading, which could not fail to touch the hearts of the Corinthians. Here he assumes a tone of severity and of stern command. His mind was evidently affected by some new intelligence. Probably Titus had just told him of the charges preferred against him, and of the calumnies circulated regarding him. So far as concerned himself personally he was indifferent to such things;
but he was jealous of his apostolic office and his divine commission. His Master's interest and honour were involved, and he therefore administers to the erring church a severe rebuke.—P.

8 For <sup>1</sup>though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, I should not be ashamed:

9 That I may not seem <sup>2</sup>as if I would terrify you by letters.

10 For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but this bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.

11 Let such an one think this, that, such as we are in word by letters <sup>1</sup>when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present.

12 For <sup>1</sup>we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, <sup>2</sup>are not wise.<sup>9</sup>

13 But <sup>1</sup>we will not boast of things without our measure,<sup>1</sup> but according to the measure of the rule<sup>2</sup> which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.

14 For<sup>1</sup> we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you: for we are come as far as to you also in *preach-*ing the <sup>2</sup>gospel of Christ:

15 Not<sup>1</sup> boasting of things without our measure, that is, of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be <sup>3</sup>enlarged by you<sup>4</sup> according to our rule abundantly, 16 To<sup>1</sup> preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's line<sup>5</sup> of things made ready to our hand.

17 But<sup>1</sup> he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

18 For<sup>1</sup> not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.

the gospel, and your affectionate and liberal love to his poor members. 14. And it will even turn to your own advantage, as the receivers will pour forth their prayers to God, that he may abundantly recompense your kindness with all blessings, spiritual, temporal, and eternal. 15. Yea, indeed, my own heart joins in their praises as well as their prayers. Blessed be God for this free and bountiful alms, which turns out so inexpressibly to his glory, and your own and others' good, and for the unutterable gift of his grace in making you both able and willing to honour him with your substance, and in filling the receivers with such abundant gratitude to him and to you; and, above all, thanks be to God for Jesus Christ, to whose authority ye have thus shown such subjection, and through whom all the rich blessings of grace and glory come to you, and who, in his person, offices, relations, fulness, and work, is such a transcendent and all-comprehensive gift of God that no created heart can conceive or tongue express its contents, excellencies, extent, or value.

REFLECTIONS.—It is honourable to be so forward in acts of charity as to need no excitement. But the most liberal may need directions relative to the extent, time, or manner of their donations; and whatever charity we give should be with prudent consideration and bountiful cheerfulness, without any grudging. It is the most advantageous method in which we can dispose of our wealth. It honours God, and entails his gracious favour and rich recompense, secures the prayers of the relieved, and thus brings lasting profit and honour to ourselves. It is a mercy for our world that God gives some ability and inclination to give, and others a heart, in a Christian manner, to acknowledge their kindness; but unspeakably gracious that God thus loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son for and to sinful men!

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1. But that I may return to my self-vindication, I, who am reviled by them as an abject, pusillanimous creature of low stature and despicable appearance when present, but very assuming, magisterial, and severe when absent, beseech you, by all the kindness and love that appeared in Christ our Saviour, and, after the example of Christ, with all that lenity, calmness, and benevolence of temper wherewith his Spirit hath endowed me, to regard my admonition. 2. And I beg that such care may be taken to rectify every disorder, that I may not, contrary to my own inclination, be obliged to rebuke and censure some of you, when I come to you, for their maliciously reproaching me and my faithful brethren, as if we conducted our ministrations by carnal views or motives. 3. For though we still remain in our mortal bodies, and are liable to the common infirmities and troubles of this life, yet we can appeal to God that, in the manner of our struggling against manifold opposition, we do not act under the influence of sinful principles, nor by carnal means, nor to carnal ends, but with simplicity and godly sincerity, by his grace. 4. For in our difficult and dangerous work of preaching the gospel, we make use of no external force; of nothing furnished by carnal wisdom, or calculated to promote carnal interests; but merely of the truths of God, dispensed with light, zeal, and courage, in their native simplicity, which, by the almighty influence of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are made powerful to demolish the strongest forts of sin, Satan, and the world; all the ignorance, pride, prejudice, unbelief, sensuality, stubbornness, and enmity which lie fortified in the hearts of men against God; 5. And to confute and overthrow the corrupt reasonings of Jews and Gentiles, and every proud conceit of self-wisdom, righteousness, and strength; and all the power and policy of earth and hell which stand in opposition to the light, grace, and holiness of the gospel, and the discoveries of the divine perfections made therein; and to reduce all the powers, faculties, and actions of men to a cheerful and obedient subjection to the authority and commands of the Lord Jesus Christ. 6. Yea, I am furnished with apostolic powers to censure or even inflict temporal punishments on such as shall obstinately continue to contemn and vilify my office—whenever I see how many of you return to your obedience to Christ and to his authority in me.—7. But if my inveterate opposers conceive disadvantageously of me, from the meanness of my aspect, my poverty, or the humility of my behaviour, will ye also inconsiderately judge of me by outward appearances? If even the chief of your factious preachers be confident that he is a member and minister of Christ, and owned by him as such, let him, for his humiliation and caution, seriously remember that I am every whit as much Christ's, and as much owned by him, as he can pretend to be. 8. For if in my present circumstances I should even boast of the apostolic power with which the Lord Jesus hath intrusted me for promoting your conversion, faith, holiness, order, and

CHAPTER XI.

1 Out of his jealousy over the Corinthians, who seemed to make more account of the false apostles than of him, he entereth into a forced commendation of himself, 5 of his equality with the chief apostles, 7 of his preaching the gospel to them freely, and without any charge, 13 showing that he was not inferior to those deceitful workers in any legal prerogative, 23 and in the service of Christ, and in all kind of sufferings for his ministry, far superior.

WOULD to God<sup>1</sup> ye could <sup>a</sup>bear with me a little in my folly: and indeed bear<sup>2</sup> with me.

2 For I am <sup>b</sup>jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have <sup>c</sup>espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I <sup>d</sup>fear, lest by any means, <sup>e</sup>as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, <sup>f</sup>so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity<sup>3</sup> that is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh preacheth <sup>h</sup>another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him.

5 For I suppose I <sup>i</sup>was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles.

4 The meaning is not that Paul was not a master of the Greek language, or that he did not speak it with idiomatic accuracy and force. The Greek word translated rude signifies 'one not professionally trained.' Paul was not an orator systematically trained in the Greek schools. He disclaims mere rhetorical power in this place, just as he did in the beginning of his first epistle.—P.

in knowledge; but we have been thoroughly made manifest among you in all things.

7 Have I committed an offence <sup>k</sup>in abasing myself<sup>5</sup> that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?

8 I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service.

9 And when I was present with you, and wanted, I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me, the brethren which came from Macedonia supplied: and in all things I have kept myself from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep myself.

10 As<sup>n</sup> the truth of Christ is in me,<sup>6</sup> no man shall stop me of this boasting<sup>7</sup> in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? <sup>o</sup>because I love you not? <sup>p</sup>God knoweth.

12 But what I do, that I will do,<sup>8</sup> that<sup>q</sup> I may cut off occasion from them which desire occasion; that wherein they glory, they may be found even as we.

13 For such are <sup>r</sup>false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

repentance, I should have no reason of being ashamed as though I had gone beyond either truth or decency. 9. But I will not say what I might lest it should be pretended that I am desirous of terrifying my opposers by my letters, while I dare to say nothing face to face. 10. For they have already reproachfully derided me as if I wrote letters in a high, solemn, authoritative, and threatening strain, while when personally present I appear most weak and contemptible, and my discourse quite despicable, without either elegance of language or a graceful utterance. 11. But let these mockers know that if God bring me again among you, they shall find me every whit as severe in the practical execution of my apostolic authority against impenitent offenders as I appeared in my letters. 12. While they think me quite unworthy to be compared with themselves, my conscience restrains me from imitating them in self-conceit, and in groundless and indecent boasting to the decrying of everybody else.—And indeed it but manifests their weakness and folly to form their opinion of themselves from their own fancied excellencies, or comparison with some of their own party. 13. For my part, I abhor assuming to myself the honour of other men's labours, or of doing that which God never appointed or directed me to in my ministrations; but merely mention what God really did by me in the exercise of my apostolic office, all along from Jerusalem to your city. 14. I did not, like your factious preachers, hasten from place to place where I might best gain honour or wealth to myself; but came all along gradually, and was the first who preached the gospel to you. 15. And as I abhor boasting of anything done by others, or done out of the line prescribed me by Providence, I hope that when your faith, which has been shaken by these false teachers, is re-established and strengthened, I shall be encouraged and assisted by you to preach the gospel in places where it has not been heard. 16. I mean to preach in the countries to the north and west of you, for the conversion of the heathens to Christ, without encroaching on the province of any other, or taking the honour of any man's labours. 17. But, after all, instead of boasting of our own accomplishments, labours, and success, or of claiming the honour of other men's works, let every one of us glory in the Lord Jesus, by whose gracious direction and influence we act for the honour of God or good of souls. 18. For it is not he who has a high conceit, and boasts of his own abilities and performances, but he whom the Lord honours with his gifts, graces, presence, and blessing, and hears witness to as sincere, humble, and faithful in his work, that is now or shall at the last day be approved by God.

REFLECTIONS.—The best of men, and especially ministers, may expect malignant traducers. But with meekness and condescension they should endeavour to gain the unreasonably prejudiced, and yet with authority vindicate the honour of Christ in rebuking the obstinate. And though they have their natural infirmities and passions, they must never be governed by carnal principles or aims in their work.—Alas! how fixed is the power of sin and Satan in men's hearts! and yet the gospel, attended by the influence of God's Spirit, gloriously triumphs over all opposition, and wins men to Christ. It is necessary that ministers sometimes vindicate their conduct, and show the integrity, self-consistency, and order of it. But as ever either ministers or Christians would be approved by God, they must beware of pride, and glory only in Christ.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1. But as a little glorying in opposition to these pretended apostles among you is necessary for my vindication, and for enabling you to silence their proud boasts, I beg and hope that ye will bear with me a little in this, which without necessity would be extremely foolish. 2. For with a holy and religious fear I am deeply concerned lest any of you be drawn off from Christ and his gospel, or even a due regard to me his apostle, and the instrument by which ye were savingly turned and united to the Lord Jesus Christ; and that I may have the honour and pleasure of presenting you to him as a pure, uncorrupted, and faithful spouse. 3. But considering the artifices of your new teachers, I am afraid lest the devil, who, in the form of a serpent, beguiled our first mother Eve, to the general ruining of mankind, should pervert you in your principles, tempers, and practices, and turn you aside from the purity of doctrine and sincerity of manners becoming persons vitally united to Christ. 4. Indeed if any of your new preachers exhibit to you a more excellent Saviour than I and Apollos preached to you—or if by their ministrations ye have received a more excellent spirit, and more eminent gifts and graces, than ye did by ours—or if their gospel be more worthy of God, or more answerable to the condition of fallen men, than what we preached—ye may very justly own them, and prefer them to me. 5. It is nevertheless certain that I am not inferior to any of Christ's inspired apostles—no not to Peter, of whom some of you boast. 6. And though my style be plain and simple, and my pronunciation less graceful than that of Apollos, my knowledge of the mysteries of the gospel, which I received by revelation from Christ, is inferior to none; the efficacy of which, with respect to all the principal points of faith and obedience, ye experienced with such power of the Holy Ghost when I was among you, that I need only appeal to your consciences to attest it. 7. Is it reasonable to upbraid me that, to show I had no mercenary views upon you rich people of Corinth, but merely desired that you might be enriched with the blessings of salvation, I humbled myself to labour for my daily bread, and preached to you for nothing? 8. Nay, in pursuit of my studious concern for your spiritual advantage, I took gifts from other churches, that, for your greater edification, I might minister freely to you. 9. Accordingly I never complained to you when I was straitened for the necessities of life, nor became less diligent; for whatever I needed more than what I gained by my own labour, my friends in Macedonia supplied; and as I have preached, so I hope I shall ever preach the gospel to you without putting you to any charge. 10. And this conduct I am so far from being ashamed of, that I reckon it my honour; and I solemnly resolve that neither reproaches nor kindnesses shall stop my continuance in it among you Christians of Achaia. 11. And I can appeal to God that this refusing to take subsistence from you is not because I have taken some disgust at you. 12. But I have preached and will preach the gospel freely to you, to stop the reproachful revilings of your false teachers, and to induce them to oppress you as little as I do. 13. For whatever they pretend, they are not real apostles of Jesus Christ, sent and commissioned by him, but falsely claim that high character, and deceitfully corrupt the Word of God, and serve themselves instead of him. 14. And it is no wonder they labour to impose upon you by specious appearances, when even the devil, their master, often pretends holiness and kindness in order to perpetrate the greatest mischiefs. 15. It is therefore nothing strange or impracticable that his servants and emissaries should dissemble their true character, as if they were singularly holy, and taught men the way of righteousness to eternal life. But God will quickly judge and reward them according to their hypocrisy and wickedness. 16. Considering therefore how these pretenders to apostleship set off themselves to the deceiving of multitudes, I hope that ye will indulge me in a little necessary though foolish commendation of myself. 17. I do not pretend any express command or example of Christ in it; but their selfish boasting of themselves, and mean insinuations against me and what I preach, oblige me to cry up myself in their foolish manner. 18. For if they boast of descent from Abraham, or of circumcision and other external privileges, I have as much ground to boast on these heads as any 14 And no marvel: for *Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; †whose end shall be according to their works.

16 I say again, "Let no man think me a fool; if otherwise, yet as a fool receive<sup>9</sup> me, that I may boast myself a little.

17 That which I speak, "I speak it not after the Lord, but as it were †foolishly, in this confidence of boasting.

18 Seeing<sup>y</sup> that many glory after the flesh, I will glory also.

19 For ye suffer fools gladly, †seeing ye your-selves are wise.

20 For ye suffer, †if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take of you, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face.

21 I speak as concerning reproach, as though we had been <sup>b</sup>weak. Howbeit whereinsoever any is bold, (I speak foolishly,) †I am bold also.

22 Are they Hebrews? †so am I. Are they Israelites? so am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? so am I.<sup>1</sup> of them. 19. And I hope that ye, who are so wise in your own conceits, and can bear so much with their false and foolish boasting, will bear a little with me. 20. For if they attempt tyrannically to enslave your consciences, and subtly to make a prey of your substance, and exalting themselves insolently contemn and abuse you, ye can patiently put up with it all. 21. Let them then invidiously paint me out as a despicable wretch, incapable of apostolic powers and privileges, as they will, I dare boldly compare myself with them in everything worth mentioning. 22. In external Jewish honours, I am a Jew who speak the Hebrew language—a descendant of Jacob, the prevalent wrestler with God, by his beloved Benjamin—a descendant of Abraham, the friend of God, to whom and to his seed he promised to be a God in all generations. 23. In the honours of the gospel church I am a minister of Christ, a distinguished apostle, who have laboured, and suffered more scourging, imprisonment, and imminent dangers of death, in his cause, than any or all of them. 24, 25. Five times the enraged Jews have scourged me to the utmost degree of severity allowed by their law. At three different times I have been whipped according to the Roman law. At Lystra I was, at the Jews' instigation, stoned by the mob till I was accounted dead. Thrice I have been cast away at sea, and once tossed about a whole day and a night by the waves, lying on a part of the wreck. 26. Great and many have been my labours in preaching the gospel, and great my dangers from floods or rivers in the way.—Often have I been in danger of falling among robbers who infest the road; of being murdered by Jews or heathens; and of being killed by outrageous mobs in cities.—In travelling through desolate places I have been often in danger of being attacked by ruffians, or devoured by wild beasts, or of falling into other mischiefs.—At other times I have been in danger of perishing by storms, or of being taken by pirates; or have been insulted, abused, and nearly betrayed, through the treachery of Jews or pretended Christians. 27. In prosecuting my ministerial work, I have undergone the most fatiguing and painful services by day, and been deprived of proper rest and sleep by night. At other times I have been distressed for want of necessary food, and have spent much time in religious fasting. I have been often exposed to the severities of the weather, without sufficient clothing to keep me warm. 28. And besides all these bodily troubles, my anxious and careful concern for the spiritual welfare of all the Christian churches, and my grief on account of their corruptions or calamities, have not a little distressed my mind. 29. For there is not a member of the church, to my knowledge, afflicted in body or mind, or weak in gifts, graces, or attainments, whom I do not sympathize with and endeavour to relieve. There is none in danger of falling from the faith, hope, or holiness of the gospel, but my heart burns with grief, godly jealousy, and holy zeal to encourage, confirm, and recover him. 30. But since my enemies make a kind of boasting necessary for me in the present circumstances, I rather choose to glory in the hardships, persecutions, and reproaches which I have met with to humble me, and afford Jesus Christ an opportunity to manifest his strength in my weakness, than in my high privileges, and the great things which he has done by me. 31. And however ignorant ye be of many of my fore-mentioned trials, or even ready to suspect them as incredible, I dare appeal to the ever-blessed God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, whose I am, and whom I serve, and who has graciously supported me under and carried me through them, that I have said nothing but the truth. 32, 33. Nay, I had not long begun to preach the gospel when the governor whom Aretas king of Arabia had placed in Damascus resolved to gratify the Jews in murdering me, and shut up and strictly guarded the city to prevent my escape.—But, by the directing providence of God, my Christian friends let me down from one of their houses, which was on the wall, and thus I got out of their hands, to preach the gospel in other places.

Ver. 1. In my folly. Not in absolute folly, but in what was charged as folly—that self-commendation which necessarily accompanied self-vindication. C.

Ver. 4. That is, if any one coming in the name of an apostle reveal another Saviour, minister another spirit, and preach another gospel, there is then good reason for bearing not with him, the spurious apostle, but with me in my jealous and urgent anxiety to win you back to the simplicity of the truth as it is in Jesus. C.

Ver. 5. The assertion of this verse can never be reconciled with the imaginary supremacy of Peter and his successors in Rome. C.

Ver. 12. That they may be found (to subsist by their own labour, or by the contributions of their foreign friends) even as we. C.

Ver. 13. For such (as reveal another Saviour, &c.; see note ver. 4) are false apostles, deceitful workers; or, rather, 'such deceitful workers are false apostles.' C.

Ver. 14. Satan himself is transformed, &c. Of which transformation the most obvious example occurs in the temptation (Mat. iv.), where, by direct quotation of Scripture—the very testimony of the Holy Spirit, merely a little mutilated to suit his purpose—Satan attempted to seduce our Lord into rebellion, while appearing to inculcate an act of implicit faith. C.

Ver. 17. I speak it not after the Lord—'in whom there is neither Greek nor Jew,' Col. 3. 11; but I speak it as a Jew, boasting in the flesh (see ver. 18, 22), that by asserting my equality or superiority in all that the Jews value I may show them the vanity of boasting in things that 'I count but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord.' C.

Ver. 19. This is neither 'irony nor ridicule,' as some inconsiderately represent it, but a plain declaration of fact—as if he had said, 'your superior wisdom enables you to bear with much that, in ceremonial observance or austerity of discipline, has in the sight of men the appearance of religion, yet in the sight of God is nevertheless foolishness.' C.

Ver. 24. Forty stripes save one. This was the utmost severity the Jewish law permitted, De. 25. 3; and a salutary lesson of humanity for Christian legislators and rulers when corporal punishment is deemed advisable or necessary. C.

Ver. 25. Beaten with rods. This seems to refer to punishment by the Roman fasces—a bundle of rods borne by the lictors before the consuls.—Thrice I suffered shipwreck. These all seem to have been different from that recorded Ac. xxvii., for that was posterior to the date of this epistle. C.

Ver. 26. Waters. Rather, 'rivers,' as distinguished from 'the sea.' C.

Ver. 28. Besides those things that are without—that is, besides those troubles already mentioned, which are external to my apostolic office. C.

Ver. 31. This, from its solemnity, evidently appears to refer to the catalogue of sufferings that precedes, not to the single danger that follows. C.

Ver. 33. There is no discrepancy between this account and that of Ac. 9. 20-25; the one account is merely more full than the other—ver. 32, 33 being a supplementary note to the foregoing enumeration. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With great care should ministers endeavour to prevent their hearers being seduced by Satan or his instruments, and to promote their spiritual espousals to Christ. To gain those ends, what temporal claims ought they not to forego! And what labours, dangers, and sufferings ought they not cheerfully to undergo! The devil and his preachers will turn themselves into diversified shapes in order to deceive men. And it is common for seducers to boast of their piety, learning, labours, and sufferings; yet how insignificant are all when compared with those of a faithful minister of Christ!—Seducers will always love the world in some shape or other, and embrace all opportunities of engrossing its riches, honours, or powers; and the world in return will always love its own.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. In ordinary cases it is indeed neither proper nor profitable to boast of my privileges and enjoyments; but since your judaizing teachers have by their reproaches forced me to it, I shall further add that I have as much ground to boast of immediate intercourse with God as any of them can

SUPHANIEH—DAMASCUS. [II. CORINTHIANS, xi:22.]—In the twenty-second verse of the eleventh chapter of Second Corinthians, St. Paul claims to be a Hebrew of Hebrews, and an Israelite of the Israelites, and of the seed of Abraham, in as complete a sense as any descendant of the father of the faithful. When Abraham came up from Ur, of the Chaldees, Damascus was one of the cities which he passed. While this city has undergone great changes in the human elements of its history, it has changed very little in its natural features. Plane trees, poplars and black walnuts grew here when Abraham passed this way. On the banks of the Abana, which flowed through the city then as it flows now, plane trees, poplars and black walnuts continue to grow. Damascus is the dream of the Syrian Desert.

PPLACE IN THE WALL OF DAMASCUS WHERE ST. PAUL WAS LET DOWN. [II. CORINTHIANS, xi : 32, 33.]—"In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king kept the city of the Damascenes with a garrison, desirous to apprehend me : And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands," In the above view we have a picture of the place in the wall of Damascus where St. Paul was let down. This is in the southeastern portion of the wall. We can contemplate the effect upon human civilization had St. Paul's enemies succeeded in assassinating him. More than all other men to him is due the credit of laying the foundation of Christian theology and the Christian church. The visit of Paul to Damascus does more to call travelers to this city than all other things in its history.

the king kept the city of the Damascenes with a garrison, desirous to apprehend me:

33 And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands.

CHAPTER XII.

1 For commending of his apostleship, though he might glory of his wonderful revelations, 9 yet he rather chooseth to glory of his infirmities, 11 blaming them for forcing him to this vain boasting. 14 He promiseth to come to them again: but yet altogether in the affection of a father, 20 although he feareth he shall to his grief find many offenders, and public disorders there.

IT is not <sup>a</sup>expedient for me doubtless to glory. I will come to <sup>b</sup>visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 I<sup>c</sup> knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body,<sup>1</sup> I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven.<sup>2</sup>

3 And I knew such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;)

4 How that he was caught up into <sup>d</sup>paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful<sup>3</sup> for a man to utter.

5 Of such an one will I glory: <sup>e</sup>yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.

6 For <sup>f</sup>though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a <sup>h</sup>thorn in the flesh,<sup>4</sup> the messenger of Satan<sup>5</sup> to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.

8 For this thing <sup>i</sup>I besought the Lord thrice,<sup>6</sup> that it might depart from me.

pretend to. 2, 3. I knew a believer in and united to Christ who, about fourteen years ago, was in a vision rapt up to the highest heaven in his apprehensions; but whether his soul was separated from his body, or whether his whole man, soul and body, was carried up, I cannot determine, but must leave the matter to God. 4. But certain I am that this man had such clear manifestations of the glory of God, such clear, intelligible, and transporting revelations of heavenly things, as no words on earth can justly express. 5. Of this man, as so highly dignified, carried out of himself, and favoured with the immediate discoveries of God's love, I may and will speak honourably; but I will not speak a boasting word concerning myself, except it be of what plainly marks my weakness, and exposes me to the contempt of others, and thus tends to keep me humble, even while, for promoting the ends of my ministry, I seem to vaunt of them. 6. I could mention many other things, in consistence with good sense and strict truth; but I will say no more, either of my sufferings or revelations, lest some of my friends should be tempted to look upon me as more than a man, or greater than I really am. 7. Nay, lest through the unwatchfulness, vanity, and treachery of my own heart, I should pride myself in these extraordinary revelations, as if I were better than other men, the Lord very graciously permitted Satan and his instruments to afflict me in a very painful and debasing manner. 8. Almost overwhelmed with this trouble, I frequently and earnestly besought the Lord by solemn prayer that, if consistent with his will, he would rebuke and restrain the tempter, and deliver me from his violent assaults. 9. And though he did not grant me the very thing which I submissively asked, yet he graciously answered my requests, more to his own honour and my real advantage, by assuring me that his favour and love, and the gracious aids and comforts which he would afford me, would be every way sufficient and effectual to support me under and carry me through, and bring me off with great improvement, victory, and triumph; and that his almighty power should be illustriously manifested in these effects, in proportion to my utter inability to produce them.—In the assured faith of this promise, I will rather rejoice and glory in reproaches, persecutions, and troubles, than be discouraged by, ashamed, or afraid of them,—that the all-sufficient power and grace of Jesus Christ, to whom I have committed myself, may surround, cover, and defend me, sanctify my tribulations, and enable me to bear them with all-becoming submission, patience, humility, and hope, and at last bring me out of them more than a conqueror. 10. In this view, I take pleasure in all the afflictions which come upon me for professing and preaching Christ and his gospel; for when by these means I most see and feel my own weakness, and appear most contemptible in the eyes of others, I find myself most sensibly strengthened in the Lord, by the influences of his Spirit in my inner man, courageously to bear up under and obtain glorious victories over them.—11. In mentioning so many things with an air of self-commendation, I have with reluctance, for the glory of God, the credit of the gospel, and your establishment and edification, done what in other circumstances would have been weak and foolish; but your culpable neglect to do my character justice, according to what ye had experienced under my ministrations, and your taking part with those who reproached me, made it necessary: for I appeal to your consciences if,

9 And he said unto me, <sup>j</sup>My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will <sup>k</sup>I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

10 Therefore<sup>7</sup> I take pleasure in <sup>l</sup>infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake: for <sup>m</sup>when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I<sup>o</sup> am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for <sup>n</sup>in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing.

12 Truly<sup>8</sup> the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 For<sup>9</sup> what is it wherein you were <sup>8</sup>inferior to other churches, except it be that I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.<sup>9</sup>

14 Behold, <sup>s</sup>the third time I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you: for I seek not yours, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 And <sup>t</sup>I will very gladly spend and be spent for you;<sup>1</sup> though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.

16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being <sup>u</sup>crafty, I caught you with guile.<sup>2</sup>

17 Did<sup>v</sup> I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 I<sup>x</sup> desired Titus, and with him I sent a brother. Did Titus make a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?

i Concerning the precise nature of this 'thorn in the flesh' conjectures are numerous, and, because they are but conjectures, useless and vain. All that can be certainly known is this: it was some bodily affliction, either from disease within or persecution without,—especially from 'his kinsmen according to the flesh.' What precisely it was, 'God knoweth.' But, though 'a thorn,' it was 'given'—sent as a gift, not as a punishment—an humbling memento to counteract the possibility of spiritual pride.—C.

were present, the second time; and being absent now I write to them which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, I will not spare:

3 Since ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you.<sup>4</sup>

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak in him,<sup>5</sup> but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.<sup>6</sup>

5 Examine<sup>h</sup> yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?<sup>7</sup>

6 But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now I pray to God that ye do no evil; not that we should appear approved,<sup>8</sup> but that ye should do that which is honest, though we be as reprobates.

8 For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

though I were to be slighted, reproached, and abused by you in proportion to my kindness to you. 16. Your new preachers indeed pretend that though I took nothing from you myself, I hereby craftily decoyed you to give more liberally to my partners. 17. But I dare appeal to yourselves if there is the least evidence that I ever made the least advantage of you for myself by means of any of my brethren, whom I sent to promote your comfort, rectify your disorders, and excite your charity to the poor saints in Judea. 18. I appeal to you if Titus, or the respectable brother who attended him, took anything either for their own labours or my subsistence, and if we did not all act upon the same disinterested plan to promote your spiritual welfare. 19. Nay, as a believer in and apostle of Christ, I can appeal to the all-seeing God that I did not send them to make any apology for me or my faithful brethren, or to excuse the delay of my visiting you; but that all my conduct towards you has been intended to support my apostolic authority, in order that my ministrations might the more effectually promote your edification. 20, 21. For, as I formerly hinted, I am much afraid that when I shall pay you my intended visit I shall not find you so orderly and obedient to the authority of Christ in me as I wish, and that I shall be obliged to exercise my power in a manner more severe than ye will relish. I fear lest through hearkening to seducers there should be among you fierce and uncharitable disputes, envious tempers and talkers, warm and angry passions, carnal contentions, and revilings of others behind their backs, proud, haughty boastings, and disdainful insults, and a tumultuous carriage towards one another; and lest my gracious God and Master should call me not to glory of you, or rejoice in beholding your faith and order, but to shame and grief, on account of Christ being so much dishonoured, and my labours so much lost among you,—and sharply to censure such as I find continuing impenitent in their scandalous sins.

REFLECTIONS.—Great are the changes which take place in the comforts and troubles of saints. God often lifts them up and casts them down again. The most ravishing manifestations are succeeded by sharp and fearful trials and temptations; but all is necessary to keep down pride and animate fervent prayer. And though God does not always answer the prayers of his people as they wish, he always does it in that manner which is best calculated to promote their spiritual benefit. If he secure to us his own powerful presence and grace, we may well glory in troubles, as giving him opportunities to perform his promises. And it is delightful to see the greatest ministers the most humble, and behaving in the most prudent and self-denying manner, in order to turn souls to Christ. But how shameful is it for people to break the hearts of their faithful and successful ministers by reproaches and impenitent continuance in scandalous enormities! And with deep impressions of the dishonour done to God and hurt to souls ought the unruly to be warned, and offenders to be censured.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1, 2. As I am now for the third time preparing to visit you, ye may be assured that if I find any obstinately scandalous notwithstanding my former admonitions, I will immediately proceed against them with high and solemn censures: 3. And that in vindication of my sacred office, and for the honour of Christ, of whose commission to me, and speaking and acting in me, some of you insolently demand a proof; yet whose working by me to youward has not been weak, but with mighty power and energy, in your actual conversion, and in the gifts and graces bestowed on you, and miracles wrought among you, and in inflicting sickness and death on some of your disorderly walkers. 4. For though, through the weakness of his manhood and voluntary subjection to death, he was crucified, as if merely a weak and mortal creature, yet by virtue of his own and his Father's divine power he rose from the dead, and now lives in his exalted state, to exercise all authority in heaven and on earth: even so we, his faithful servants, are, in the opinion of our adversaries, weak and contemptible, and are exposed to manifold sufferings for his sake; but, connected with him, we show, by the same power, in remarkable effects, that the life of our risen Redeemer animates us in our vigorous actings towards you, and that in due time we shall live and reign with him in glory. 5. Instead therefore of censuring and reproaching me and my faithful brethren, Timotheus, Sosthenes, or others, seriously and thoroughly examine your own hearts and practices, by the standard and touchstone of God's Word, whether, from a principle of faith awakened in your hearts by the Holy Ghost, ye really believe in Christ, and live on him through the word of the gospel. What! amidst all your pretences to knowledge, and all your contentions and disputes, are ye strangers to what has passed between God and your own souls, and to your state, condition, and behaviour before him? Know ye not that if Jesus Christ, the only Saviour, does not dwell in your hearts by faith, with powerful influence and dominion, ye are but mere hypocrites, and very unfit for the approbation of God? 6. But whatever ye may prove upon trial, I hope that, by the power and gracious influence of Christ, ye shall have full evidence of his owning us as true believers and faithful ministers of the gospel. 7. Yea, my earnest prayer to God for you is, that ye may be preserved and reclaimed from every evil way. For I would gladly be without the opportunity of exercising my apostolic powers against scandalous persons, even though some should thence take occasion to suspect me as disapproved of God and destitute of such power. 8. I have neither inclination nor authority to do anything but what is right and fit, nor to do anything against them that walk orderly according to the gospel, any more than against the gospel itself; but am only authorized and inclined to reclaim backsliders, and to encourage and promote your soundness in the faith, and integrity in heart and life. 9. Gladly would I, by your repentance and reformation, be entirely restrained from severe censures; happy should I be were ye so strong in faith and holiness as to need no reproof, and that all things in the state of your church, the temper of your soul, and course of your life, were brought to the highest perfection. 10. It is with these kind views that I have wrote you these warnings, cautions, advices, and encouragements, that when I come I may not be obliged to make use of any awful methods in exercising that authority which Christ has given me for establishing and increasing the faith, comfort, holiness, and order of his church, and not for the hurt, discouragement, or final destruction of any member of it. 11, 12. But to conclude—may all prosperity and happiness attend you, whom I esteem as my brethren in Christ! Rectify everything amiss or disjointed in your church, heart, or practice. Encourage yourselves and one another in the Lord your God; and labour to do whatever is truly excellent, that ye may be filled with the joys of faith and of a good conscience. Unite heartily in your views of gospel truths, in your zeal to promote their influence, and in a Christian temper one towards another. Study what makes for peace and brotherly love, that there may be no more party strifes and angry contentions and schisms among you; and in an attention to these things ye may expect that God, the fountain, author, giver, commander, and supreme approver of all love and peace, will take up his gracious and complacential abode with you, manifest his special favour to you, and bestow his best blessings upon you—in token of which, let even your common salutations be truly chaste, holy, and affectionate. 13. To set you an example of mutual kindness and respect, all the holy brethren here send you their most affectionate salutations, wishing above all things that your souls may prosper. 14. And for this end, as well as to mark my apostolic authority and testify my respect to you, I conclude with solemnly blessing you in the name of the Lord. May the full favour, gracious presence, and influence of our Lord Jesus Christ, through whose merits and mediation all spiritual and eternal blessings are procured and conveyed to men—may the self-moving love of God the Father, which is the original source of all spiritual blessings—and may the richest communications of the Holy Ghost, by whom these blessings are graciously applied, and we are brought into blessed fellowship with the Father and ¶ The second epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi, a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas.

Son, and into a participation of their love and grace in all their happy effects—be continually with and abound towards you as a church, and every individual member of it!

REFLECTIONS.—Professed Christians are often more given to censure and reproach their neighbours, and especially their ministers, than to try and know themselves. But very important is the certain knowledge whether we be really united to and hold fellowship with Jesus Christ by faith; and it is shameful for us to live ignorant of it. It is very desirable that offending church-members should be reclaimed by gentle methods. But if they continue obstinate they must be sharply dealt with to bring them to repentance. What an honour is it for ministers to employ all their power, care, and labour to promote the edification and comfort of souls! It is only for this purpose they received their authority and commission from Christ; and if he approve them they need care the less what men think of them. If in conformity to him, and for his sake, they be exposed to suffering and death, it is enough if he support and crown them with a share in his glory. Happy is the church whose members, under the gracious influence of a reconciled God, live together in unity of sentiment and affection, and who hold distinct and intimate communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. And transcendently wonderful is it, and ravishingly sweet, that these divine Persons should so harmoniously concur in unceasing mercy and grace to mean and sinful men.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

'The most remarkable circumstance in this epistle is the confidence of the apostle in the goodness of his cause, and in the power of God to bear him out in it.' He was evidently opposed by a powerful faction who rejected his apostolic authority. Yet with the utmost intrepidity he appeals to the miraculous works he had done in presence of his opponents, and to the gifts he had instrumentally conferred on the people, whom his opponents (whom he boldly denominates false apostles and agents of Satan) were endeavouring to turn against him.

It cannot be denied that divisions in the churches of Christ are deeply to be deplored; for they are the evidence at once both of Satan's working and success. Still out of every evil the Lord can extract good: and here there is furnished an incontestable evidence both of the apostle's integrity and divine inspiration. Had there been anything hollow or rotten in the principles of the apostle—had there been any imposture to be detected or exposed—this conflict of parties, this terrible assault of the apostle, must have provoked his adversaries to the disclosure. Nothing, however, of the kind appears. His miraculous powers could not be denied; and, upon that head at least, opposition was hushed into silence. He visited Corinth again as he had originally purposed, Ac. 20. 2, 3; was received as an apostle; remained for several months; and had the contributions for the saints at Jerusalem brought to him from the surrounding districts, Ro. 15. 26. Of the false teachers no more is heard—their memory and their name are blotted out; and this epistle abides a monument of apostolic integrity and courage, and an additional and irresistible evidence that Christianity is no 'cunningly devised fable.' C.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

Galatia was a province in the north-east of Lesser Asia. Here, as in many other places, the apostles had scarcely planted the gospel of Christ, when some judaizing teachers contended that the Gentile converts should be circumcised, as a token of their obligation to fulfil the whole law of Moses, in order to their justification before God; and as Paul's instructions greatly thwarted their schemes, they insinuated that he had no apostolic authority. To confute these pretensions is the scope of this epistle. Here Paul (1) Represents his apostolic authority as in nothing inferior to that of Peter, or any other apostle, ch. i.; 2. 1-15. (2) Reprehends the Galatians for their sudden apostasy from the faith of the gospel, and establishes the doctrine of justification by faith in the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, ch. 1. 6-9; 2. 16-21; iii. iv. (3) Directs to the right improvement of the doctrines and privileges of gospel grace, ch. v. vi.

[The Galatians or Gallo-Grecians were the descendants of a colony of Gauls or Celts, who migrated from their own country under Brennius, and after a series of disasters, obtained possession of a considerable district of Western Asia, to which they gave the name of Galatia. They are represented by historians as a tall, athletic, and warlike people, who went nearly naked, and used for arms merely a buckler and sword; and who, by the impetuosity of their attack, were nearly irresistible. Before their conversion to Christianity, their religion was so corrupt and superstitious, that they are said to have offered human sacrifices of the prisoners taken in war. They spoke the Greek language in common with all the inhabitants of Western Asia; but, according to Jerome, retained their original Celtic also down to the fifth century.

Among this semi-barbarous people it appears that Paul planted, not one, but several churches, Ac. 16. 6; 18. 23; and being now a prisoner at Rome, ch. 6. 17, some false apostles had, after his departure, seduced his converts from the simplicity of the gospel, and persuaded them to conjoin with it the observance of the Jewish ceremonies as necessary to salvation, ch. 6. 13; that justification was a compound of faith and works, ch. 3. 2; 4. 21; that Paul was no authorized apostle, and (as may be inferred from ch.2. 9) in no wise to be compared with others who had seen Christ in the flesh. Under these circumstances the apostle wrote this epistle, wherein he labours to counteract these 'deceitful workers' and their false doctrines, and to bring the Galatians back to the perception and acknowledgment of the simplicity of the gospel. This he endeavours to effect, (1) By asserting the authority of his apostleship and the truth of the gospel he had preached, ch. i.; ii. to ver. 15. (2) By illustrating and vindicating the true doctrine of justification by faith, proving the temporary character of the Levitical institutions and of the entire legal dispensation, to the end of ch. iv. (3) By instructing his converts how to use their Christian liberty, and pressing upon them the necessity of exterminating the lusts of the flesh, and of cultivating the fruit of the Spirit. C.

Justification by faith alone is the theme of this epistle. With a logical acuteness, an appropriateness of illustration, and a power of application, unequalled even in the Bible, is this grand theme set forth. All sources of knowledge, all forms of authority,—direct divine teaching, inspiration, personal experience, the testimony of Christ, the statements of the Old Testament,—are all employed to elucidate and enforce the doctrine of justification by faith. This epistle is a model of controversial theology. Truth is defended and error exposed with equal clearness and decision. There is no tampering with incipient heresy. There is no attempt to throw the cloak of Christian charity over a false principle. There is no effort to cultivate fraternal union at the expense of fundamental truth. Purity of faith is its pervading maxim. Until this is established and recognized, there can be no real unity or peace in a church.

ARCH OF CONSTANTINE. The epistle to the Galatians was written from Rome, and we give as an illustration here the Arch of Constantine, the best preserved of all the arches in Rome. It was erected in 312 A. D., to commemorate the conversion of Constantine to christianity. The greater part of the ornamentation and the sculpture were brought from a building of Trajan, which stood at the entrance to Trajan's Forum.

There are various inscriptions and representations on the arch. One represents Trajan's entry into Rome, another represents Trajan causing poor children to be educated, another represents Trajan addressing the army, and in another Trajan is depicted as condemning a barbarian. So we have here the purpose of the Emperor Constantine embodied and ornamented by heathen sculpture.

There is much in the character and history of the Galli, or Celts, to illustrate incidental statements and allusions in this epistle. A few points may be noticed as a guide to the thoughtful reader. (1) A leading characteristic of the Celts was impressibility, combined with quickness of apprehension, and promptitude, approaching to rashness, in act. An illustration is given in ch. 4. 14. (2) Fickleness and constant tendency to change was another marked feature, which explains ch. 1. 16; 3. 1, &c. (3) The Celts were quarrelsome, and vindictive when passion was roused. See ch. 5. 15. (4) They were likewise proud and vainglorious. See ch. 6. 5. (5) They were superstitious to an extreme: and their superstition was shown in undue veneration for ceremonies and shrines. See ch. 3. 3. The apostle has left in various incidental notices and sketches a tolerably distinct portrait of the people to whom he addressed this epistle. The thoughtful reader will see that he is here dealing with a type of character as unlike as possible to the polished but dissolute Greek, or the calm philosophic Roman, or the dreamy speculative Oriental. Paul knew them thoroughly. He noted their national characteristics, their faults and passions, with an eye quickened by divine intuition; and he took full advantage of this knowledge in reclaiming and re-establishing in the faith an erring church. 13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that be-

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1. Whatever your false teachers suggest to the contrary, I avow myself an inspired messenger of Jesus Christ, appointed to plant Christian churches in the world—who indeed have received my commission by the instrumentality of no man, but immediately from Christ himself, and by the express commandment of God, who raised him up from the dead, in testimony of his having completely met the demands of the broken law, and brought in an everlasting righteousness for the justification of all that believe in him. 2, 3. And with the hearty consent of my fellow-preachers and Christians here, I send this admonitory letter to your lately planted and yet sadly degenerated Christian assemblies in Galatia—earnestly wishing that the riches of his free, undeserved, and forfeited favour may be extended to you, and all the blessings of spiritual peace and prosperity be bestowed upon you from God the Father, the first mover in the whole method of our redemption, and from Jesus Christ, the only Mediator between God and men, and the purchaser and dispenser of all the benefits of grace and glory to us: 4. Who in his infinite condescension and love freely surrendered his soul and body, as personally united to his divine nature, to be an atoning sacrifice for our sins, who deserved nothing but eternal destruction—that by his righteousness as the means, and by his love as the real cause, he might pluck us as brands out of the burning, and rescue us from the men, the vanities, sins, and tribulations of this evil world, and from all the dangerous snares and depraved customs of this present age, and even from the now exceedingly corrupted Jewish constitution, and in due time transport us to the heavenly state—and all according to the eternal compassion and good will of God our reconciled Father in him, who, in Christ, loves and deals with us as his children: 5. To whom be all possible and highly exalted honour, glory, and praise, through all the ages of time or eternity, for his unparalleled work of redemption, in which infinite wisdom, power, justice, holiness, mercy, and truth shine forth with the most united and endearing lustre. —6. When I reflect on the delightful and transcendent glory of this wonderful salvation, and on its suitability, high importance, and absolute necessity to lost sinners, I cannot but be amazed and pained to hear that some of you who but so lately were instructed in the truths of the gospel, and seemed to receive them into your hearts, should be already carried away in your sentiments, affections, and practice, not only from me, who was instrumental in calling you to the fellowship of the gospel, but from God and Christ, who by me called you to partake of all the gracious benefits of redemption which are discovered and freely offered in the gospel; and that even to quite another system of doctrine, representing the justification of sinners as, at least in part, by the works of the law: 7. Which indeed really is no gospel, no glad tidings of acceptance and salvation at all, as it represents them obtainable only upon impracticable and impossible terms; but your judaizing teachers, who are verily a plague to you, set themselves to overturn that blessed gospel of which Jesus Christ is the author, subject, and end, and to transform it into a new covenant of works, in which our own obedience must be the necessary condition of justification and eternal life; and they even pretend that Peter and other apostles are of their mind. 8. But I am bold to aver, that if any apostle, or even an angel from heaven, could preach to you any other system of doctrine relative to the salvation of sinful men contrary to or even different from that which I, by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, delivered to you, he should, as an accursed person, be rejected of God, and devoted to eternal destruction. 9. I deliberately and solemnly repeat it, as a matter of infinite importance and infallible certainty, that if any man or angel preach any other system of doctrine concerning the salvation of sinful men than what ye, when I was among you, professed to receive in faith and love, he is to be disdained and rejected as one abandoned by God, and richly deserving of excommunication—nay, of everlasting ruin. 10. Can you imagine that, after being so long converted and employed in the ministry, and suffering so many things for Christ, my great aim is to persuade people to embrace the doctrines of men rather than the gospel of God, or to ingratiate myself with the Jewish zealots, or any others of mankind? No; I abhor the thought. Did I, as in the days of my unregeneracy, seek the favour of men, and study to serve their corrupt humours or designs, I had never enlisted in the service of Christ, nor could I be his faithful servant, as I profess and labour to be. 11. And by all the signs of apostleship I manifest that the gospel of men's salvation, through the glorious sacrifice of Christ, which I have constantly preached, is neither formed according to the natural taste or tempers of men, nor originates from their authority, contrivance, or dictates, nor tends to promote their carnal honours or interests. 12. For I neither received my knowledge of it, nor my commission to preach it, by the instrumentality of apostles, or any other mere men, but by immediate revelation from Jesus Christ, God-man, some time after his exaltation to his heavenly kingdom. 13, 14. For ye cannot but have heard that I was once a furious zealot for the Jewish manner of worship, and outrageously persecuted the Christians, and compelled them to renounce their Lord, under pain of imprisonment, banishment, or death; and that, having an uncommon knowledge of the Jewish rites and ceremonies, I observed them with the greatest strictness, and with uncommon zeal propagated them everywhere. 15, 16. It cannot therefore be supposed that without some extraordinary call and influence I should abandon my darling and deep-rooted sentiments, tempers, and manner of life to embrace Christ and the gospel, in direct opposition thereto, and to all my secular interests; but when God, who of his infinite love, without regard to any foreseen natural goodness, had set me apart to his service before I was born, did, by an extraordinary miraculous appearance and voice from heaven, and by a powerful and efficacious illumination on my heart, make to me a clear and full discovery of Jesus Christ, his dear Son, in all the glory of his person, offices, relations, righteousness, and grace—that I might know and embrace him for the salvation of my own soul, and preach him to Gentiles as well as Jews—I did not stand to consult the yond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it;

14 And<sup>t</sup> profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals<sup>3</sup> in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased God,<sup>4</sup> who "separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, 16 To<sup>v</sup> reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; "immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:

17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia,<sup>5</sup> and returned again unto Damascus.

18 Then after three years I went up<sup>6</sup> to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 But "other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother.

inclinations, ease, or comfort of my outward man, nor the dictates of human policy, relative to honour, interest, reproach, or danger; nor did I advise with any mortal about my duty, which was so plainly prescribed me by God. 17. Neither did I so much as go up to Jerusalem to receive further instructions or authority from them that had been called to the apostleship before me; but, fully satisfied with the instructions and commission which I had immediately received from Christ, I began to preach the gospel at Damascus in Syria, where I had been converted and called. Thence I went into the adjacent parts of Arabia and preached it, where no apostles had ever been, and where I had no opportunity of conversing with them; and thence I returned back to Damascus. 18, 19. Three years after my conversion I took a journey to Jerusalem, not to receive any further instruction or commission, but merely to make a brotherly visit to Peter, that great apostle of the Jewish converts, that we might confer together of what the Lord had done by our ministrations. And being introduced by Barnabas, I was readily received as a faithful minister of Christ, and abode with him about fifteen days, without seeing any other of the apostles except James the Less, a kinsman of our Lord according to the flesh. Thus I received no instruction or commission from the apostolic college there. 20. And as these hints are of great importance for vindicating my doctrine and authority, which have been traduced among you, I solemnly appeal to God himself, who knows all things, and to whom I must give a final account, that all that I have said is strictly true. 21. Returning from Jerusalem, I travelled northward into the provinces of Syria and Cilicia, attended by some brethren from Jerusalem as far as Cesarea, from whence I was sent to Tarsus, in Cilicia, my native city. 22. But all this time I remained personally unknown to most of the Christian assemblies in Judea which had joined together in the faith and fellowship of the gospel before me, and so could receive neither instruction nor commission from them. 23. All that they knew concerning me was, that Saul, the furious persecutor of Christians, had become a noted preacher of that very gospel which he had before laboured to suppress, and a helper of that very faith for which he had endeavoured to destroy others; 24. Which made them heartily praise and thank God for his marvellous grace to me the chief of sinners, and for the rich advantages that accrued to the church by my remarkable conversion.

Ver. 6. Removed from him. By 'him that called you,' the apostle most probably means himself as the instrument of their calling, as the words ἐν χάριτι should be translated 'by' or 'through' rather than 'into the grace of Christ.' See Scott, Kappe, and Winer. C.

Ver. 10. Am I now endeavouring to gain the favour of men, or approve myself to God? 'or do I seek to please men,' by adapting the gospel to their prejudices? C.

Ver. 13. The conversion of Paul the persecutor, who not only forsook kindred, country, office, emolument, and honour, but who forsook also his habits, and, as it were, his very nature, for Christ, forms an incontrovertible proof of his sincerity, and of the divine origin and sovereign power of the gospel. C.

Ver. 16. In me is to be preferred to either 'to me' or 'by me,' and describes the illumination of the apostle's understanding by him in whom 'was light,' and the formation of Christ in his affections, the power of life and 'hope of glory,' Col. 1. 27. C.

Ver. 17. I went into Arabia. This journey is not mentioned by Luke in the Acts, because he did not accompany Paul.—Note. The object of the apostle in this narrative is to show that he did not receive the gospel from men, but directly from Jesus Christ himself. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With entire satisfaction may we receive the gospel delivered by the apostles, since they received it immediately from Christ. And delightfully, jointly, and equally all church authority and spiritual blessings proceed from him and his Father. Infinitely important and beneficial is his death for us; and his resurrection clearly manifests the acceptableness and efficacy of it. And what deliverance from sin, Satan, and an evil world, and what grace and peace, may we not pray and hope for through it? It is detestable and dangerous to apostatize from or pervert the gospel of Christ. And it is no wonder that the doctrine of men's justification by their own works never reforms the world, but increases unto more ungodliness, when it has the curse of God lying on it and its preachers. Ministers have need to be faithful in declaring the truths of God without regard to any carnal consideration. And no man nor minister can at once please Christ and the world—serve God and mammon. Astonishing are the effects of God's grace on the hearts of sinners. Gloriously it enlightens the ignorant, attracts the perverse, subdues the obstinately furious, and renders Jesus' inveterate enemies his loving friends and faithful servants. And it is a great comfort distinctly to perceive and feel its operations, and for Christians to hear of its going forth conquering and to conquer.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. Then fourteen years after, I and Barnabas went up to Jerusalem, taking Titus along with us. 2. But I went up not to be instructed or confirmed in my office, but as a deputy from the church of Antioch to the synod which met at Jerusalem, to determine whether the circumcision of the believing Gentiles was necessary to their salvation or not. And this I did by special direction from God, to maintain the truth and purity of the gospel as he had revealed it to me; and was so far from receiving the gospel from the apostles there, that I explained it to them as I had preached it among the Gentiles, and declared what success it had obtained. This I at first did, only in a more private manner, to the principal preachers there assembled, lest if I had given a full and plain account of it to the Christians in general the judaizing party might have raised such furious clamours against me as to have rendered my earnest ministrations less acceptable even to the Gentiles. 3. But to manifest how steadfastly I adhered to my principles relative to the freedom of the gospel state, and how far I was from giving the least countenance to the supposed necessity of observing the law of Moses as a condition of justification before God, Titus, who was a Gentile, was admitted as a minister of Christ and a member of the 20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, "before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards<sup>a</sup> I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia;

22 And was unknown by face unto "the churches of Judea which were "in Christ:

23 But they had heard only, "That he which persecuted us in times past, now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

24 And they "glorified God in me.

CHAPTER II.

1 He sheweth when he went up again to Jerusalem, and for what purpose: 3 and that Titus was not circumcised: 11 and that he resisted Peter, and told him the reason, 14 why he and others, being Jews, do believe in Christ to be justified by faith, and not by works: 20 and that they live not in sin, who are so justified.

THEN, "fourteen years after, I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

2 And I went up "by revelation, and communicated unto them that gospel which "I preach synod without ever being circumcised. 4. I even took this uncircumcised minister of Christ along with me to the synod that I might bear a public testimony against the doctrine of the pharisaical preachers who, coming from Judea, had insinuated themselves among the converts at Antioch, that, under colour of Christian brethren, they might have the better opportunity of narrowly inspecting our principles and conduct, and of cavilling at that holy freedom from ceremonies which Christ has given us under the gospel, and of imposing circumcision and other abolished ceremonies on the church.—5. This conduct of theirs, being not a mere weakness or honestly-conceived prejudice, but a wicked attempt to reduce believers under the covenant of works, and to rob the Gentiles of the true gospel of Christ, I and Barnabas refused to yield to them in the least. 6. And let Peter, James, and John be as great as they will, it is certain that their call, powers, and success were wholly owing to the loving pleasure and free grace of God as well as mine, and that in my conference with them I received no correction or instruction touching either my doctrine or conduct. 7. But from the account which I and Barnabas gave them, they with great joy observed that I had been called by Christ to preach the gospel to the uncircumcised Gentiles, even as Peter preached it to the circumcised Jews. 8. For it appeared that manifold miraculous and gracious operations had manifested and confirmed my apostolic mission to the Gentiles, as well as his to the Jews. 9. And when Peter, James, and John, whom I, as well as mine enemies, account principal supporters, maintainers, and defenders of the church and truths of the gospel, saw how God had graciously qualified, called, and owned me in my ministrations, they, in the most express and affectionate manner, acknowledged me and Barnabas as their fellow-apostles, and agreed that we should principally preach the gospel to the Gentiles, while they did the same to the Jews. 10. The only request they made was, that we should stir up the Gentiles to make charitable contributions for the relief of the poor Jewish Christians, which was a work so compassionate, laudable, and necessary, that, though they had not mentioned it, my natural affection to my countrymen, my impartial love to Christ's indigent members, and my looking on the Gentiles as debtors to the Jews, from whom they received the gospel, had made me forward to engage in it. 11. But when Peter, some time after, came to Antioch in Syria, where the first noted church of Gentile Christians was formed, and from which I and Barnabas had been sent to the synod at Jerusalem, for a determination concerning the necessity of circumcising the Gentile converts, and had received an answer in the negative, I, knowing myself to be in no respect his inferior in office, sharply and publicly rebuked him for his offensively acting contrary to the principles which he had avowed in the synod. 12. For though at his first coming to Antioch he, according to his gospel liberty, freely conversed, and familiarly ate and drank with the believing Gentiles, yet when some on the north to Edom on the south. Petra was its capital. The northern section of it, to which in all probability Paul went, included Bashan, and was at that period densely peopled. Christianity took deep root there at a very early age, which perhaps was largely owing to the labours of Paul.—P.

among the Gentiles; but privately<sup>1</sup> to them which were of reputation, <sup>d</sup>lest by any means I should run, or had run, in vain.

3 But<sup>e</sup> neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled<sup>2</sup> to be circumcised:<sup>3</sup>

4 And <sup>g</sup>that because of false brethren un-awares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To<sup>h</sup> whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel<sup>k</sup> might continue with you.

6 But of those <sup>i</sup>who seemed to be somewhat, whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: <sup>j</sup>God accepteth no man's person: for they who seemed to be somewhat, in conference added nothing to me.

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel<sup>k</sup> of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the <sup>l</sup>gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

8 (For he that <sup>m</sup>wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was <sup>n</sup>mighty in me toward the Gentiles;)

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be <sup>p</sup>pillars, perceived <sup>q</sup>the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; <sup>r</sup>that we judaizing zealots came thither from Jerusalem, he, for fear of offending them, withdrew from the Gentile converts, and declined all familiar converse with them; 13. Which when the Jewish Christians at Antioch, who had almost got over all their prejudices against the uncircumcised believers, observed, misled by his example, they also refrained from their wonted familiarity with them; and even Barnabas, a noted Christian, and my fellow-apostle of the Gentiles, was, contrary to his own judgment, infected with their dissimulation. 14. But when I saw their conduct quite contrary to the simplicity and godly sincerity of the Christian religion, and the true spirit and design of the gospel doctrine of justification by Christ alone, filled with holy indignation, I solemnly interrogated Peter, as their ringleader, before the whole church,—how he, who, though a Jew, made no scruple on some occasions to converse familiarly with the Gentiles, and conform himself to their innocent customs, without any regard to the ceremonial law, could, in consistence with Christian sincerity, at this time, through a slavish fear of the Jews, practically seduce the Gentile believers into religious observance of the abolished Jewish ceremonies?—15. And how contrary was this to the truth of the gospel;—for Peter, Barnabas, I, and other Christians, who were by birth Jews, devoted to God, and who were trained up under the obligations of the Mosaic law, and not Gentiles, strangers to the law, and looked upon as profligate sinners. 16. Being fully convinced that no man can be acquitted from condemnation, and accepted by God as righteous, on account of his own sufferings or obedience to the covenant of works, but only on account of a living implicit faith in Christ, who gave himself a sacrifice to be received by faith alone;—have therefore believed in Christ as our only Saviour, that through our receiving and resting on him alone for our salvation we might be justified unto eternal life: and indeed the strict and extensive demands of God's law, and the manifold defects found in the best, render it absolutely impossible for any man, whether Jew or Gentile, to be justified by any personal righteousness of his own. 17. Now if, while we thus seek justification through the blessed sacrifice of Christ, received by faith alone, we continue under the law as accursed sinners, or live as persons under the power of sin, we practically represent Christ and his method of salvation as leaving us under the curse and dominion of sin, and as encouraging us to practise wickedness. 18. Or if, after so earnestly renouncing the righteousness of the law for justification before God, I should again attempt to establish the method of justification by the works of the law in my doctrine or practice, I could not but grievously offend God, frustrate my own believing in Christ, and reduce myself to a state of guilt and condemnation. 19. And nothing can be more contrary to my inclination; for, by my knowledge and experience of the spirituality, extent, and strictness of the law as a covenant of works, I am deeply convinced of my own sinfulness, and have lost all hope and desire to be justified by my own righteousness; and, by the grace of God, I am fully delivered from the broken law, that I might live in a state of favour with God, through the sacrifice of his Son; and that, being divorced from the covenant of works as my first husband, and married to Christ, I might live upon better principles, to better ends, and under new obligations, in all holiness and righteousness according to the law, and to the glory of God, as my reconciled Father in Christ. 20. For having in Jesus Christ a Saviour who satisfied all the demands of this broken law of works, I am thereby dead <sup>o</sup>to it, and it to me. Nevertheless, I am brought into a state of justification unto life, and thereby enabled to bring forth living fruits of righteousness; yet this life of justification and sanctification is not owing to anything in me, but only to Christ, who, by virtue of my living faith in him, lives in me, as a Head of righteousness and sanctifying influence: and the life of pardon, acceptance, and holiness which I live in the body, is not by the works of the law, nor after the dictates of carnal lusts, but only by that faith which carries me out of myself in every respect to the eternal Son of God, relying entirely on him, and deriving all vital influence from him—who, in the greatness of his endearing, unparalleled, and distinguishing mercy and grace, without any desert in me, loved me, and freely gave up himself to obey the law and fulfill justice in my stead, that he might redeem me from sin and all the fearful consequences of it, and bring me to eternal life. 21. In this conduct I adhere closely to my evangelical principles, not daring ungratefully to despise or reject the gospel of grace, the love of Christ, or the free favour of God, in giving him for and to us, as they do who plead for justification by the works of the law; for if righteousness, entitling to eternal life, come by our obedience to the law in any form, then Christ's should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only<sup>s</sup> they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do.

11 But<sup>t</sup> when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For<sup>u</sup> before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he <sup>v</sup>withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And<sup>w</sup> the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; inasmuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they <sup>y</sup>walked not uprightly, according to the truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter <sup>z</sup>before them all, <sup>a</sup>If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 We<sup>b</sup> who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles, 16 Knowing<sup>c</sup> that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; even <sup>d</sup>we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: <sup>e</sup>for obedience and sufferings were not necessary for our justification, and must be insufficient for it.

Ver. 1. Titus, an uncircumcised Gentile, was a practical proof, even at Jerusalem, that Paul did not consider circumcision necessary for heathen converts to Christianity, ver. 3. C.

Ver. 2. Lest, &c. Lest any might hereafter say that Paul had never communicated to the apostles that gospel which he asserted Jesus had revealed to him. C.

Ver. 4. The apostle would not persuade him to be circumcised, as an act of sinless compliance with the prejudices of the false brethren, lest that compliance might be construed into an act of necessity, and afterwards become a yoke of bondage to the Christian church. C.

Ver. 6. 'But from those who were of repute what did I receive? (whatsoever in rank they were, it detracts nothing from me: God accepteth no man's mere person), even they who were of repute added nothing to me.' C.

Ver. 10. The poor Christians in Judea, who, on their conversion, were forsaken by their friends, refused the privileges of trade, and thrown as outcasts upon the world, without any means of support—an occurrence still frequent with Jewish converts, even in the midst of Christian churches. C.

Ver. 14. Truth of the gospel throughout this epistle signifies that master truth which declares that, as by the death of Christ the types of the law were fulfilled, so believers are made free from the yoke of their observance. C.

Ver. 16. For by the works of the law, &c. This declaration may be derived from Ps. 143. 2: 'Enter not into judgment with thy servant; for in thy sight shall no man living be justified.' C.

Ver. 17. If we are still found 'sinners' unjustified, and in search of justification compelled to return to the Mosaic institutes, then does it not follow that Christ, instead of being the minister of righteousness and salvation, is the minister of sin and condemnation?—a dilemma from which the judaizing teachers could not escape but by either a rejection or open assertion of justification by faith in Jesus. C.

Ver. 19. I through the law (as a schoolmaster conducting me to Christ) am dead to the law; for when Christ received me I reckoned myself dead with him under the law, and so I escaped from the law, and was received under grace, Ro. 6. 6, 8, 11, 14. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With remarkable prudence must the gospel, even in its light and glory, be gradually and seasonably communicated. Persons of note in the church must sometimes be first addressed, that it may have the easier access into the prejudiced minds of others. Ministers have need to adhere firmly to their evangelical principles, and boldly to support the true dignity of their office. And it is comely when they highly esteem and dearly love one another, and are ready to assist each other, and when they are careful for the poor, even such as are prejudiced against them. Alas! how easily the best and greatest of men may be decoyed from their religious integrity if left to themselves! And dangerous are the examples of eminent saints when they take a wrong turn. No man's character, however great, can justly exempt him from

by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

17 But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.<sup>5</sup>

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.

3 Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?<sup>3</sup>

4 Have ye suffered so many<sup>4</sup> things in vain? if it be yet in vain.

5 He therefore that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

6 Even as Abraham believed God, and it was accounted<sup>5</sup> to him for righteousness.<sup>6</sup>

7 Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.

8 And the scripture, foreseeing<sup>7</sup> that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law<sup>8</sup> are under the curse: for it is written, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

11 But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, "The just shall live by faith.

12 And the law is not of faith:<sup>9</sup> but, "The man that doeth them shall live in them.

13 Christ<sup>v</sup> hath redeemed<sup>1</sup> us from the curse of the law,<sup>2</sup> being made a curse<sup>3</sup> for us: for it is written, "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

14 That<sup>y</sup> the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ: that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.

15 Brethren, "I speak after the manner of men; though it be but a man's covenant,<sup>4</sup> yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.

16 Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.

17 And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect.

18 For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise.

deserved public rebuke. With care, earnestness, and accuracy ought ministers to contend for the pure doctrine of justification through Christ's blessed righteousness, without the works of the law. And happy are they who understand it in their own experience! What a heaven upon earth it is to view ourselves delivered from the law as a covenant, and to find Christ's crucifixion for us and dwelling in us issuing in a life of holiness and fellowship with God through faith! But infinitely dangerous and criminal is it to apostatize from the truth, or to attempt to render the redeeming grace of God and death of Christ unprofitable and useless.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. Ye thoughtless and inconsiderate Galatians, let me, with the most tender compassion to your souls, and holy zeal for the purity of the gospel, ask you, By what artful insinuations and stratagems has Satan, or your false teachers, his instruments, so far infatuated and decoyed you from your adherence to the gospel doctrine of justification through active faith in Jesus Christ, who, in his painful sufferings and death, has been set before you in his ordinances in the most plain, distinct, and affecting manner? 2. Were ye made partakers of the Holy Ghost, either in his miraculous gifts or gracious inhabitation and influences, by the ministration of the law, and by your obedience to it? Or was it not by hearing and embracing the doctrine of faith in Christ alone for justification and complete salvation? 3. Since then ye certainly received him before many of you so much as heard of the law of Moses, and had set out in your Christian course under his light and direction, and in the exercise of faith in him for your justifying righteousness, how absurd is it to attempt finishing your religion in seeking justification by sinful performances, carnal observances, or anything correspondent to your carnal wisdom or pride! 4. After ye have suffered so much persecution and reproach from your Jewish neighbours for professing the doctrine of justification through his righteousness alone, without any obedience of yours to the law, ceremonial or moral, will ye, by your apostasy, prove all your professions and sufferings perfectly absurd and groundless? 5. Did Christ, by my ministrations, communicate to you your gifts and graces, or work the miracles attesting my mission and doctrine, through my preaching, or your performing the works of the law, in order to your justification before God? Or were they not rather conferred upon you by means of your hearing and embracing the doctrine by faith in Christ?—And was not this God's testimony that your justification is in no respect owing to the works of the law, but only to Christ and his righteousness? 6. Even as Abraham, that eminent pattern of believers, gave credit to and trusted upon God's promise of the Messiah; and what he believed and apprehended in the promised Saviour was imparted to him for his justifying righteousness. 7. Know therefore that all true believers in Christ, according to the promise, are, in a spiritual sense, the children of Abraham, whom God owns and accepts as such, that they may be blessed together with him. 8. And to manifest that there is but one method of justification of sinners to eternal life, the Holy Ghost, who knew the whole purpose of God relative to the Gentiles, intimated to Abraham, long before either circumcision or any Mosaic ceremonies were instituted, that, through the obedience and sufferings of his seed, the Messiah, all nations, Jews or Gentiles, should be justified and blessed with all spiritual blessings. 9. From whence it is evident that all men, of whatever nation or rank they be, who are partakers of a true and lively faith in Christ, and seek justification on his account, are blessed with the same blessings, and on the same foundation of active righteousness, as Abraham, that celebrated believer and friend of God. 10. And that this cannot be on account of their personal obedience to the law is evident; for all men being sinners, as many of them as remain under the covenant of works, and seek justification by their own righteousness, are fixed under the curse of God, who has expressly declared every person of mankind by law condemned to everlasting punishment who does not personally, universally, perfectly, and perpetually, in thought, word, and deed, bear, observe, and perform whatever is demanded by his law. 11. And that no man can be justified by his own personal obedience to this law as a covenant is further evident from God's 19 Wherefore then serveth the law? <sup>h</sup>it was added because of transgressions,<sup>5</sup> till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained<sup>6</sup> by<sup>i</sup> angels in the hand of a<sup>j</sup> mediator.

20 Now<sup>k</sup> a mediator is not a mediator of one; but God is one.

21 Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: <sup>u</sup>for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.

22 But the scripture hath <sup>7</sup>concluded <sup>o</sup>all under sin, <sup>p</sup>that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

23 But<sup>a</sup> before faith<sup>8</sup> came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law was <sup>r</sup>our schoolmaster<sup>9</sup> to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, <sup>s</sup>we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 For<sup>t</sup> ye are all the children of God by faith<sup>1</sup> in Christ Jesus.

28 There<sup>v</sup> is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

29 And<sup>x</sup> if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

CHAPTER IV.

1 We were under the law till Christ came, as the heir is under his guardian till he be of age. 5 But Christ freed us from the law: 7 therefore we are servants no longer to it. 14 He remembereth their good-will to him, and his to them, 22 and sheweth that we are the sons of Abraham by the free woman.

NOW I say, That the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all;

2 But is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, <sup>a</sup>when we were children, were in bondage under the elements<sup>1</sup> of the world:

4 But when <sup>b</sup>the fulness of the time was come, <sup>c</sup>God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law,

5 To<sup>d</sup> redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.

appointment of another method of justification, in his declaring that the man who becomes righteous by faith enters and may continue in a state of life and salvation, and by means of faith exercised in Christ, lives in favour, and fellowship with, and conformity to God here and hereafter. 12. Now it is certain that the method of justification prescribed by the law is not of faith, but by personal, perfect, and perpetual obedience to the whole of its demands. 13. Therefore, according to these terms, none can procure himself justification, or even freedom from the condemnatory sentence of the law; but Christ, in his infinite love, has redeemed us out of the hands of offended justice, and from all the condemnation and misery incurred by our sins, by taking them upon himself, and bearing them in our stead, particularly while he hung on the cross as a most loving sufferer, forsaken almost, and devoted to death. 14. And this he did that, instead of the curse being executed upon us according to our deserts, we Gentiles might in him be blessed with the free justification and other spiritual blessings conferred upon and promised to Abraham and his spiritual seed; and, as well as the Jews, receive, through faith in him, a plentiful communication of the Holy Ghost, as the pledge, token, and earnest of our eternal inheritance. 15. To illustrate this point by a common and familiar similitude, we know, from the very nature of a covenant of promise like that made with Abraham, that, if it be but an engagement made by short-sighted and changeable men, yet, if it be duly ratified, signed, and sealed, none can either disannul, alter, or add to it. 16. Now to Abraham and to his spiritual seed were the promises made by the all-knowing and unchangeable God, who cannot lie; and to show that these were directed to one particular sort of seed, God did not use therein the term SEEDS, as if all his posterity, natural and spiritual, had been meant; but SEED, by which he signified his spiritual seed, and primarily Christ their saving Head. 17. Now this covenant being made with and relating to Christ, to be fulfilled and confirmed in his incarnation, obedience, and death, and being confirmed by the repeated promise and oath of an unchangeable God, and by the seal of circumcision,—the law of Moses, which was not given till about 430 years after, cannot, in any consistency with the wisdom or faithfulness of God, make void or disannul it, in order to introduce another method of justification and salvation. 18. And this plainly manifests that a right or title to eternal life cannot be obtained by the works of the law, but only by faith in Christ; for if a title to the heavenly inheritance typified by the promised earthly Canaan could be obtained by our obedience to the law, it could not be the matter of a free promise—grace and work; being in this view quite eversive the one of the other; but it is manifest that God gave it to Abraham and his seed, not through the law, but by an absolutely gracious and free promise, through the righteousness of faith, that it might be free to all men. 19. And the law of Moses was annexed to this gracious promise, not to bring in a new method of justification, but to be a mean of restraining sin and convincing men of their pollution and danger, and of their absolute need of full justification in Christ, in whom Jews and Gentiles should be united, and to cause them to look for him, the promised one, as the end of the law, for righteousness to every one that believeth. Nor was even this law, like the promise to Abraham and his seed, given immediately by God himself, but was conveyed by the ministry of angels into the hand of Moses, as the typical mediator of the Israelites, to represent their absolute need of the promised Messiah, effectually to mediate between God and them. 20. Now, a mediator is one that interposes between two parties, and does not merely transact for any one, to the exclusion of the other; but God, who delivered the law to the Israelites, and who is immutably faithful to his promise, was one party; and Gentiles as well as Jews were concerned in that antecedent, free, and absolute promise made to Abraham. 21. It is therefore absolutely impossible that the law of Moses could, in the intention of God, be opposite to the design of the gospel promise made to Abraham and his spiritual seed, or that ever God should intend to justify men by the one as well as by the other; for if any law had or could have been given by obedience to which men in their fallen condition could have been entitled to eternal life, it is certain God would have spared his Son, that singularly eminent seed of Abraham, and righteousness for justification to eternal life should have consisted in men's own conformity to that law. 22. But, on the contrary, the writings of the Old Testament have, in their general tenor, pronounced all men, Jews and Gentiles, sinners shut up under a sentence of condemnation, and absolutely incapable of making atonement for their past offences, or rendering themselves acceptable to God by any obedience of their own—that none having any ground to seek or expect justification by their own works, the free promise of pardon, life, and salvation, through faith in Christ, might be graciously fulfilled in every believer. 23. But as we are naturally strangers and enemies to this important truth, and it was anciently intimated in an obscure manner, so, till Christ, the object of faith, and the doctrine of salvation through faith in him, came to be fully manifested in the gospel, and till we were brought to believe in him, even those of us who were educated in the Jewish religion, though preserved from heathenish idolatries by the law of Moses, were held, like captives and prisoners, under its commanding, condemning, and convincing power, and shut up on every side, that we might be ready to receive Christ as revealed in the gospel with more abundant manifestation of light and grace. 24. We ought therefore to consider the moral law as a covenant, and the ceremonial law as a schoolmaster, intended to direct, lead, and scourge us to Jesus Christ, that, renouncing all dependence on our own good works for justification, we might seek it alone through faith in his meritorious obedience and sacrifice. 25. But now under the gospel, when Christ, the object of faith, and the doctrine of justification by faith in him, are fully manifested, and we are brought to believe in him, we are no longer, like children, in a state of ignorance, weakness, and servile fear, under either the moral law as a covenant or the ceremonial dispensation. 26. But all of you, Gentiles as well as Jews, who have believed in Christ alone for justification, according to the tenor of the gospel, are rendered adult children of God, and are admitted to higher privileges in the anointed Saviour, who has come in the flesh, and obtained eternal redemption for you. 27. For as many of you as have been baptized in the name, and into the faith, profession, and obedience of Jesus Christ, and, answerable to the signification of baptism, have been made partakers of spiritual union and communion with him, have not only in profession, but by faith, put on Jesus Christ as the Lord your righteousness and sanctification; and hence have no need of circumcision to recommend you to God's favour, or manifest you his children. 28. There is now, under the gospel, no distinction of nations, ranks, or sexes, with respect to spiritual privileges or blessings; but by the enlargement of God's grace all true believers are equally members of Christ's mystical body, and he is equally their Head for all spiritual and saving purposes. Circumcision therefore, which was peculiar to males, and distinguished Jews from Gentiles, is of no further use in the church. 29. And if ye be really united to Christ, and interested in and devoted to him, ye, though uncircumcised, are the true children of Abraham, and heirs of all new-covenant blessings, according to the promise made to him and his spiritual seed.

Ver. 20. God is one. Winer affirms that there are 250 different interpretations of this difficult passage. But in this difficulty the volume of revelation resembles the volume of nature, having many things plain to the weakest capacity, but many things 'hard to be understood,' even by the most learned. The passage may be paraphrased as follows:—A mediator in a covenant is not the representative of one party only. Moses therefore, as mediator of the Sinai covenant, did not represent Israel alone, but God also; for as there was a mediator, God must have been one of the parties to that covenant. But as God was one of the parties, and as he changeth not, therefore the covenant of doing and living made at Sinai could not, at the end of 430 years after,

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the folly of turning away from Jesus Christ and the doctrine of his blessed righteousness to rest on our own works for justification before God; and especially after clear manifestation of him and his truth, and suffering for his sake. It renders him and all his fulness, yea, all our profession of him, or sufferings on his account, altogether unprofitable; and is contrary to the oracles of God, and the observation and experience of every believer. But infinite is the mercy that when God's law condemned us to eternal misery for the very least transgression, Jesus obeyed the law in our stead, that we might receive the promise and inheritance of eternal life; and that, while the law excludes us from life on account of our sin, the gospel brings relief, and offers to us an almighty and all-sufficient Saviour. The law now cannot hinder, but is subservient to our redemption through him. Yea, Moses and all the ancient types now appear figures of our incarnate Redeemer; and we Gentiles, as well as Jews, have an equal access to him and to his church, and to all the blessings of the new kingdom. Be not slack, my soul, to possess what the Lord thy God giveth thee.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1, 2. Now, to illustrate the preference of the gospel dispensation to the legal by a familiar similitude, ye know that the heir of a rich estate, during his minority, has no more liberty of enjoying the inheritance to which he has a full right than if he were a mere servant, but is under the direction and discipline of masters to educate him, and the government of guardians and tutors, and of trustees, to manage his estate for him, that he may be fitted to enter upon the possession of it at the time appointed by his father. 3. In like manner we who are Jewish believers, during the infant state of the legal dispensation, were, like minors, subjected to its servile and obscure discipline, enslaved by its terrors, and tied down to its typical observances, which consisted of dim and obscure resemblances taken from worldly things, and which were in their nature carnal and earthly, little calculated to carry our thoughts, hopes, or affections beyond the things of this world to our spiritual and eternal inheritance. 4. But when the time appointed in his purpose, and marked in his promises and predictions, was arrived—the time when men's degeneracy and wickedness, which were come to the greatest height, and their extensive expectations, rendered the superaboundings of mercy and a reformation peculiarly necessary—God, in the riches of his infinite wisdom and grace, sent forth his own eternal pre-existent Son by special manifestation into our world, that he might, in a marvellous manner, assume our nature into a personal union with his own divine nature, being conceived and born of the Virgin Mary; and that he, as God-man, might be placed under the precept of the law as a covenant of works, which we had broken, and under its curse and penalty, which we had incurred; 5. That, by his obedience and sufferings, he might fully meet all its demands, and perfectly deliver us from it as a covenant in its commanding and condemning power, and even from the rigorous ceremonial dispensation, and render us abundant partakers of all the privileges of the gospel state which pertain to the adult children of God.—6. And in consequence of his graciously loving you, Jews or Gentiles, he calls you to a state of sonship, and sends forth his Holy Spirit, which proceeds from and is communicated by his Son, to dwell in your souls with far richer abundance of gifts and graces than were ordinarily vouchsafed under the Mosaic dispensation, to form you into the temper of his children, and bear witness with your spirits that ye are such; and to give you a humble liberty and familiar boldness in your dealings with himself, and enable you to claim and call upon him, and stand affected towards him, with faith, love, desire, delight, reverence, filial obedience, and holy confidence in his care and kindness, and with zeal for his honour as your heavenly Father. 7. Whoever of you therefore truly believe in Christ are no longer, as servants, kept at a distance, and subjected to severe discipline; but, as children of riper age, are entered on a large possession of your inheritance, as an earnest of your quickly enjoying the full riches and glory thereof; yea, are heirs of the all-sufficient God himself as your portion, in the right, and for the sake of, and together with Jesus Christ, who, as his eternal Son, is heir of all things.—Why then should ye abandon these high and sure privileges to seek happiness by your works of obedience to the law as a covenant? 8-11. Since God, in his infinite mercy, pitied you while ye were plunged in the grossest ignorance and most shocking idolatries, slavishly worshipping stocks and stones, or other creatures real or imaginary, even the most base or abominable, instead of the true God, and by the light and power of his gospel found you out, brought you to the knowledge of himself through Jesus Christ, owned you as his, and rendered you accepted in the Beloved, what must be your infatuation and ingratitude if ye turn from this light and grace of the gospel, and all its holy and delightful liberties and honours, to a state of servile subjection to the dark hints and severe injunctions of the Mosaic law, which are utterly insufficient to make your peace with God, purge your conscience from guilt, secure you from wrath, procure your acceptance to life, or to enrich you with any spiritual knowledge, grace, or comfort? Has God delivered you from heathen bondage, that ye who had originally no attachment to the Jewish ceremonies should, in contempt of Christ's fulfilment of them, and of the gospel deliverance from them, be fond of such servitude, and be zealous to observe their sacred seasons and other rites, in order to render you accepted with God? Truly, when I think on this your conduct, I am greatly afraid that all the pains I took to acquaint you with and persuade you to embrace the gospel, have been lost upon most of you, and will only serve as an occasion to enhance your guilt and increase your eternal misery. 12. Let me therefore earnestly beseech you, my beloved brethren, by everything serious, solemn, or endearing, to abide in the same sentiments relative to the justification of a sinner before God which I, who was once as proud and obstinate a legalist as any of you, now heartily embrace, and exercise the same affection towards me as I do towards you; for I am ready to bear with you in everything consistent with the truth of the gospel and the welfare of your souls; and indeed I have no reason to disregard you, as ye never injured me; or, if ye did, I have heartily forgiven it. 13, 14. Such, ye know, was my affection to you, that, with the utmost concern for your salvation, under great difficulties, sufferings, reproaches, and much bodily weakness and despicable appearances, I laboured in explaining and recommending to you the gospel of Christ; and such was your affection to me, that, notwithstanding these infirmities and humbling circumstances, ye neither slighted my person nor rejected my doctrine, but entertained and embraced it, and me for its sake, with readiness and pleasure, as an ambassador of Christ, yea, as if I had been a holy angel sent down from heaven, or even the Messiah himself. 15, 16. Where are now those expressions of gratitude to me for my labours; or that happiness ye then professed to have and hope for in my ministrations? For such was your fervour of love and joy, that, if it could have been of any advantage to me, ye would have gladly undergone the most painful severities and inconveniences for my sake. Why then are ye now giving up those very doctrines which ye then so much esteemed? Why are ye become so cool in your affection to me, who still affectionately regard you? I appeal to your consciences if ye ought to hold me as your enemy because I have plainly and faithfully maintained the truth and importance of gospel doctrines, and warned you of your infinite danger in mixing the works of the law with faith in Christ for your justification. 17. As for these your new teachers who pretend so great concern for your welfare, they act with no Christian candour or honour, but seek to decoy you from all regard to me or my apostolic authority, in order that ye may blindly submit to them, and bestow all your esteem, honour, and applause upon them. 18. Remember therefore that it is a very beautiful and laudable temper to be always zealously and uniformly attached to that which is truly worthy and important, and not merely when I am among you. 19. My dear but weak children in the faith, whom I thought I had instrumentally begotten to Christ through the gospel, my soul is still as earnestly concerned that the pure doctrines of the gospel, and Jesus Christ therein, as made of God to you wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption, may be really fixed in your minds and hearts, as ever I was to have you converted from your heathenish ignorance and idolatry. 20. Earnestly I wish that I were but present with you to confirm the truth, to answer your objections and scruples by word of mouth, and to vary my discourse into encouragement or rebuke as the occasions should require; and gladly should I find ground to encourage you; for truly I now greatly suspect that many of you have never been really converted to Christ, and may at length utterly apostatize from his truth and ways. 21. But I earnestly beg that ye who seem so fond of being under the law for justification by your own obedience, would seriously tell me, as before the judgment-seat of Christ, if ever ye have truly considered what the law demands, or what it denounces against the least transgression; or what a wide difference even these writings of Moses mark out between those that seek justification by their own works and those who seek it only by faith in Christ. 22, 23. For there it is recorded that Abraham, the friend of God, had two sons who were typical of different dispensations and different sorts of persons—the one Ishmael, who was born by Hagar his bond-slave, according to the common law of generation, and the other Isaac, by Sarah, his proper wife, in an extraordinary and miraculous manner, at an unexpected time of life, and as an accomplishment of God's free promise.—24, 25. Now these things were intended by God as figurative representations of the miserable condition of those who are under the law as a covenant of works, and of the happiness of those who are under the covenant of grace. Hagar represented the covenant made between God and the Israelites at Sinai, which, by its terrible manner of delivery, strictness of precepts, and severity of curses, tended to beget a servile temper of spirit, and subjected its votaries to everlasting destruction if left without the gospel relief promised to Abraham: and she and her son, cast out from Abraham's family, represented the Jews and other legalists abandoned by God for their unbelief, and left in bondage to Satan and their lusts. 26, 27. But the gospel church of true believers in Christ, which is of a heavenly, original nature and tendency, and highly privileged with the unnumbered liberties and blessings of the new kingdom, and by the oracles and ordinances of which we are born to Christ, was typified by Sarah and her son; for, in allusion to Sarah and Hagar, the prophet Isaiah foretold that the Gentile nations, after being long abandoned by God to heathenism, should at last, with great joy, afford more chil-

CHAPTER V.

1 He moveth them to stand in their liberty, 3 and not to observe circumcision: 13 but rather love, which is the sum of the law. 19 He reckoneth up the works of the flesh, 22 and the fruits of the Spirit, 25 and exhorteth to walk in the Spirit.

STAND fast<sup>a</sup> therefore in the <sup>b</sup>liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and <sup>c</sup>be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that <sup>d</sup>if ye be circumcised,<sup>1</sup> Christ shall profit you nothing.

3 For I <sup>e</sup>testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he <sup>f</sup>is a debtor to do the whole law.

dren to him than the Jewish nation, which in Abraham, and afterwards at Sinai, was solemnly espoused to him as his peculiar people. 28. This being the case, we members of the gospel church are, like Isaac, begotten to God by virtue of the free promises of the gospel, and are entitled to all the blessings of the new kingdom. 29, 30. But as in that age Ishmael, who was born according to the ordinary course of nature, and had only temporal advantages, with his mocking and malignant tongue persecuted Isaac, who was born by an extraordinary operation of the Spirit of God, and was heir of all the promises made to his father, so in this the Jewish zealots and self-justifiers rage at and persecute us who are born of God and heirs of the kingdom of heaven.—And as Hagar and Ishmael were expelled from the family of Abraham, and deprived of the covenant blessings thereof, so shall God expel those zealots and all self-justifiers from his kingdom of grace and glory, and deny them the blessings of his children. 31. Since then we who believe on Christ alone for justification to eternal life are not of those who shall be excluded from the gospel state and heavenly inheritance, or promised blessings of grace and glory, but are heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ, we have nothing to do with the Mosaic servile dispensation, nor are any of its ceremonial observances necessary to our acceptance with God.

Ver. 7. Thou, the liberated heir, mentioned ver. 1. C.

Ver. 9. Weak. How the law of Moses was 'weak' may be seen from He. 7. 18, 19; 10. 1; and how the law of nature, from Romans throughout.—Beggarily. That leave men ever seeking, but never finding justification and peace. C.

Ver. 10. Ye (superstitiously) observe—for so the original signifies—as if the mere act of observance were meritorious. C.

Ver. 12. Be as I am, free from Jewish traditions and prejudices.—For I am as ye are. I live, as touching Jewish observances, just as the Gentiles do.—Ye have not injured me at all. I do not complain of your forgetfulness as if it were any personal injury to me. C.

Ver. 14. By 'temptation in the flesh' some understand persecution; others, some bodily infirmity, 2 Co. 12. 7; comp. with 10. 10. C.

Ver. 15. Ye would have plucked, &c. Hence some have inferred that the affliction of the apostle was disease of the eyes. Others take the expression to be proverbial for any sacrifice. The phrase, 'your own eyes,' would seem, by the implied distinction, to countenance the former opinion. C.

Ver. 17. They would exclude, &c. 'They would exclude (separate) you from my affections, that ye might affect (join yourselves to) them.' C.

Ver. 20. I desire. Rather, 'I could have wished.'—To change my voice from that of a father (ver. 19) to that of a corrector or reprover, which I fear your case requires. C.

Ver. 24. Are an allegory. Rather, 'may be thus allegorized,' being natural and historical emblems of spiritual realities. C.

Ver. 25. This Agar is mount Sinai. Let these words be compared with Mat. 26. 26, 'This is my body,' wherein the Romanists found the doctrine of transubstantiation and the absurdity of that doctrine will be apparent; for if 'This is my body' be no figure, but a reality, then 'Agar (does not represent, but) is mount Sinai'—a monstrous but inevitable consequence. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great and glorious are the advantages of the New Testament church, brought in by the incarnation, obedience, and suffering of the Son of God, above the dark and servile state of the Old. What a large and firm foundation of mercy and hope is the manifestation of God in our nature, and in our law-room and stead! Happy are they who are marked as his fellow-heirs of eternal life by their active faith in Jesus Christ, and who are hereby enabled to enjoy the most familiar intimacy with God! Marvellous is his grace in calling gross idolaters to his favour and service! and base their ingratitude and dreadful their danger who, after making a fair profession of his gospel, apostatize from him, and deny the power of his righteousness for our justification before him. It is painful for faithful ministers to behold such events. But highly necessary at such a time honestly to contend for the truth, though it should make our kindest friends become our furious enemies. For artful are the methods and high the pretences of affection or piety by which seducers alienate men from the truth, and from their faithful, beloved, and affectionate ministers.—With great concern ought ministers, by prayers and instructions, to promote the conversion and edification of their hearers. It is vain to think that Christ can be formed in the heart where self-righteousness and self-dependence habitually prevail and reign. Whatever we may wish, we ought never to think all well where what we see is evidently evil. Ministers ought carefully to explain and apply the law of God to the consciences of those who are disposed to trust to their own works. And it is needful to look further than the letter in order to understand the Scripture. It is not according to our external privileges, but according as we rely on our own works, or adhere by faith to God's free promises, that we shall be lost or saved. The true children of God are generally persecuted by legal hypocrites. But it is enough to make them a rich and everlasting amends that they may rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1. Since true believers are thus the children of God, and heirs of promise, and the danger of self-justifiers is so terrible, let me earnestly beseech you to abide steadfastly in the belief, profession, and practice of that holy, happy, and delightful freedom from the law as a covenant of works, and from all obligation to its ceremonial precepts, wherewith Jesus Christ, by his finished righteousness, gospel establishment, and your living faith in himself, has made you free: and let love, gratitude, and obedience to him, liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, <sup>u</sup>Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

15 But<sup>v</sup> if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

16 This I say then, <sup>w</sup>Walk in the Spirit,<sup>8</sup> and ye shall not fulfil<sup>9</sup> the lust of the flesh.

17 For<sup>y</sup> the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

18 But<sup>z</sup> if ye be led by the Spirit,<sup>1</sup> ye are not under the law.

19 Now<sup>a</sup> the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, 20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, as well as concern for the welfare and safety of your own souls, make you to avoid all further encumbrance and oppression from the servile yoke of the law or its ceremonies. 2. For, as an inspired apostle of Christ, I, who it seems am said to preach up circumcision, solemnly assure you that, if ye receive circumcision as a thing necessary to your acceptance with God, nothing that Christ has done or suffered, or which the gospel reveals, will be of any saving advantage to you. 3. I now repeat what I have always maintained in my ministrations, with the greatest earnestness, as a most convincing truth, to every man, Jew or Gentile, who is circumcised with this view, that he is thereby obliged, under pain of eternal damnation, perfectly, without the least failure, to satisfy the whole demands of the divine law as a broken covenant of works. 4. The person, righteousness, gospel, and Spirit of Christ, will avail you nothing, who, renouncing him, seek justification before God, in whole or in part, by your own works, and thus practically renounce the gospel, and the free justification and salvation therein bequeathed. 5. For through the light and influence of the gospel, we believers, Jews or Gentiles, earnestly desire and expect, and patiently look and wait for, everlasting life, that great object of our hope, as a thing we are entitled to, and shall partake of, not for any righteousness of our own, but because of the blessed righteousness of Christ, received by faith. 6. For with respect to our union with Christ, and justification through him, neither circumcision nor other ceremonial observances, nor the want of them, do in the least promote or confirm our happiness; but we must have a true faith, receiving and resting upon Christ alone for salvation as offered in the gospel, and working in a sincere and ardent love to his person, offices, relations, Father, Spirit, Word, ordinances, ways, and people.—7. Ye, my brethren, for a time appeared cordially to believe, and earnestly to profess, this doctrine of justification through Jesus' righteousness alone. Think seriously then what has turned you aside from your faith in, and your obediential regard to, the authority of Christ, in this leading truth of the gospel, on which all the rest depend. 8. Certain it is that your present judaizing sentiments, so directly contrary to the very foundation of the gospel, are in no respect derived from God, who called you to the knowledge of Christ, and the way of salvation through him alone; nor from me, who, as his instrument, preached the very contrary to you. 9. Some corrupt influence from Satan and his instruments must then have insinuated itself among you, which, unless timely prevented, will gradually infect your whole church and whole scheme of principles. 10. Notwithstanding, therefore, my great fears about you, I would fain hope that, upon your serious consideration of what I now write, ye will perceive your danger, and the necessity of making a full and speedy stand for the truth, and of censuring the principal instruments of your present perplexity and confusion: and sure I am, that, except they repent, the righteous and terrible judgments of God will overtake them. 11. And as for myself, the furious persecution which I everywhere patiently suffer from the bigoted Jews, manifests that I never preach up circumcision as necessary to salvation, or induce any Gentile believers to receive it: for could I agree to superadd the works of the law to the merits of Christ, the chief ground of their offence at the doctrine of salvation by a crucified Saviour, and of their persecution of me for preaching it, would naturally cease. 12. I heartily wish that these new teachers, who have so grievously perplexed and disturbed you, and subverted the faith of some of you, were solemnly excommunicated from all fellowship with the church and delivered over to Satan; or that God, in his own way, would restrain them from bringing any further reproach upon his name, church, and gospel.—13. And as ye, my Christian brethren, have been by the gospel called to a glorious freedom from ceremonial observances, and from the law as a broken covenant of works, and to a noble liberty of spirit in fellowship with God as our gracious Father in Christ, abide by it as a thing more valuable than your lives, and remember to improve it, not as an encouragement to pride, passion, sensuality, or other sinful corruptions, but as an additional obligation to the most perfect obedience to the whole law of God as a rule of life, and in all kind and brotherly affection, and friendly offices one to another. 14. For all the commands of the second table, relative to the mutual duties of life, to chastity, honesty, truth, contentment, and charity, are fulfilled in loving your neighbours, as rational creatures and Christians, with such sincere and active affection as ye owe to yourselves. 15. But if, in defiance of this great commandment, ye, like ravenous beasts, rather than men or Christians, fight and quarrel, reproach and abuse one another, ye have reason to fear that the God of peace and love will abandon you to your own lusts, that, by mutual heats and feuds, ye may ruin one another in your church state, privileges, and best interests.—16. To prevent these and other dreadful irruptions of your indwelling corruption, I charge you, in the name of Christ, to labour always, and by all means to live and act towards God and men under the influence of his good Spirit, and of that supernatural habit or principle of grace and holiness which he has produced in your heart; which seeks to prevent your yielding up yourselves to the inclinations and practices of sinful lusts. 17. For, in regenerate persons, the remains of indwelling corruption, on the one hand, struggle against and labour to suppress this inward gracious principle and all its holy actings, and even to expel the Holy Ghost from the heart;—and, on the other hand, the spiritual habit or vital principle of grace wrought in them by the Holy Ghost, as living and acting under his direction and assistance, earnestly desires and labours to effect the entire destruction of sin. And these two inward principles of sinfulness and grace being directly opposite in their nature, tendency, and actings, ye can neither commit sin with the full and deliberate consent of your heart, nor perform duties with perfect freedom, constancy, and fervour. 18. But if, under the direction and influence of the Spirit of God, according to the rule of his Word and the inclination of a blessed principle of grace, ye, in the habitual frame of your hearts and course of your lives, be led from the ways of sin into the paths of righteousness, it is manifest that ye cannot be under the law as a covenant of works, the Spirit being received only by means of the gospel; 19 —21. Nor are these principles of inward sinfulness and grace more contrary than the tempers and practices which proceed from them. Those which proceed from the carnal tendency of nature are manifestly odious and wicked; such as whoredom in thought, word, or deed, whether between married or single persons, with all lewd, immodest, and wanton inclinations and behaviour; all idolatrous worshipping of false gods, or by images; all enchantments, divinations, magic, and pretended or real intimacy with evil spirits; all ill-will towards God or men; litigious contentions, bitter zeal and rancour; a swelling and revengeful temper; scoldings, wranglings, and provocations to evil; a riotous and turbulent behaviour; fundamental errors obstinately persisted in; uneasy envyings at the gifts, graces, honours, or prosperity of others; malicious and wilful attempts to take away men's lives without just cause; excessive drinking of liquors; gluttonous feasting, ranting, and raving; with many others of the like nature, which, as I formerly assured you, will, if persisted in, effectually exclude you from all fellowship with God here or hereafter. 22, 23. But in opposition to these detestable and damning works of the flesh, the effects produced by the blessed principle of divine life under the supernatural influence of the Holy Ghost, pleasing to God, and profitable to ourselves, are—universal love to God, to Christ, his words, ordinances, and people, and to our fellow-creatures; rejoicing in God through Christ, and in the happiness of our neighbours; peace of conscience, flowing from peace with God through Jesus' blood, and issuing in a peaceful temper towards our fellow Christians and creatures; a patient bearing of affronts, injuries, and offences; an affable and courteous disposition and carriage towards all with whom we have to do; a benevolent temper and beneficent practice; fidelity to every trust committed to or engagement made by us, flowing from faith in Christ, and in God through him; a meek, calm, and quiet frame of spirit; a regular moderation of our passions and appetites in meats, drinks, pleasures, or the like. Against such virtues, and the persons endowed with them, there is no law to condemn them. 24. And all they who truly belong to Christ through a living faith in him, united with, interested in, and devoted to him, are obliged earnestly to endeavour, and have been actually enabled by his Spirit, in virtue of his crucifixion, and in conformity to him therein, gradually to subdue the power and strength of indwelling sinfulness that it may not reign in their mortal body, and to break the force of their base and defiling sinfulness whether of the flesh or mind. 25. And if we are indeed quickened and made alive to God by the power of the Holy Ghost, let it be our daily and earnest study, 21 Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But <sup>b</sup>the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith,<sup>2</sup>

23 Meekness, temperance:<sup>3</sup> against* such there is no law.

24 And<sup>d</sup> they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections<sup>4</sup> and lusts.

25 If<sup>e</sup> we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.

26 Let<sup>g</sup> us not be desirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

under his direction and influence, to act up to our Christian character, obligations, and advantages, by departing from all iniquity and walking in all holy conversation and godliness. 26. And as we are indebted to him for all the good that is in us, let none of us overrate our own endowments or performances, or aim at making a vainglorious show of them. Let us never, by our pride, passion, or self-seeking, provoke one another to angry resentments, nor stir up envious passions in or against each other.

Ver. 5. Through the Spirit. Middleton and Bloomfield render πνευματι, 'spiritually,' though the earlier expositors understood it of the Holy Spirit. The want of the article prefixed is the ground for the proposed rendering; and reference is made to ch. 3. 3; 5. 16, 18, 25. A careful examination and comparison of all the passages where πνευμα occurs without the article or an epithet, seem to confirm this interpretation.—The hope of righteousness by faith. Not 'the hope' of hereafter obtaining 'righteousness by faith'—for that the believer already possesses, Ro. 3. 22—but the 'hope of glory,' which those who are 'justified by faith' in full assurance wait for. Ro. 5. 1, 2; He. 6. 11. C.

Ver. 19. The grouping of those vices is fourfold: (1) Sins of lust (ver. 19, four). (2) Sins of impiety and superstition (ver. 20, two)—to wit, idolatry and witchcraft. (3) Sins of temper (ver. 20, 21, nine). (4) Sins of appetite and indulgence (ver. 21, two);—'drunkenness and revellings' being placed last, as if in them the apostle would practically lay bare the root of all the preceding evils. Paley relates an apologue in which Satan is represented as proposing his gifts to one if he would commit murder, incest, or get drunk. He preferred getting drunk; and then committed the horrible crimes from which in sobriety he had recoiled. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Blessed are the liberties which saints, especially under the gospel, have in and through Christ! and in the most delightful manner they, by faith, live in love, and hope for glory. But it is dangerous to contemn, reject, or forsake these liberties; and infinitely dangerous to turn aside from the true doctrine of justification by free grace through the blessed righteousness of Christ, received by faith, after we have professed and seemingly believed it. It is to lose all benefit by Christ, and to bind ourselves to the impossible condition of keeping the whole law. No persecution, no seduction, ought ever to draw us into this minous snare. And seducers to such wickedness should be esteemed as plagues of the church, and quickly cut off from her fellowship.—True Christians should carefully avoid everything tending to strife and contention, which are so sinful and ruinous. And though believers be perfectly freed from the moral law as a covenant, they continue still, and to eternity, under it as a binding rule of conversation. Yea, if we be Christ's, we must evidence it by our earnest mortification of inward lusts;

The latter signifies 'weakness or suffering,' to which the Christian is liable in this world, and which may be greatly alleviated by the sympathy and help of brethren. 4 But <sup>4</sup>let every man prove his own work, and then shall he <sup>9</sup>have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another.

6 Let<sup>i</sup> him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things.

7 Be<sup>j</sup> not deceived; God is not mocked: <sup>k</sup>for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

8 For <sup>he</sup>that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

9 And <sup>l</sup>let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.

10 As<sup>o</sup> we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, <sup>especially</sup> unto them who are of the household of faith.

11 Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.

12 As many as desire to make a <sup>q</sup>fair show in the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised; only lest they should suffer persecution for the cross of Christ.

13 For <sup>r</sup>neither they themselves who are circumcised keep the law; but desire to have you circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh.

and by avoiding and practically testifying against outward abominations. But in order to maintain the implanted principles of grace, or bring forth the fruits thereof in a holy life, we must live under the almighty and gracious influence of the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1. According to the rule of Christian love already mentioned, if any one among you, through ignorance, unwatchfulness, human frailty, plausible temptations, or enticing examples, fall into an erroneous notion or immoral act, I beseech those of you who are more advanced and confirmed in knowledge and grace, to do your utmost in a meek, patient, and tender manner, for convincing and reclaiming him by repentance, and reducing him to his proper place in the mystical body of Christ:—and to induce you hereto, ponder seriously your own weakness and sinfulness, and the danger of meeting with and falling before temptations yourselves; and be not therefore too severe upon others. 2. Instead of imposing heavy yokes on the one hand, or refusing any offices of kindness on the other, sympathize with, pray for, and assist one another; and, by lightening and relieving one another under your burdens, grievances, trials, and exercises, practise Christ's great commandment of loving your neighbours as yourselves. 3. For if any of you have high thoughts of your own abilities to resist temptations and to do great things in religion, and so despise and insult others, ye dreadfully deceive your own souls. 4. But to prevent your being forward to judge and censure others and deceive yourselves, let every one of you narrowly search and try his own principles, motives, ends, temper, and behaviour; and if they be thus found correspondent to the truth of the gospel, and your profession of it, ye will have great matter of humble joy in what God has wrought in you, and enabled you to do, and on account of the testimony which the Holy Ghost and your own consciences bear to your sincerity, and God's acceptance of you through Christ; and you need not then regard the applause of others, your number of proselytes, or that your character is more exalted than that of others. 5. For at the judgment-seat of Christ every man will be adjudged to eternal happiness or misery, not according to what he thinks of himself, or what he is in comparison of others,—but according to what he really is in heart and life before God.—6. And as a standing ministry is necessary for your instruction and establishment in the truths and paths of the gospel, let every church-member who receives these spiritual instructions, cheerfully and liberally contribute of his worldly substance for the comfortable maintenance of his instructor, who spends his time and strength in preaching the gospel to him, and thus brings him blessings far better than anything temporal. 7. Never let a covetous temper or plausible suggestion seduce you from the faithful performance of this duty. God, who searches your hearts, and has a right to your obedience, will not suffer himself to be imposed on, or any of his commandments contemned. But (to allude to the crops of husbandmen and gardeners) your reward at his hand shall be according to the nature, quality, and extent of your work. 8. He who uses his temporal enjoyments, or spends his time and strength with selfish and corrupt views, shall have for his reward perishing things here and eternal destruction hereafter; but he who, through the power of God's grace on and in his heart, employs his substance and talents for promoting spiritual purposes, in subserviency to the work and design of the Holy Ghost, shall reap glorious fruits of holiness in this world, and eternal life as the free gift of God through Christ in the next. 9. Animated by these comfortable views, let us never grow remiss and negligent, far less cease from doing good to others by every mean in our power; for if not in this life, we shall in the next be rewarded with plentiful blessings, if we do not, through unbelief and discouragement, covetousness, impatience, or the like, desist from our duty as an irksome task. 10. While therefore God gives us abilities and proper opportunities, let us exercise ourselves in works of beneficence towards the necessitous, and all our fellow-creatures, especially to such as, in the judgment of charity, have cordially embraced the gospel of Christ and become his children and servants. 11. I hope ye will seriously ponder those things which I have written to you in this affectionate letter, and that not by an amanuensis, as ordinarily, but with my own hand. 12. And, believe me, your new preachers who attempt to recommend themselves by external flourishes of profession or zealous observation of carnal ceremonies, are not actuated in urging you to be circumcised by any true love to you, or concern for your salvation, but merely desire that they may escape that persecution and outrage from the unbelieving Jews to which the preaching of a full justification through Christ's imparted righteousness would expose them. 13. For, notwithstanding their being circumcised themselves, and under an obligation thereby established to keep the whole law, they are not really careful to keep that law at all, but they would have you circumcised that they might boast of you as their proselytes, and thereby recommend themselves to the favour of the unbelieving Jews. 14. But God forbid that I should ever be ambitious of human applause, or boast of, or rely on, anything as the ground of my acceptance with God, except it be the atoning sacrifice of our crucified Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, by faith in, and virtue derived from, which and whom, I am in conformity to him, dead to all the allurements, interests, and honours of this world, and to all its terrors, persecutions, and reproaches, so as to be little moved by the one or the other; and on account of my preaching of which, as the alone ground of justification and eternal life, the men of this world condemn me, and would gladly crucify me. 15. For, with regard to union with Christ, and justification to life through faith in him, circumcision, and all such external distinctions, are now under the gospel entirely useless. The only thing that can effectually prove our interest in him is the universal and almighty renovation of our heart and life, after the image of God, in knowledge, righteousness, and true holiness.—16. And to all those professed Christians, Jews or Gentiles, who, according to the directions I have given, rely on the righteousness of Christ alone for justification, and improve it in a steadfast maintenance of gospel liberties, and study of gospel holiness—and to all those spiritual Israelites who have accepted Christ by faith—I earnestly wish and declare peace with God, their consciences, and one another, and all other mercies and blessings of the new kingdom. 17. Let no one give me any further trouble with injurious reproaches and angry quarrels about circumcision and other observances of the law: the persecutions which I have already endured, and of which I retain the marks in my body, are sufficient proofs of my being Christ's devoted servant, and faithful preacher of justification through his blood. 18. Finally, brethren, my hearty prayer to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ is, that his free love and favour, with all its blessed manifestations, fruits, and effects, may plentifully abound towards you, and sensibly rest on your souls, to lead you in the way of faith, comfort, and holiness, till ye arrive at the complete possession of eternal life.

Ver. 11. The apostle was accustomed to dictate his letters to an amanuensis—this he wrote with his own hand. Why he notices the circumstance it is not easy to conjecture, perhaps impossible to discover. Some suppose it is noted as an evidence of special affection; but what peculiar evidence it could furnish is not very apparent. Is it not rather intended to intimate that he felt so great anxiety for their Christian character that he hoped to wean them from their errors without any one being made acquainted with his rebukes either to individuals or the churches? C.—This verse must be literally rendered as follows: 'Ye see in how large characters (or letters) I have written to you with my own hand.' Two things are here indicated: (1) That the epistle was written in letters of an unusually large size, probably on account of the defective sight of the apostle. (2) That it was unusual for the apostle to write himself, as he generally employed an amanuensis. Whether he wrote with his own hand as a special mark of favour, or because of the absence of his amanuensis, cannot now be ascertained. P.

REFLECTIONS.—With meekness, humility, and compassionate sympathy, ought Christians of superior attainments to recover their offending brethren. A sense of their own sinfulness, weakness, and readiness to slip, should induce them to it. And a regard to their deliverance from the law as a covenant, and the law of ceremonies, and their being still under Christ's law of liberty and love, should constantly animate them to it.—It is dreadful to deceive our souls through self-conceit and hypocritical mocking of that God who neither will nor can be imposed upon. But it is delightful to have our consciences attesting us as approved of God in Christ; and to be enabled to improve our worldly substance in acts of piety and charity. It is highly necessary to be active and exact in our conduct, when our eternal happiness or misery is so closely connected with it; and very unprofitable to make fair shows of religion while we remain ignorant of its power; or while, to shun persecution, we are afraid or ashamed to own a crucified Christ, and the doctrine of salvation through faith only. It is Christ crucified in whom we must boast, and from whom we must derive all grace to wean us from worldly things. And no profession, denomination, or external privilege will avail to our salvation unless our hearts be renewed and planted with a living principle of grace. Nor must we expect spiritual or eternal happiness unless we walk according to the gospel in our dealings with God and men, and are ready to suffer for the doctrines of Christ which we profess.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

No one can attentively read and consider the Epistle to the Galatians without discovering the early germs of Popery budding, nay springing, into vigorous and almost irrepressible growth, even under the eye of apostolic inspection, and, as it were, in defiance of the apostolic pruning-knife. Popery does not consist in the rejection of the great fundamental doctrines of Christianity. On the contrary, it retains most of them, but at the same time so overlays them, as to render them nearly or altogether invisible; so loads them with ceremonial ornament, as to disfigure or destroy their beauty; and so combines them with extraneous and traditional inventions, as literally to render them of 'none effect.'—The two great errors which the apostle labours to correct among the Galatians were the adoption of Jewish rites as essential to salvation, and the combining of human merit with the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. In both these propensities they have been followed by Popery. One high-priest—one pope—one family succession—one traditional succession—holy vestments—altars—lamps—candles—washings—sprinklings—attitudes. These bear such resemblance to each other, that it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between them. But injurious to spiritual feeling and vital godliness as these 'beggarly elements' undoubtedly are, their evil is far outrun by the doctrine of justification by works alone, or by human merit conjoined with the works of Christ, and of other mediators, which invariably accompanies them. Both indeed profess alike to have 'begun in the Spirit,' but both alike labour, and expect to be 'made perfect by the flesh,' ch. 3, 3. Truly has Solomon declared that 'there is no new thing under the sun.' Even ritualism, with all its fertile ingenuity, has been unable to become an inventor; and, when casting off 'the simplicity of the gospel,' has been compelled to deck herself in the ancient but condemned garments of the judaizing, 'the foolish Galatians.' Wherefore 'let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.' Justification by faith, and by faith alone, is the article by which the church must stand in truth; but the 'faith that is not alone,' but 'worketh by love,' is the principle by which she must stand in holiness. C.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

Ephesus was the chief city of Proconsular Asia, famed for human wisdom and knowledge, but more for idolatry, lasciviousness, and magical arts. Here Paul planted a Christian church, to the elders of which he afterwards gave a solemn charge to attend to their work, Ac. xix. xx. To caution them against those seducers who very early crept in among them, and to confirm them in the doctrines which he had preached to them, he, while a prisoner at Rome, wrote them this excellent letter. In the first three chapters of which he represents to them, in the most enraptured and affecting manner, the riches of God's grace, in their conversion, regeneration, calling, fellowship with God and with his church. In the last three he exhorts them to improve their mercies, in the conscientious performance of all necessary duties, personal and relative, religious and civil, answerable to their Christian character, privileges, assistances, and obligations.

[Ephesus was a city of Ionia, and, under the Roman government, the capital of a large district of Western Asia. It was famous for its temple of Diana, which was reckoned one of the wonders of the world, Ac. 19, 27. It is said to have been more ancient than the time of David, and to have been peopled by a Greek colony.

AQUEDUCT OF EPHEBUS. [EPHESIANS, i: i.] — Ephesus was once the greatest city in all Asia Minor and the principal emporium of trade in the East. It was known as one of the eyes of Asia, Smyrna being the other. The inhabitants of Ephesus were mainly Greeks. Hence the city occupied no mean place in literature and art. Apelles was a native of Ephesus. Three great buildings of interest were the Temple of Diana; the theatre, which was the scene of the riot of Demetrius, and the stadium, or circus, the arena of the sea fights. In the above view we have a representation of the aqueduct and the acropolis that stood above the city. None of the ancient cities have more completely been obliterated. The theatre referred to in Acts, 19-29, was capable of holding 25,000 or 30,000 people, and was the largest ever built by the Greeks.

In the time of Paul Ephesus still retained much of its ancient architectural and commercial grandeur; but the inhabitants were, like those of Athens, wholly given to idolatry. History describes them as licentious in morals and addicted to sorcery; whence 'Ephesian letters' came to be a name for all those superstitious charms and spells by which those ignorant and foolish people who know not God have, in all ages, been affrighted and deceived. In such a city the preaching of the gospel seemed all but hopeless; for idolatry and self-interest combined to instigate the heathen zealots to every riotous opposition, Ac. 19. 24; yet, through the labours of Paul, Apollos, and others, the gospel triumphed; and the Lord established a church which continued until his early-threatened and long-suspended judgment at last overtook the city, and has left it a splendid ruin without church or inhabitant. It was situated about twenty-three miles north of Miletus, to which place Paul called the elders to deliver them his parting charge, about A.D. 58.

This epistle was written about A.D. 62, and, as appears from various allusions, when Paul was a prisoner at Rome. It has been pronounced the richest and noblest of the epistles. And certainly in variety and depth of doctrine, sublimity and fervour of expression, and the intense earnestness of apostolic exhortation, it stands eminently conspicuous. The reason for its peculiar character seems to be that assigned by Scott, namely, 'that the apostle's heart was much enlarged in writing to those whom he had no occasion to rebuke, and with whom he was not under the necessity of joining in controversy; so that entire confidence took place of the caution, reserve, or sharpness which were requisite in the three preceding epistles.' It appears to have been written to confirm the Ephesian and other Asiatic churches in the true doctrine and practice of the gospel. And as every epistle seems to have had some peculiar object, and is consequently distinguished by some peculiar feature, so this epistle is distinguished by its special illustration and enforcement of the blessed doctrine of the headship of Christ over all things to the church, and the union of believers with him in one mystical body.

As to the particular church to which this epistle was originally addressed, expositors are not agreed. Some think it was addressed to the Laodiceans, Col. 4. 16; while others suppose it to have been a circular letter generally addressed to all the churches of Asia. For this opinion, however, there is not a shadow of external proof—the whole current of evidence uniting in inscribing it specially to the Ephesians—though, no doubt, it was intended for the use of the other surrounding churches. And if the apostle directed the Ephesians to send a copy to the Laodiceans, which should afterwards be transmitted to the Laodiceans—and no supposition can be more natural—all idea of the loss of any apostolical epistle is at once removed. C.]

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1, 2. Being, according to the blessed will and kind favour of God, immediately authorized and qualified by Jesus Christ to publish his glorious gospel, I earnestly wish and announce to you—members of the church at Ephesus, who are by profession, and I hope many of you really, sanctified by the Holy Ghost, and to all the believers everywhere who, through union to and fellowship with Christ, have obtained mercy, to be faithful to their light and obligations in adhering to the truth as it is in him—all the riches of divine grace, in all its happy fruits, manifestations, and effects, from the living God and Father in Christ, as the fountain and moving cause, and from Jesus Christ as the actual storehouse, and dispenser of them. 3. May all possible glory, thanksgiving, and praise be cheerfully ascribed to that ever-blessed God whose ancient endearing character was the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; but who now manifests himself as the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son and mediatorial Servant,—that in and through him, as our spiritual Head and anointed Saviour, in the immense riches of his love and grace, he has freely and bountifully bestowed upon us all manner of spiritual and eternal blessings; 4. According to and in the execution of his gracious and unchangeable love, in which we were from all eternity freely and truly accepted in him as our Head and Representative, not because of our natural goodness, but that, through the application of his blood to our conscience, and the Holy Ghost renewing our heart, we might by faith in him be enabled, as in his sight, and acceptably to him, to walk in love to God and to one another, in obedience to his law, and as the fruit of his having first loved us: 5. In which eternal purpose we were to be separated from the rest of mankind, and through faith be his spiritual children, and joint-heirs with Christ, of himself, and all his inestimable fulness and privileges,—that through the merits, and being united to the person, of Christ, and according to his full favour and blessed will, we might be brought into the most intimate union to and fellowship with him, as his peculiar people, saved for and consecrated to his honour and service; 6, 7. All which is done by him that there may be abundant and everlasting praises in the church on earth and in heaven, to the honour and glory of his free grace and mercy, which is so illustriously and endearingly displayed in the whole of our salvation, particularly in rendering us acceptable to himself, in and through the person and mediation of his dearly-beloved and only-begotten Son Jesus Christ—in whom we who accept Christ as Redeemer have a complete and glorious deliverance from all evil, and recovery to all possible happiness, in time and eternity, through the inestimable power of his atonement so fully meeting divine justice, and his righteousness so magnifying to the holy law; having all our sins, however many and aggravated, freely, fully, and lovingly forgiven us, not on account of any worthiness in us or our works, but through a living faith in the excellency, liberality, and unbounded overflowings of JEHOVAH's full mercy and favour. 8. In the breaking forth and plentiful effusions of which grace he has abundantly manifested to us the highest wisdom and love, both in contriving and executing his eternal work of redemption, to the united and highest honour of all his compassion, and in giving us the spirit of wisdom and knowledge, making us wise unto salvation, and to know and practise our duty with understanding, prudence, and discretion: 9. All which wisdom and prudence God hath discovered or conveyed to us by means of the gospel, in which, when attended by the almighty illumination of his Spirit, he opens before us his gracious work of redemption, which is so much hid from creatures, and so marvellous and incomprehensible in itself; and which, influenced by nothing but his own loving grace, he formed and fixed in his own breast, and by his affection,—10. That in the last and most glorious period of his gracious transactions on earth, fixed in his eternal love, and marked in his ancient promises, and when the exceeding sinfulness of mankind had given his free grace the largest opportunity for magnifying its own deep affection, he might, in and by means of Christ incarnate obeying, suffering, dying, interceding, and preached to the nations, gloriously reconcile Jews and Gentiles into one mystical body, bringing them into a new state of peace and friendship with himself and with one another, and even angels and men into one delightful society and new state of peace and friendship; and, in fine, connect all things in and under Christ, as Head over them to his church: 11. In whom also, for the accomplishment of this great design, we believing Jews have, through our faith, received a title to and some anticipation of that inheritance of eternal life to which we were, as his children, willed in the free and unchangeable love of God, who, by the power of the Holy Spirit, seeks to bring all men under the direction of his infinite wisdom and the plan of his everlasting love,—12. That we, the natural seed of Abraham, to whom the gospel was first preached, and who were first led to believe, and depend on, and hope in Christ for all salvation, might, as distinguished monuments of his grace, for ever serve him for his mercy in making, and for his truth, power, wisdom, and love in fulfilling his promises: 13. In whom also ye Gentiles, after ye had heard the infallibly certain and infinitely important truths of the gospel, by which that eternal salvation is offered graciously to sinful men, believed; and, in consequence thereof, were, by virtue of your union with him, further sanctified and conformed to his image, and comfortably certified of your personal interest in him as your eternal inheritance by the Holy Ghost, whom he so emphatically promised, and who, with infinite light and power, offers all the promises to our souls: 14. Which Holy Spirit, as given to us, and who awakens our faith, is a security, pledge, and earnest of our heavenly glory, and a joyful foretaste of it, till we, and all who accept Christ, and for whom he secured it, arrive at the full enjoyment of it,—that, as monuments of his amazing grace, we may for ever praise him in the highest manner for the manifestation of it upon us.—15, 16. In reflection upon this grace of God in choosing, redeeming, calling, and sanctifying you Gentiles as well as us Jews, and having received an account of your remarkable trust and hope in the Lord Jesus Christ, and love to all them that bear his image, I have been thereby encouraged in my frequent prayers to bless and thank him for his favours bestowed on you, and to supplicate that he would still grant you more abundant mercies; 17. Particularly that he—who is the loving God of our Lord Jesus Christ, whose love sent him to his mediatorial work, sustained and blest him in it, and who, being infinitely gracious in himself, is the fountain, author, and bestower of all the grace communicated to angels, men, or any other creature, and is the eternal Object of all admiration and worship—would, by his Spirit, give you still more bright, sweet, and assuring manifestations of Christ, in his person,

7 In<sup>n</sup> whom we have redemption through his blood, the <sup>o</sup>forgiveness of sins, according to the riches<sup>p</sup> of his grace;

8 Wherein<sup>q</sup> he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence;

9 Having<sup>r</sup> made known unto us the mystery of his will, <sup>s</sup>according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself:

10 That <sup>t</sup>in the dispensation of the fulness of times, he might <sup>u</sup>gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven,<sup>3</sup> and which are on earth; even in him:

11 In<sup>n</sup> whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who <sup>v</sup>worketh all things after the counsel of his own will;

12 That<sup>y</sup> we should be to the praise of his glory, who <sup>z</sup>first trusted in Christ.

13 In<sup>a</sup> whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, <sup>b</sup>the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye<sup>c</sup> were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, 14 Which is the <sup>d</sup>earnest of our inheritance until the <sup>e</sup>redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.

15 Wherefore <sup>f</sup>I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints, 16 Cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers;

CHAPTER II.

1 By comparing what we were by 3 nature, with what we are 5 by grace, 10 he declareth that we are made for good works; and 13 being brought near by Christ, should not live as 11 Gentiles, and 12 foreigners in time past, but as 19 citizens with the saints, and the family of God.

AND you<sup>a</sup> hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins;

2 Wherein<sup>b</sup> in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the <sup>c</sup>prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the <sup>d</sup>children of disobedience:

offices, righteousness, and love, and lead you into a still more clear and experimental acquaintance with the exercise of faith, love, and other graces; 18. That through his enlightening influence, by the Word of God and daily experience, your minds may perceive, with the utmost certainty and light, what a sincere and genuine hope that is to which God has prepared for you by the gospel, what excellent objects it hath in view, and what solid and never-failing grounds ye have for it; and that by the realizing views of faith, by spiritual meditation, and by gracious foretastes, ye may know, in an animating and extensive manner, what is the true nature and transcendent excellency of the invaluable treasures of blessedness which God, because of love, bestows on and places in those who accept Christ for his inheritance and blessed kingdom: 19, 20. And that ye may further understand and experience what is the superabundant and all-conquering greatness of his power which he exercises towards us who believe, Jews or Gentiles, in quickening our dead souls, working love in us, subduing our inward corruptions, supporting and preserving us through all dangers, comforting us against all griefs, and raising us up to complete and eternal blessedness, and that in a manner like to the almighty exertion of it in the resurrection and high exaltation of Jesus Christ,—21-23. In which the Father hath advanced him, as God-man Mediator, to the highest dignity and authority, inexpressibly beyond the reach of angels and men, and invested him with uncontrollable dominion over all angels, good or bad, and all rulers in either church or state, and has placed all his enemies in a state of subjection to him, that he may administer the universe through the Lord Jesus Christ; and has given him an absolute and universal dominion, in the kingdom of providence and grace, over all persons and things, that he may manage, overrule, restrain, and order all events for the spiritual and eternal benefit of the catholic church, to which he is the Head of direction and government, life and influence, tender care and protection; and which is his mystical body, receiving all life, activity, growth, and strength from him; and in his relative fulness, comprehending all the members exercise faith in him for the perfecting of his family and glory—who, by means of his Word, offices, and ordinances, attended with his presence, are filled by him with all gifts, graces, and fruits of righteousness.

Ver. 1. The words 'at Ephesus' are omitted in the Sinaitic and Vatican manuscripts, two of the oldest and best of our ancient authorities for the text of the New Testament. The genuineness of the words may therefore be questioned. They were perhaps added at an early period from authentic tradition. P.

Ver. 3. In heavenly places. Rather, 'in the heavenly things that are in Christ'; to wit, growth in holiness (ver. 4), the adoption of children (ver. 5), &c. C.

Ver. 6. This verse ought rather to be translated: 'To the praise of the glory of his (God's) grace, which he graciously imparted to us in the Beloved' (in Christ). P.

Ver. 7. The apostle says 'we have redemption'—have it now, through faith in the Redeemer.—Note. The present possession of such a blessing as redemption, even the forgiveness of sins, should be the constant aim, as it is the undoubted privilege, of every one that believes in the name of Jesus, Jn. 1.12; 1 Jn. 2.12. C.

Ver. 10. The dispensation of the fulness of times. The Christian dispensation, or plan of divine government of his church, which commenced at the fulness of the prophetic times.—All things in Christ. Not all things whether good or evil, but that he might gather or unite under one head all things that are in Christ by God's purpose on the one hand, and their own faith upon the other—angels in heaven, and Jews and Gentiles, without distinction, upon earth. C.

Ver. 11. Worketh all things. Producing the good and overruling the evil. C.

Ver. 12. Paul here draws a distinction between the Jews and Gentiles. The former, under the old dispensation, had trusted for salvation in the Messiah (the Christ) promised in the Old Testament; the latter believed in that Christ (ver. 13) as an historical personage after his incarnation and glorification. Ver. 12 ought therefore to be rendered as follows:—'That we (Jews) should be to the praise of his (God's) glory—we, namely, who have before (before the incarnation) trusted in the the Greek word has the article, and hence means the promised Messiah) Christ.' Then Paul turns to the Gentiles, and continues—'In whom are ye also,' &c. (ye Gentiles who have believed, &c.) P.

Ver. 13. Sealed. Marked out as God's people, both by the miraculous and ordinary gifts of the promised Spirit, according as it has pleased God to distribute to every man severally as is best, 1 Co. 12. 4-11. C.

Ver. 15. Love unto all the saints. Let it be well noted that diffusive brotherly love is the great practical and apostolic test of genuine Christianity. C.

Ver. 16. Let Christians mark both the universality and speciality of the apostle's prayers, and learn to cast aside the insulated selfishness of mere personal petition, and bear every church, and, as far as may be, every believer known to them, on their hearts before the throne of grace. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Abundant is the grace we receive from Christ. It is only in a state of union to him that we are rendered holy or faithful. And it is only in him that we are blessed with either spiritual or eternal blessings. Delightful is the influence and sweet the character of a gracious God. Marvellous is the compassion, the freedom, the antiquity, the rich abundance and powerful efficacy of his redeeming grace. To it we owe our love, our hope, our justification, our spiritual knowledge, our eternal happiness, and our present assurance of and security for it. Influenced by it, how delightfully Father, Son, and Holy Ghost co-operate in our eternal redemption! Actuated by the faith of it, cordially ought we to pour forth our praises and thanksgivings, and to admire his kindness in bringing us Gentiles into the fellowship of the gospel. And earnestly should we pray for further influences of the Holy Spirit to enlighten our minds and quicken our souls. But, above all, let us admire the power, the grace, the wisdom, which have so exalted our Redeemer for the welfare of his body the church. And since God hath set him so high at his right hand, let him be for ever exalted in our hearts.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. And as God, by the exceeding greatness of his power, raised up Christ as a public person from the dead, he has also bestowed upon you a life of justification, freeing you from your guilt and condemnation, and quickened you to a life of holiness, by the renewal of your nature, who, as Gentile sinners, were under the dominion of both legal and spiritual death, and, as it were, condemned and killed by a multitude of sins original and actual. 2. In which,

3 Among whom also 'we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires<sup>1</sup> of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others.

4 But God, who is 'rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,<sup>2</sup>

5 Even<sup>h</sup> when we were dead in sins, 'hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;)

6 And 'hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus;

7 That in the ages to come 'he might show the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

while ye continued unregenerate heathens, ye with great eagerness constantly, freely, and progressively moved and acted according to the corrupt fashions and customs of this present evil world—according to the will, desire, instigation, and government of the devil and his angels, who wander about in and even agitate the air, and who, however proud, light, and vain, are worshipped and obeyed by the most of mankind, and continually work in the hearts of them who rebel against the laws and gospel of Christ; 3. Among whom all of us, Jews or Gentiles, being equally depraved in our spirit and temper, while we remained unregenerate, lived and acted, led away with divers lusts and pleasures, sometimes seeking to satisfy one, and sometimes another; and under the dominion and influence of our inward corruptions, gratifying, acting over, and indulging the irregular appetites of our body, in all its members; and of our soul, in all its powers, faculties, wishes, and contrivances; and were naturally chargeable and infected from our very conception with awful sin, and on that account condemned and exposed to the everlasting displeasure of God as much as any of those who are eternally lost. 4-6. But while we were in these loathsome, deplorable, condemned, helpless, and hopeless circumstances, it pleased God—whose riches of mercy and grace are altogether excellent, abundant, universal, and overflowing, and who is ready to pity, help, save, and enrich sinful and miserable creatures, according to that wonderful love which from eternity he fixed upon us, and upon all who through faith accept spiritual blessings in Christ—to recover us into a state of favour with himself, and grant unto us a principle of spiritual life, in conformity to and by virtue of our union and fellowship with Christ; and to give us a title to and foretastes of eternal salvation; and without making any distinction of nations or conditions, to raise us up in Christ as our Head and Representative, and make us to sit in the heavenly mansions in him as our forerunner already entered for us into the full possession thereof, and hereby assuring us that, in due time, we, in our persons, shall sit there with him and all his saints.—7. That in all the future ages and generations of this world he might set forth an illustrious and encouraging pattern, pledge, and earnest of the transcendent excellency and superabundant fulness of his full favour as it hath been exemplified in acts of special goodness and endearing kindness toward us, Jews and Gentiles, through the person and mediation of Christ; and that, in the heavenly state, he might for ever demonstrate and display the supereminent glory of his free grace, in all the unsearchable riches thereof, to the everlasting astonishment, joy, and praise of angels and saints. 8. For, as hath been before hinted, the whole of that salvation which ye are possessed of and entitled to, in the tenderness, love, offer, and application of it, and in all its parts and degrees, proceeds truly from the good will and love of God, and is conveyed through faith; not indeed by any virtue of faith itself, but as God's appointed means, whereby ye receive and rest upon Christ alone for it; and this faith itself, as well as the salvation thereby received, is not the product of any natural principle, good disposition, kindness, or improvement of the gospel that ye were capable of, but is wholly the free gift of God secured by Christ, and graciously offered you through faith in his sacrifice. 9. Neither the salvation itself, nor the faith whereby it is received, is in the least owing to any good works done by us, as the meritorious, moving, or efficient cause of it; but in recovering us, when so inexpressibly guilty, polluted, rebellious, infamous, and wretched, God has so demonstrated his mercy and grace as leaves no appearance of room or occasion for any man, in a vainglorious manner, to pretend he had done ought to render himself fit for or worthy of it. 10. For all the good works or qualities which appear in us, Jews or Gentiles, are nothing else than the effects of God's grace towards us, who, with respect to our spiritual state and renewed nature, are the curious workmanship of God, formed in and by virtue of our union with Christ, for bringing forth the fruits of holiness, for which, not our inclinations or power, but the gracious purpose and glorious grace of God do prepare us.—11. Wherefore, that ye Gentile converts may be deeply and humbly affected with that amazing grace which has been extended to you, I beseech you seriously to reflect on your former deplorable condition, when ye lived in ignorance, idolatry, and all other defilements of the human nature; and being destitute of all the ordinances of God, were condemned and detested by his professed people: 12. That then ye had no knowledge of or faith in the only Saviour of sinners, nor any vital union to or communion with him; nor any claim to the blessings of the gospel secured, revealed, or dispensed by him: ye had no possession of or right to the privileges of his visible Jewish church, and no spiritual relation to or fellowship with his people; ye had no share in the dispensation of the promise of grace, and its unnumbered exceeding great and precious hopes; and so could have no solid, rational, and well-grounded hope of deliverance from misery or enjoyment of eternal life; but were living, like atheists, without the knowledge, faith, fear, worship, and profession of the only true God, and destitute of all spiritual communion with or communications from him. 13. But notwithstanding all your unworthiness, wickedness, and wretchedness, through the astonishing mercy and grace of God ye are now, by the gospel dispensation, brought into a special relation and union to Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of lost sinners, and thereby translated from your former state of distance, enmity, and hopelessness into a spiritual state of friendship and fellowship with God and his church, through the merit and application of Jesus' atoning blood. 14. For he, in his person and mediation, is the only peacemaker, and the centre of union between God and us, and between one another, whether we are believing Jews or Gentiles; who hath reconciled us to God and to each other, and hath united us in one church, and cemented us together in heart and affection as children of one family; the ceremonial law, that wall of partition which separated between Jews and Gentiles, being abolished through his incarnation and death, and the New-Testament worship, which gives equal access to both, appointed in its stead. 15, 16. And having in his crucifixion fulfilled their typical signification, he disannulled the obligation of these ceremonial institutions, which represented God still unpropitious, and proved the occasion of much hatred and enmity between Jews and Gentiles,—that out of both he might make one church, formed of new creatures, after the image of God, and framed together for gospel worship and new obedience, and by a new constitution under him made equally partakers of grace and glory—that thus he might bring about an entire harmony and friendship

8 For 'by grace are ye saved 'through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God:

9 Not<sup>o</sup> of works, lest any man should boast.

10 For we are 'his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained<sup>3</sup> that we should walk in them.

11 Wherefore 'remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called 'Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands;

12 That at that time 'ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world:

with ver. 1. The connection was interrupted by the mention of 'trespasses and sins' at the close of ver. 1, which led 13 But<sup>t</sup> now, in Christ Jesus,<sup>4</sup> ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

14 For he is "our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the "middle wall of partition between us;

15 Having<sup>x</sup> abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one<sup>y</sup> new man, so making peace;

16 And that he might <sup>re</sup>concile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby;<sup>5</sup>

17 And came and <sup>pre</sup>ached peace to you which were afar off, and to them <sup>b</sup>that were nigh.

18 For <sup>c</sup>through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father.

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but <sup>d</sup>fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God;

CHAPTER III.

5 The hidden mystery, 6 that the Gentiles should be saved, 3 was made known to Paul by revelation: 8 and to him was that grace given, 9 that he should preach it. 13 He desired them not to faint for his tribulation, 14 and prayeth 19 that they may perceive the great love of Christ toward them.

FOR this cause I Paul, the "prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles,

2 If ye have heard of the <sup>b</sup>dispensation of the grace of God, which is given me to you-ward:

3 How that <sup>c</sup>by revelation he made known unto me the mystery; <sup>d</sup>(as I wrote afore<sup>1</sup> in few words,

4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the <sup>e</sup>mystery of Christ;)

5 Which<sup>g</sup> in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit;

6 That<sup>h</sup> the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, knit to him, have died unto sin and live unto God.' The resurrection of Christ secures a present spiritual, as well as a future bodily or material resurrection. P.

Ver. 8. It is the gift of God. What is the gift?—salvation or faith? That salvation is the gift, is argued from τὸν being neuter, and so not agreeing with πίστις, feminine; but the construction in ch. 6. 18; Phi. 1. 28; Ga. 3. 17; 4. 19 will show how little value is to be attached to this circumstance. That faith is the gift will appear, not from mere verbal criticism, but from the plain facts declared Mat. 13. 11; Jn. 3. 27; 6. 65; from comp. 1 Jn. 3. 24 with Ga. 5. 22; and if more evidence be wanting, Paul expressly declares, Phi. 1. 29. 'Unto you it is given (as also to all) to believe.' C.

Ver. 10. Which God hath, &c. Rather, 'for the performance of which God has before prepared us;' that is, by the previous gift of his Spirit working faith in our hearts. C.

Ver. 16. 'And that he might reconcile both (Jew and Gentile, who were before separated) in one body (uniting them as different members of one body, namely, the church, which is the body of Christ) to God, by means of the cross (his death on the cross atoning for sin, and thus taking away that guilt which separated man from God), having slain the enmity (between man and his God in the first place, but which is developed into enmity between man and man, between Jew and Gentile) on it' (on the cross). P.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! what a state of sin, slavery, wretchedness, and wrath are all men in by nature, Satan and their lusts hurrying them on to their own destruction! Transcendent and amazing grace must be necessary to quicken, to save, and to exalt for ever, such victims of misery, guilt, and pollution; and pure and free is the manifestation of it. No works of ours can possibly save us from our sins. How wonderful is that Christ for whom, in whom, and with whom all these rich mercies are received. Blessed be his name that Gentile idolaters are, through faith in his glorious person, righteousness, and mediation, brought into his gospel church!—While the building goes up sing, ye nations—sing, all the powers of my soul—GRACE, GRACE, UNTO IT!

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. For my boldly maintaining that you believing Gentiles have an equal access to the church and presence of God, and are equally related to him, as the Jews, I am, at this very time, through the malice and indefatigable opposition of my carnal countrymen, a prisoner at Rome, of which I boast and glory, as I know it will turn out to your spiritual advantage. 2. For ye must needs have heard how Jesus Christ, in his infinite condescension and grace, appointed me as a steward in his family, and herald in his kingdom, to preach the gospel chiefly to you and other Gentiles, that ye might believe and be saved; 3, 4. And how, by repeated visions and revelations, and by the immediate inspiration of his Spirit, he made known to me the great mystery of the salvation of sinful men, through his own incarnation, obedience, death, resurrection, and ascension, and of the gracious calling of the Gentiles into his gospel church; as, according to the measure of my knowledge of it, I have already hinted unto you:—5. Which mystery was not at all made known to the Gentiles in former ages, nor so distinctly, fully, and clearly to the Jews, as it is now revealed to the holy apostles and other inspired teachers of the Christian church, in consequence of the resurrection and ascension of Jesus Christ;—6. Particularly that branch of it,—that without any regard to circumcision or any other Jewish ceremonies, the idolatrous Gentiles should, equally and in the strictest connection with the Jews, be called and admitted into the same gospel church, partaking of all the privileges thereof, and be made members of the same mystical body of Christ,—to derive all enlightening, quickening, sanctifying, and comforting influence from him, and hold all their right and claim to all the promised blessings of the new kingdom under him, and partake of the promised Spirit in all his influences, gifts, graces, and glories shed on them abundantly through Christ: 7. Of which glorious gospel, being miraculously converted, and receiving a divinely free gift of the apostleship, I was, by the immediate appointment of Jesus Christ and his Father, made a preacher—to publish it in all its light, fulness, and glory; and had my commission ratified by many miraculous operations, and by an amazing success in the conversion and salvation of sinners. 8. Unto me, who was once a furious persecutor, blasphemer, and injurious person, and who in myself am still so transcendently worthless and hell-deserving, is this condescending, astonishing, and unparalleled favour shown—that I, above all the apostles, should be pitched upon to publish far and wide among the idolatrous Gentiles the glad tidings of salvation; and to be instrumental, in the hand of the Spirit, in making known and conveying to multitudes those exceeding riches of mercy and merit, of grace and glory, which are treasured up in Christ, and offered in the gospel through faith in him to the worst of sinners,—and which can never be fathomed, exhausted, numbered, or traced out in all their endless variety, excellency, and fulness. 9. And to make both Jews and Gentiles clearly perceive what a happy fellowship believers of all nations, as one church, under Christ their Head, now have in the exceeding great and glorious blessings of the gospel;—a mystery, in which unfathomable depths of divine compassion, wisdom, and grace are implied,—and which lay long concealed in the love and mind of God himself, who, in and with his Son Jesus Christ, created all things in heaven and earth; 10. And that even all the dignified and mighty ranks and orders of holy angels, who minister to the redeemed heirs of salvation, might, with ravishing pleasure, joy, and praise, behold and contemplate the infinite wisdom of God in the unnumbered displays of its glory in the doctrines, ministrations, blessings, and privileges of the New Testament church;—11. All which is now transacted in exact agreement with God's eternal love, which he had cherished in regard to his church, as considered in Christ their Head, Lord, and Saviour; 12. In and through whom, as the only Mediator between God and men, we have great liberty and enlargement of spirit in our dealings with God as our reconciled Father and Friend; and through faith receiving and resting on him alone for salvation, have a humble assurance of his favour towards us, his gracious acceptance of our persons and services, and his audience of our prayers for all real and necessary blessings. 13. In the contemplation of these things I entreat you never to be disheartened, affrightened, or made negligent or spiritless in your Christian course by the sufferings which I have to endure for my adherence to, and preaching of, the gospel; but rather to the honour of your Christian profession be encouraged, strengthened, and animated therein, as they are indeed a great honour put on me for the confirmation of what I preached and ye believed. 14. And that ye may be directed to this and all other necessary duties, I recommend you by the most affectionate, earnest, and solemn prayer, to the favour and mercy of the eternal Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our Father and Friend in him. 15. Of and under whom, and of the Father through him, all true worshippers, whether angels or saints, are gathered into one family, and have received the most transcendent and glorious honours and privileges; 16. And I plead that he who has already done so much for you may, in a manner answerable to his own immense fulness of wisdom, faithfulness, power, goodness, mercy, and grace, and by his almighty Spirit powerfully working in your renewed hearts, more and more fortify you against the efforts of inward corruptions or temptations from Satan or the world; and invigorate and animate you with holy courage to exercise every grace, perform every good work, endure every trial, and, abounding in holiness and comfort, to hold on to the end through all opposition and danger. 17. And that Jesus Christ, together with and by his Spirit, may be constantly present in your minds not only by the habit, but by realizing and appropriating acts of faith; and have a sensible abode in your hearts by continual gracious impressions and manifestations of his love to you as persons united to him;—that ye, being deeply fixed and firmly established in an experimental and assuring perception and faith of his love to you, and in your exercise of grateful returns of love to him, 18. May, by means of his oracles and ordinances, attended with the enlightening and sanctifying influences of his Spirit, be enabled to apprehend, and be suitably affected with, the unbounded love of Christ; clearly perceiving, as far as is possible for saints in this world, its unmeasurable extent, as it reaches to Gentiles as well as Jews, to all ranks, sorts, and degrees of sinners, and to all forms and degrees of spiritual and heavenly blessings:—its and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel;

7 Whereof<sup>i</sup> I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power.

8 Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that <sup>k</sup>I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ:

9 And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, <sup>n</sup>which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who <sup>o</sup>created all things<sup>2</sup> by Jesus Christ:

10 To<sup>p</sup> the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known,<sup>3</sup> by the church, the manifold wisdom of God,

11 According<sup>r</sup> to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord:

12 In<sup>s</sup> whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him.

13 Wherefore I desire that ye <sup>t</sup>faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.

14 For this cause <sup>u</sup>I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, 15 Of whom the <sup>v</sup>whole family in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, <sup>w</sup>according to the riches of his glory, <sup>y</sup>to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man;

17 That<sup>z</sup> Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being <sup>a</sup>rooted and grounded in love,

18 May be able to <sup>b</sup>comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height;

19 And to <sup>c</sup>know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with <sup>d</sup>all the fulness of God.

20 Now unto him that is <sup>e</sup>able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, 21 Unto him <sup>f</sup>be <sup>g</sup>glory in the church by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorteth to unity, 7 and declareth that God therefore giveth divers 11 gifts unto men, that his church might be 13 edified, and 16 grow up in Christ. 18 He calleth them from the impurity of the Gentiles, 24 to put on the new man, 25 to cast off lying, and 29 corrupt communication.

I THEREFORE, the <sup>a</sup>prisoner of the <sup>1</sup>Lord, I beseech you that ye <sup>b</sup>walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, inconceivable length, in reaching from everlasting to everlasting;—its unfathomable depth, as it brought the most high God of glory to the lowest state of service, sufferings, and death, and makes him stoop to redeem us from our lowest depths of sinfulness and misery;—and its astonishing height, in his exalted intercession for us, and advancing us to the highest glory of which our nature is capable;—19. And may, by faith and spiritual experience, know more the virtue, power, and sweetness of the transcendent love of Christ, and of God in him, in all its most excellent manifestations, fruits, and effects,—which, in itself, and in its wonderful operations, provisions, and designs, infinitely surpasses all the comprehensions of angels and men;—that thereby ye may be more and more abundantly partakers of a divine nature, and, to your utmost capacity, enriched with all that fulness of light and grace, holiness, joy, and peace, which God has prepared, promised, and communicates to his loving people,—and in due time arrive at the most full and transcendent enjoyment of him as your infinite ALL IN ALL. 20, 21. Now to this almighty, all-sufficient, gracious, and loving God, who, by that very power, of the almighty operations of which we have had abundant experience in our souls, is able to grant all those extensive blessings which I have desired, or which can be desired by us,—nay, to do infinitely above what we can ask or even conceive,—be ascribed all possible honour in the way of faith, love, adoration, worship, obedience, thanksgiving, blessing, and praise; on account of his infinite perfections, marvellous love, and mighty works of creation, providence, and grace,—in the whole universal church, in heaven and earth, and by every society and member thereof,—through Jesus Christ and his mediation,—during all the periods of time or ages of eternity; so may it and so shall it be.

2 With<sup>c</sup> all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love;

3 Endeavouring<sup>d</sup> to keep the unity of the Spirit<sup>2</sup> in the bond of peace.

Ver. 1. For this cause—the equal admission of both Jews and Gentiles into the church of God—which doctrine the Lord revealed to him, and he faithfully preached—whereby he had provoked the Jews to persecute him as an apostate, and the Gentiles as a denouncer of their idolatry. C.

Ver. 2. If ye have heard. Rather, 'since;' for there could be no question of their knowledge of his commission and doctrine. C.

Ver. 8. Unsearchable—and inconceivable, as the word imports.—Note. The human mind can never grasp infinity—yet upon infinity alone can it rest with confidence. The infinite power and infinite mercy that meet in Christ can alone enable the perishing sinner to say, 'It is enough.' C.

Ver. 10. By the church. Through the means of the church—the founding, sustaining, chastising, comforting, and purifying of which afforded such new and conspicuous evidence of the inexhaustible wisdom of God. C.

Ver. 13. It is 'your glory' that ye be not disconcerted by any tribulations—which I endure patiently that you may be brought to the fellowship of Christ. C.

Ver. 15. Of whom, may, grammatically, refer either to the Father or to Jesus Christ; but the latter seems the more probable. See He. 2. 13, 17. C.

Ver. 19. Which passeth knowledge. How can we know what passeth knowledge? Just as the astronomer knows the heavens so far as he can see, yet concludes from unquestionable analogy that much lies beyond his range of vision.—With (rather, 'unto') all the fulness of God—the fulness of grace, which, being manifested in the Word made flesh (Jn. 1. 14), is from him, as from a fountain, poured forth into the hearts of believers, viz. intellectual gifts, spiritual graces, love, peace, communion with God, and holy dedication to his service. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Behold, my soul, how the divine grace, infinite wisdom, and eternal love of the most High appear in the conversion of Gentile sinners to the almighty Saviour! Great is the boldness of access we have now to God: and unsearchable the riches of mercies and blessings which the gospel brings to us.—With deep self-abasement and affecting admiration of God's favours ought ministers to preach it. With patience and courage they ought to labour and suffer as is most for the good of the church. And with frequent and fervent prayer should they carry on their whole work, asking for themselves and their people abundant supplies of grace.—While angels with admiration pry into these mysteries, let my soul contemplate the infinite love of my Kinsman Redeemer, and be filled with all the fulness of God. And while grace for ever reigns through his righteousness, let there be glory to God in the highest.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. Since, therefore, these amazingly glorious privileges and blessings are freely and equally bestowed on you Gentile believers as on the Jews, I, who, to my inexpressible honour, am here, by the wise disposal, and for the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ, a prisoner for the faithful preaching of his gospel, particularly to the Gentiles,—earnestly beseech you constantly and perseveringly to live and act in a holy and honourable conversation, as becometh that gospel which ye have believed, and that high calling of God in Christ Jesus whereby ye have been tenderly called to glory and virtue. 2. And in acting suitably to the spiritual privileges and obligations of the gospel, study to walk humbly with God under a deep sense of your own meanness, unworthiness, and sinfulness, and to behave humbly toward each other, esteeming others better than yourselves; and with all courteousness, candour, calmness, and sweetness of temper. In real and hearty affection to Jesus Christ, and to one another in him, kindly bear affronts and injuries without retaliating or revenging them. Calmly overlook, or bear with, the weaknesses, indiscretions, forwardness, and peevish tempers of others, and even pity and excuse them: 3. And thus carefully and diligently, by all proper means, maintain and promote that spiritual union and harmony of souls which is the fruit of the Holy Ghost's dwelling in them, and consists in that pure and spiritual peace which is the best and strongest bond of your religious society and fellowship in it. 4. To engage you to cultivate this amiable union, consider the joint interest ye have in all the same important things. The church, of which ye are all alike members, is but one mystical body, and so ye ought to have the same fellow-feeling, care, and concern for one another. The same divine Spirit of love and peace animates, guides, and dwells in this whole mystical body, and every member of it;—and therefore ye ought to act with united hearts under his influence, and in imitation of him. Ye are, by God's grace, called to God's kingdom and glory as the one summary object of your hope; and, in your gracious work, ye are all partakers of the same grace of hope which terminates on Christ as its only foundation;—and therefore ye should live in harmony and peace, as heirs together of the same grace of life, and expectants of the same heavenly inheritance. 5. There is one Lord and Saviour of all true believers, even Jesus Christ, the only Mediator, King, and Head of his church; and therefore ye ought to unite with one heart and soul in your dependence on, and allegiance, love, and obedience to him, and in your sincere affection to all his subjects, according to the laws of his kingdom. There is but one and the same rule or doctrine of faith, one object of faith, and one sort of like precious faith in the whole church; and therefore this should, in every member, work in the same actings of love to Christ and to one another. The baptism, whether external or internal, of all church-members, is one and the same in its nature, tendency, and design; in which they are solemnly devoted to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as one God, sole Proprietor of the church, and brought under the strongest bonds to be entirely and unreservedly the Lord's, and therefore ought to behave with the utmost unity of character. 6. And, in fine, the loving God

- 4 There is <sup>o</sup>one body,<sup>3</sup> and one Spirit,<sup>4</sup> even as ye are called in <sup>o</sup>one hope of your calling;
 5 One<sup>b</sup> Lord, <sup>o</sup>one faith, <sup>o</sup>one baptism, 6 One<sup>k</sup> God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.
 7 But unto every one of us <sup>i</sup>is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.
 8 Wherefore he saith, "When he ascended up on high, he led captivity<sup>5</sup> captive, and gave gifts unto men."<sup>6</sup> 9 (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also <sup>o</sup>descended first into the lower parts of the earth?
 10 He that descended is the same also that ascended<sup>p</sup> up far above all heavens, that he might fill<sup>7</sup> all things.)
 11 And<sup>q</sup> he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;
 12 For<sup>r</sup> the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body<sup>s</sup> of Christ:
 13 Till<sup>t</sup> we all come in<sup>8</sup> the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature<sup>9</sup> of the fulness of Christ:
 14 That we henceforth be no more "children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;
 15 But, <sup>u</sup>speaking the truth<sup>1</sup> in love, <sup>u</sup>may

* The quotation is from Ps. 68. 18, and there is a difference between the words as here cited and those in the original. The change in the words is introduced advisedly; it is not merely a citation, but also an interpretation of the psalmist's words, given under the inspiration of the Divine Spirit. The words of the psalm are—'Thou hast led captivity captive; thou hast received gifts for men'—they are addressed to Christ. The apostle makes such a change as to render the language historically descriptive of what Christ has done, 'He led captivity captive, and gave gifts to men.'—P.

- grow up into him in all things, which is <sup>u</sup>the head, even Christ:
 16 From<sup>z</sup> whom the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.
 17 This<sup>a</sup> I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that <sup>b</sup>ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind, 18 Having<sup>c</sup> the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness<sup>2</sup> of their heart:
 19 Who<sup>d</sup> being past feeling, have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.
 20 But<sup>e</sup> ye have not so learned Christ;
 21 If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, <sup>u</sup>as the truth is in Jesus:
 22 That ye <sup>h</sup>put off, concerning the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts;
 23 And <sup>i</sup>be renewed in the spirit of your mind;
 24 And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.<sup>3</sup> 25 Wherefore, <sup>j</sup>putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour: for we are <sup>k</sup>members one of another.

and Father of helpless men, Jews or Gentiles, who is infinitely above them in perfections and dominion, and whose special presence preserves, governs, and supplies every part of the mystical body of Christ,—and who, by his Spirit and grace, dwells in all through faith,—is but one; and therefore ye ought to be of one heart and soul in your acknowledgments, love, and reverence of him, and in your obedience and subjection to him as your own God and Father, and ought to love his children as your spiritual brethren.—7. But notwithstanding our unity in so many great and important things, Jesus Christ, according to his own infinite wisdom and bounty, freely bestows upon his church a beautiful variety of spiritual offices, gifts, graces, and attainments.—8. Hence the Holy Ghost, by David, suggested that having—in consequence of his victory over sin, Satan, the world, and death—in his sufferings, resurrection, and ascension—received fulness of authority and influences from his Father as working with him, he should liberally distribute diversified offices, gifts, and graces to men, Jews or Gentiles, professing or rebellious sinners. 9. Now this very hint of his glorious and triumphant ascension plainly intimates that it was founded on his great incarnation, obedience, death, and burial.—10. And it is the same only begotten Son of God who so humbled himself that, as man and Mediator, after conquering all his enemies, hath ascended to the right hand of God, that by the virtue of his death, victory, and triumph, he might fill all the officers, members, ordinances, and administrations of his church with the gifts and graces of his Spirit, and thus fulfil all the ancient types and predictions, and perfect whatever relates to the salvation of all men. 11. In prosecution of this gracious design he furnished his gospel church with proper officers;—some of them extraordinary for her first settlement,—as apostles, who received their commission immediately from himself, to be eye-witnesses of his resurrection from the dead; whose authority extended equally to all the churches, and who could, under inspiration, teach the whole scheme of the gospel, work all sorts of miracles, and convey the Holy Ghost, in his miraculous influence, to other believers. Others he appointed and qualified as prophets to explain the Old Testament and foretell things to come. Others he appointed and qualified as inspired evangelists to attend the apostles and finish what they had begun. Other officers were ordinary, to continue in the church till the end of the world; namely, pastors, to watch over, govern, and dispense the ordinances of Christ to particular congregations; and teachers, to instruct church-members and others in the truths of the gospel. 12. All which offices and officers are appointed and rendered successful for completing the church in the number of her vital members, and each in their gifts and graces, and for uniting and compacting them in a regular society, and restoring such as had fallen, and for faithfully dispensing to them his word and ordinances, and for the building up of his mystical body the church in knowledge, faith, love, joy, and holy obedience. 13. Till we all, whether Jews or Gentiles, strong or weak, who do or may hereafter believe, be perfectly cemented into an entire agreement in the doctrines, and by the grace of faith; and in a clear, affectionate, and faithful knowledge, and approving acknowledgment of the eternal Son of God as our only Lord and Saviour; and so, by gradual improvement in gifts and graces, may arrive at that state of perfection which is reserved for the whole body of true believers in heaven after the last judgment. 14. That thus we may no longer continue like children, deficient in knowledge and prudence, weak in faith, and wavering in opinion, easily taken with new things, tossed or driven about, as ships without ballast, or flying clouds, by unstable, noisy, violent, and unsubstantial errors, whereby artful and designing men labour to impose on and deceive us to our eternal ruin;—15. But, on the contrary, may sincerely speak of, and plead for, the truths of the gospel, in the exercise of fervent love to them, to Christ, and the souls of men;—and may, like living members of him as our quickening Head, increase in all light, grace, and holiness, by virtue of our union with him, in conformity to his pattern, and for his honour. 16. From whom, as the Head and Fountain, all his members, being orderly and closely joined among themselves and united to him, do, by that energy which is communicated from him through every ordinance, officer, and member—in a proportion suited to the state, condition, and exigence of every part—build up themselves, and one another, in Christian love to him their Head, and to their fellow-members.—17. Since therefore ye, as members of Christ, are partakers of such privileges, let me again earnestly entreat and solemnly charge you, in the name and authority of the Lord Jesus, that henceforth ye no more behave like other Gentiles, who, unrenewed by the grace of God, still continue in their sensual, worldly, and idolatrous courses, suited to the pride, ignorance, and folly of their depraved mind. 18. Having their understandings filled with ignorance and error concerning everything spiritual; and through which indulged, increased, and confirmed, their wills and affections are become strangers to, and alienated from, the way of life, holiness, and happiness which God appoints and approves, and by which he lives in the soul, and it lives to him; 19. And who, through their contracted habits of ignorance, error, and hardness of heart, and the righteous judgment of God giving them up to their own lusts, have become quite insensible to the stings of conscience—committing the grossest abominations; and have voluntarily, and with full consent, delivered themselves over to the most eager delight in, desire after, and practice of the most shameful and detestable impurities.—20. But ye accepting God's call from darkness to his marvellous light have not so learned the doctrines of Christ, relative to his person, offices, and designs, or the obligations ye are under to him, and the privileges ye have received from him, as to induce or even permit you to venture on such licentious practices; 21. If, as ye profess, and I hope ye have indeed understood, hearkened to, and believed with the heart, what ye have heard from and concerning Jesus Christ, and have been inwardly and savingly enlightened and taught by his Spirit heartily to receive the truths of the gospel in their simplicity and purity, as they were delivered by him and his inspired apostles, and were exemplified in his temper

26 Be<sup>1</sup> ye angry, and sin not; let not the sun go down upon your wrath:

27 Neither<sup>n</sup> give place to the devil.

28 Let<sup>o</sup> him that stole steal no more: but rather let him <sup>n</sup>labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give<sup>4</sup> to him that needeth.

29 Let<sup>a</sup> no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying,<sup>5</sup> that it may minister grace unto the hearers.

30 And<sup>r</sup> grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, where- by<sup>6</sup> ye are <sup>s</sup>sealed unto the day of redemption.

and conduct, and are practised by the living members of his mystical body.—22. But that which ye have been taught, influenced, and obliged to, is to labour by his grace in the use of all appointed means more and more to discard with abhorrence, abandon and mortify that debased principle of indwelling sinfulness which discovered itself in your former practices, which vitiates all the faculties of the soul and members of the body, and of itself issues in eternal destruction, according to the working of its many impetuous inclinations, which deceive carnal hearts with false appearances of profit, honour, or pleasure.—23. And through the sanctifying influence of the Holy Ghost, to press after a further renovation of all the inward powers of your soul, and that your minds may be more and more enlightened in the knowledge of divine things, and your will and affections more and more replenished with grace and holiness: 24. And that, instead of wearing the deformity of sinful corruption any longer in sinful practices, ye may, by daily and increasing exercise of grace, clothe and adorn yourselves with all the beauties of that transcendently excellent new creature which is produced by the infinite wisdom, power, and grace of God, according to his will, and after that image of himself in which he at first created man, and which consists in real, internal, effectual, and divine principles, habits, and acts of equity and honesty towards men, and in true, not shadowy or ceremonial, purity and piety towards God.—25. Being thus taught and privileged, avoid with peculiar care the sins to which ye were formerly addicted. With abhorrence banish from you falsehood, lies, and all manner of deceit and fraud, which are so base in themselves, and so eversive of all true morality. In all your speeches and dealings with men make conscience of the strictest regard to truth; for in both civil and religious societies we are members of one body, and therefore ought always to act truly and candidly, as having a joint concern in the welfare of the whole. 26. Watch over your passions, that they may be kept under due government. Labour to restrain and regulate your anger, that it may never be causeless, excessive, or mischievous. And if at any time ye are, through temptation, hurried into sinful passion, quickly endeavour, through the gracious assistance of God, to suppress it, and be reconciled to your brother. Let it never rest in your bosom till sunset, to unfit your minds for your evening devotions, or to disturb your sleep, or rise with you the next day. 27. And that ye may not give Satan a place in your hearts, to irritate or keep up turbulent and revengeful passions, or gratify and give him an advantage against you, by your yielding to his malicious and destructive designs, stand on your guard against his temptations; whenever ye find your spirits heated, resist him, steadfast in the faith, who watches all occasions to ensnare you; and take heed of giving ear to false accusers and slanderers, who, as his agents, labour to incense you against others without ground. 28. And if any of you, either before or since your conversion, have been guilty of private thefts or frauds, let them, as persons who have learned Christ, hereafter abhor every form of dishonesty; and in the station and employment in which God hath placed them, let them earn, by laborious industry and care, what, by the blessing of God, may maintain themselves and family, and even help to relieve the necessities of the poor; that thus they may become a blessing, instead of a nuisance and burden, to civil and religious communities. 29. And let no light, frothy, profane, indecent, obscene, or opprobrious language, which marks the corruption of the heart from which it proceeds, and tends to corrupt others, ever come out of your mouth; but let all your words be under the conduct of a gracious spirit, and be wise, prudent, and suited to persons, times, and places, and adapted in the way of counsel, caution, reproof, comfort, or instruction, to promote the spiritual benefit of the company you are in, and recommend true and undefiled religion to their consciences and hearts. 30. Beware lest with any of these things, so directly contrary to the holy nature, will, operations, gifts, and graces of the Holy Ghost, who loves and effects all true holiness in the souls of men, ye provoke him to withdraw his gracious presence, and deprive you of his comforts—by which ye have been plainly marked with God's image as his people, and have a blessed pledge and earnest of that full salvation which ye shall receive at death and in the last judgment. 31. And to prevent your offending him, or losing his comfortable and sealing presence, carefully avoid and abhor all rancour, severity, and sourness of temper; all furious raging and ungovernable passions; all causeless and excessive anger; all loud threatening and scolding, noisy quarrels and contentions; all railings, defamations, and backbitings, which are so dishonouring to God and injurious to men; and all malicious, spiteful, envious, and injurious thoughts or heart-burnings. 32. And in order to cherish his presence and influence, always labour, as assisted by him, to cultivate an affectionate, affable, and benevolent disposition and behaviour, taking pleasure to do offices of kindness and friendship one to another; sympathize with, and show all tenderness, pity, and mercy towards the weak, afflicted, and discouraged; frankly and freely forgive and forget those injuries which are done you by brethren, in consideration and imitation of that infinitely greater forgiveness of your manifold and aggravated transgressions, which God, in the riches of his grace, hath extended by faith in the infinitely precious obedience and death of his dear and only begotten Son.

Ver. 8. He led captivity captive. 'Gained a conquest over enemies who had led others captive' (Whitby). 'Expressive of his conquest over sin, Satan, the world, death, and the grave' (Gill). The word occurs but once again in the New Testament, Re. 13. 10, and certainly does not apply to parties holding others, but to those who are themselves in captivity. And is not this the meaning here also? Were not sinners in a state of captivity? and are they not therefore the 'captivity' whom he 'led captive,' as it were, in delivering them from all their enemies, binding them to himself in 'cords of love,' and 'bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ,' 2 Co. 10. 5. C.

Ver. 15. Speaking (rather, 'maintaining') the truth in love, which is a difficult duty, because of the gainsaying of unreasonable men, who will credit almost anything reported on the authority of men, but deny almost everything testified by the authority of God. C.

Ver. 21. If so be. Rather, 'inasmuch as ye have heard him,' that is, as speaking by his apostles. See Lu. 10. 16. C.

Ver. 23. In the spirit of your mind. In the disposition and character of your mind. C.

Ver. 24. After God. Formed and modelled according to God, the original perfection, of which man was an image, Ge. 1. 26. C.

Ver. 26. Offences will arise and injuries be inflicted; and if so, it is lawful for you to 'be angry;' but you are prohibited from indulging it so as to sin against justice or mercy. C.

Ver. 27. Open no door of passion by which the enemy may enter into the heart. C.

Ver. 30. Grieve not the Holy Spirit by any of the sins previously enumerated. It avails nothing to say that this grieving is figurative. It is rather to be literally understood, by referring to the grief of Christ at the hardness of the Jewish hearts, Mar. 3. 5, whereby it is seen how the Spirit that was given him without measure dictated and partook in the community of his grief, Ps. 95. 10; He. 3. 10. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What a credit are believers to their happy station in Christ when they are meek, patient, forbearing one another in love, and united in sentiment and affection! And deep are the obligations they are under to Christian love and unity, who are all members

CHAPTER V.

2 After general exhortations, to love, 3 to fly fornication, 4 and all uncleanness. 7 not to converse with the wicked, 15 to walk warily, and to be 18 filled with the Spirit, 22 he descendeth to the particular duties, how wives ought to obey their husbands, 25 and husbands ought to love their wives, 32 even as Christ doth his church.

2 And <sup>b</sup>walk in love, as Christ also <sup>c</sup>hath of the same mystical body of Christ; all animated by the same Spirit; all partakers of the same hope and heavenly inheritance; all related to and interested in the same Lord and Saviour; all agreed in the same fundamental doctrines of faith, under the same baptismal seal and engagement; and have all the same loving God and Father, who is above them all, as their Governor, and dwells in them all by his Spirit.—What blessings may we not hope for from our once crucified but now exalted Redeemer! With bounteous care he scatters his gifts among the children of men. And ample is the provision of offices, officers, gifts, and graces he has provided for his church, to promote her growth in numbers, unity, and order; and of all her members in knowledge, faith, and love; and to prevent their being seduced into error and wickedness.—But dreadful is the case of wicked men, especially when they have provoked God to give them up to their own hearts' lusts. How ignorant, how stupid, how bent and eager on the most shocking abominations, they then become!—Odious is an inward principle of sin, wherever it is found. How corrupt, abominable, and deceiving! It perverts and inflames the passions, and fills them with anger, wrath, and malice. It hurries men into deceit, falsehood, idleness, and fraud. It renders their discourse unsavoury, defiling, clamorous, and injurious; and it and its fruits gratify the devil and offend the Holy Ghost. But excellent and adorning is that inward habit or principle of grace in which believers do more and more abound. Delightfully it leads men to God, subdues their angry passions, renders them kind, tender-hearted, and ready to forgive injuries; makes them honest, upright, faithful, and industrious, and their converse godly and edifying; and excites them to a temper and conduct answerable to the dealings of the Holy Ghost, and the endearing obligations of God's superlative and forgiving kindness to them.

CHAPTER V. Ver. 1. Let therefore the astonishing kindness and forgiving mercy of God your Father and his Spirit excite you, as his beloved and loving children, sought and won by him, to imitate him in exercising all kindness and forgiveness one towards another. 2. Nor is the consideration and example of Jesus Christ less suited to engage us to a constant, progressive, friendly, and affectionate love one to another, since he has, with superlative condescension and grace, first loved all the race, and, in manifestation thereof, has freely become our Saviour, and yielded up his great and infinite Self to the most debased service and terrible death for us, as a living sacrifice to save us from sin, and reconcile us to God, to the highest honour and delight of all his perfections. 3. But to return to the warning which I had begun:—in a manner becoming Christians renewed, sanctified, and devoted to God, earnestly flee, abstain from, and utterly detest every form of unchastity, and all that indecency, immodesty, and lewdness in gestures, looks, dress, or acts, that approach towards or tempt others to it; and, in like manner, avoid and detest all irregular and impure desires after forbidden objects, and inordinate love to or pursuits after the things of this world, which would make you discontented without them, or to take dishonourable or unjust methods to procure or retain them. 4. Never secretly indulge any shameful practices, nor any light, wanton, or obscene speeches or jests which offend God and tend to grieve or inflame the hearers; but let your lips be rather employed in commendations of God and Christ, and his works, and in thankful acknowledgments of and praises loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour.

3 But <sup>a</sup>fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named amongst you, as becometh saints;

4 Neither <sup>e</sup>filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient; but rather giving of thanks.

5 For this ye know, <sup>a</sup>that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, <sup>2</sup>hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.

6 Let <sup>h</sup>no man deceive you with vain words: for <sup>i</sup>because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience. <sup>3</sup>

7 Be <sup>j</sup>not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 For <sup>k</sup>ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: <sup>l</sup>walk as children of light; for his kindness. 5. For having learned the doctrines of the Christian religion, ye cannot but know that no person who is addicted to, and lives and allows himself in, the practice of whoredom, or indulges himself in impure affections and lascivious actions; nor any worldly-minded covetous wretch, who loves, desires, and delights in his worldly enjoyments more than in God himself, be his profession what it will,—has any title to, or, continuing such, can have any present or future enjoyment of Christ and his Father in his kingdom, with the glories which attend it. 6. Let no Gentile philosopher, Jewish corrupter of God's law, or any other, by their plausible, empty, and fallacious speeches, make you to think these crimes small; for, on account of them, all who obstinately persist in them shall be excluded from the heavenly kingdom of God, and be exposed to his wrath here and hereafter, which shall come rushing in full floods upon them. 7. By prayer, watchfulness, and diligence, labour therefore against these things, and never be companions, encouragers, or imitators of such persons in their iniquities, lest ye also share in their just and tremendous punishments. 8. For in your heathen and unconverted state ye were utterly ignorant of spiritual things, and walked in the dark paths of wickedness; but now the Spirit of God hath enlightened your mind to know the truth as it is in Jesus—in whom, as your Head, ye have all light, wisdom, and purity, and from whom, as his members, ye derive all knowledge and grace—it is therefore your duty and privilege, with perseverance and daily progress, to live and act before God like persons begotten of God by the light of the gospel, and enlightened and directed by the Word and Spirit of Christ. 9. Having a conversation answerable to the fruits produced and cherished by the Holy Ghost, which are directly contrary to what I have warned you against, and consist of everything kind and beneficial, and in rendering to God and men their respective dues, in a constant and steadfast adherence to the truths of the gospel, and in exact truth, integrity, and faithfulness, in all that ye say and do. 10. And by the assistance and light of the Spirit, trying and proving from the Scriptures what is well-pleasing to the Lord Christ, and heartily approving thereof, and practising it, as an evidence of your regard to it, and thus approving yourselves faithful servants and obedient children to Christ and his Father. 11. And that ye may walk as children of the light, avoid all partnership in, all countenancing or encouraging of, sinful practices, which are unprofitable and injurious, which proceed from ignorance of God, are shameful in themselves, often committed in secret, and leading to eternal misery; but by friendly, kind, and prudent admonitions of the guilty, and especially by your holy and circumspect conversation, expose their deformity, confute, reprove, and condemn them. 12. For it would put to the blush, and even shock, a religious, sober, and modest mind, so much as to mention, except in necessary reproof, several of the detestable practices which your heathen neighbours, unwilling to expose their own character, commit secretly in their idolatrous worship or otherwise. 13. But by the enlightening influence of the Word and Spirit of God, ye are enabled to discern the deformity of those sinful practices, and to live in a contrary manner—in order to convince your wicked neighbours, and shame them out of their wickedness. 14. Wherefore the Lord, in the Old Testament predictions relative to the calling of the Gentiles, plainly intimates that Christ's enlightening, quickening, comforting, and sanctifying influence is conveyed in the gospel call, and ought to be attended with your earnest endeavours to shake off your ignorance, stupidity, insensibility, and spiritual death—even as his quickening power was conveyed to dead persons in his calls to arise. 15. Take heed therefore that your whole conversation be accurate, exactly answerable to your Christian character, light, obligations, and the rule of God's Word, as under his all-seeing eye, and in view of enemies as well as friends—not as persons ignorant, injudicious, unwise, and heedless, but as those who are taught of God the truth as it is in Jesus, and who wisely avoid exposing yourselves to infamy or hurt, or giving any occasion of stumbling to others. 16. And see that, by a diligent and circumspect Christian walk, as being deeply affected with godly sorrow for your former mispending of time, you carefully improve every moment to the best advantage in the service of Christ, as if ye had dearly bought it out of the hand of sin, Satan, and the sloth, ease, and worldly business to which it was formerly devoted, and the rather as the times in which ye live are times of great immorality, ignorance, profaneness, and of persecution, trouble, and danger, in which both Jews and Gentiles wait for your halting, that they may speak evil against you, and against Jesus Christ and the gospel on your account. 17. Take heed therefore that ye no more act foolishly and inconsiderately in the matters of God and eternal salvation, nor needlessly expose yourselves to the malice and fury of your enemies, but conduct yourselves suitably to your Christian character; and endeavour, through divine grace, to live and act as those who understand and highly regard the will of Jesus Christ as the rule of the purity and prudence of your conversation. 18. And to prevent your falling into imprudent or abominable conduct, carefully avoid all unseasonable or immoderate use of intoxicating liquors, which cause us in an unmanly, nay, worse than brutal manner to profane and prostitute the bounties of providence, which enfeeble, defile, and disorder all the powers of both body and soul, and prompt to babbling, blasphemy, and all manner of madness and debauchery; but let it be your great concern to be filled with the influences, gifts, graces, and comforts of the Holy Ghost, which qualify for and excite to everything prudent, holy, and pleasant. 19. And either by yourselves or in fellowship with one another express the joys of your heart in singing psalms, songs, and hymns, which ye either find in Scripture, or are composed by holy persons, or those inspired among you—to the honour of our Lord Jesus Christ, and his Father in him. 20. And always maintaining a grateful disposition of heart to God for all the mercies which ye receive—temporal, spiritual, or eternal, pleasant or painful—improve every occasion of expressing your thankfulness to God, the Father of Christ, and our Father in him, as the original source of these blessings, and through the person and mediation of Christ, who purchased and bestows them, and in whom alone our praises and prayers can be presented acceptably to God. 21. And directed, invited, and enabled by these influences of the Spirit, study a humble performance of all relative duties incumbent upon you in your natural, civil, public, or private stations of life, as persons who have the fear of God implanted in your hearts, and whose consciences are deeply awed and impressed with his authority in his Word, and with his exact observation of your conduct, and his future judgment. 22. Particularly do you believing wives pay all becoming reverence, honour, subjection, and obedience to your own husbands, who have, by the marriage-bond, devoted themselves to you, as your loving superiors; and always act herein as in the sight and presence of the Lord Christ, from love to his person, in obedience to his authority, and with an eye to his glory, and in the manner in which his people are subject to him. 23. For by the law of nature and marriage, the husband is constituted the head, guide, and guardian of the wife, in a manner somewhat similar to that in which Christ, as Mediator, is constituted the Head, Governor, and Protector of the church—in which relation he is their Saviour and Redeemer from everything sinful and wretched, and to everything truly honourable or happy. 24. As therefore the church is cheerfully and faithfully subject to

9 (For <sup>m</sup>the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth;)

10 Proving <sup>o</sup>what is acceptable unto the Lord.

24 Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, <sup>l</sup>so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.

25 Husbands, <sup>n</sup>love your wives, even as Christ<sup>o</sup> also loved the church, and gave himself for it;

26 That <sup>p</sup>he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, 27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, <sup>q</sup>not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.

28 So ought men to love their wives as <sup>r</sup>their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For we are <sup>s</sup>members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 For<sup>t</sup> this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but I speak <sup>u</sup>concerning Christ and the church.<sup>7</sup>

the authority of Christ in all her spiritual concerns, so let wives, with meekness, willingness, and fidelity, be subject to their husbands in all things lawful in the Lord. 25. On the other hand, to procure the kind submission of your wives, see that you husbands never tyrannize over them, or be passionate or bitter against them, but by all gentle carriage, due honour, tender sympathy, and every other form of kind behaviour towards their soul and body, manifest the most endearing and ardent affection, in imitation of Christ, who so loved the church that he freely gave up himself to the most debased service, suffering, and death in her room, and for her spiritual and eternal benefit; 26. That by his blood and Spirit, through his Word, he might deliver all men from the guilt, power, and pollution of sin, and justify, renew, sanctify, and consecrate them to the service of God; 27. That having gradually sanctified and adorned them with his Spirit and grace, he might, in due time, place them in his immediate presence in heaven, entirely freed from every remainder of sin and trouble, holy and happy. 28. Influenced by and in imitation of this peculiar, superlative, and abiding love of Christ, husbands ought to love their wives sincerely, constantly, tenderly, and ardently as they do their own bodies, especially since everything they do for their welfare and comfort will turn out for their own. 29. For no reasonable man, out of enmity to the health, ease, or comfort of his own body, ever neglected or abused it, but, from a principle of natural affection, feeds, clothes, warms, and refreshes it; and so every husband ought to deal with his wife, who is <sup>one</sup> flesh with him—even as Christ, in his most affectionate love, takes care of his church, which he hath espoused to and made one with himself. 30. For we who believe in him are members of his mystical body, and, in a spiritual sense, are more closely united to him than ever Eve was to Adam, and derive all our grace and glory from his person, as crucified for and united to us. 31. The standing law of marriage mentioned by Adam immediately after the formation and espousals of Eve, requires such closeness of union and tenderness of affection between married persons, as if they were incorporated into one body, and were more to be regarded and loved than even parents themselves. 32. That close union between married persons, particularly Adam and Eve, was indeed an emblem of the spiritual union between Christ and his members, whom, as their Head and Husband, he animates, influences, rules, governs, and cares for in the most tender manner. 33. But in connection with this, it also implies that every husband ought to love his wife with the same sincere and singular affection as he does himself; and that every wife ought, with a conjugal love, to pay all becoming respect, honour, and obedience to her husband.

Ver. 4. Filthiness. Obscenity of speech.—Festung. Lewd expressions, occasionally characterized as double entendre—in which, as Chandler well observes, ‘indecent is couched in a witty turn, and becomes, by being considered witty, the more dangerous and corrupting.’—Not convenient. Not suitable to the Christian profession of purity and godliness. C.

Ver. 5. In the kingdom of Christ and of God. Rather, ‘in the kingdom of him who is Christ and God.’ See Middleton on the Greek Art., ch. iii. p. 93. 94. Lond. 1808. C.

Ver. 13. ‘But they all (i.e. all those evil things done in secret, as mentioned in ver. 12) being reproved (or rebuked by contrast with the purity of Christian virtues), are made manifest (are shown to be sinful; the lurking evil is revealed) by the light (the light of Christian doctrine, Christian graces, and Christian character); for everything that is made manifest is light (it is not, and cannot be any longer dark; and consequently though evil deeds are done in darkness, and are thus kept secret, yet if light be shed upon them, their true character at once appears).’ P.

Ver. 14. The apostle does not quote the words, but gives the meaning of the prophet—referring most probably to Is. 60. 1–3; see also 26. 19.—Arise from among the dead. C.

Ver. 16. Redeeming. ‘Recovering the time lost in heathenism’ (Saurin). ‘Buying up the time—a most precious commodity (though by so many held cheap)—out of the hands of sin, Satan, ease, sloth, and worldly business—at the expense of self-denial, watchfulness, zeal, and diligence’ (Benson). Is it not rather, making the most of the time, as he that sells an article to him that gives the highest price?—Because the days are evil—every fragment of existence being fraught with temptations to indolence, self-indulgence, fear of danger, desertion of duty; because the continuance of opportunity is uncertain, and, at the best, the period of life is short. C.

Ver. 18. Excess. Dissoluteness, whereby the reason being overwhelmed, and the passions excited and let loose, the door of the heart is opened for the entrance of every sin. There is most probably an allusion to the Bacchanalia, when men and women, under pretence of religion, gave themselves up to intoxication and the wildest revelry. C.

Ver. 19. The distinction of ‘psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs’ is not now certainly understood. The names might include other compositions besides those contained in the scriptural collection called David’s, but they may also be confined to that collection; and surely before they be extended farther some authority beyond conjecture must be furnished. That the Ephesian converts and other primitive Christians employed nothing but the voice in their sacred music is attested by Justin, Respon. ad Orthodox. p. 107.—ἀνευ ὀργάνων, ‘without musical instruments,’ is his expression. C.

Ver. 21. This is the general injunction applicable to all ranks and conditions. Order and complete submission to law must characterize the Christian community. Having laid down the general principle, Paul gives three examples of its practical appli-

CHAPTER VI.

1 The duty of children towards their parents, 5 of servants towards their masters. 10 Our life is a warfare, 12 not only against flesh and blood, but also spiritual enemies. 13 The complete armour of a Christian, 18 and how it ought to be used. 21 Tychicus is commended.

CHILDREN, obey<sup>a</sup> your parents in the <sup>b</sup>Lord: for this is right.

2 Honour<sup>b</sup> thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise;

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

4 And, <sup>c</sup>ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the <sup>d</sup>nurture and admonition<sup>3</sup> of the Lord.

5 <sup>e</sup>Servants,<sup>4</sup> be obedient to them that are <sup>f</sup>your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in <sup>g</sup>singleness of your heart, as unto Christ;

6 Not with eye-service, as men-pleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart;

7 With<sup>g</sup> good-will doing service, <sup>h</sup>as to the Lord, and not to men;

8 Knowing <sup>i</sup>that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, whether <sup>j</sup>he be bond or free.

cation: (1) In regard to husbands and wives; (2) Parents and children; (3) Masters and servants. P.

Ver. 23. Paul here, to prevent error or misunderstanding, adds this important particular, in which the comparison between Christ and the church on the one hand, and man and wife on the other, does not hold:—‘He himself is the Saviour of the body.’ Alford clearly develops the meaning: ‘In Christ’s case the headship is united with, nay, gained by, his having saved the body in the process of redemption. So that I am not alleging Christ’s headship as one entirely identical with that other; for he has a claim to it and office in it peculiar to himself.’ P.

Ver. 26. And cleanse it, &c. ‘And cleanse it in the laver of (spiritual) water (revealed) in the Word.’ See Is. 51. 1; Mat. 5. 6; Ju. 4. 14; 6. 35. C.

Ver. 32. This is a great mystery. From this phrase the church is theologically and properly denominated the mystical, in distinction from the personal, body of Christ.—Note. The church is Christ’s body, because possessing with him one life and one Spirit, Col. 3. 4; Ep. 2. 18. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With readiness ought Christians to imitate Jesus Christ and his Father in their kindness and love to men. And the faith and sense of their redeeming love should make us carefully avoid all gross wickedness of every form, as utterly unworthy of our Christian character, privileges, and obligations, and as odious to God and ruinous to ourselves. A visible change of behaviour should be studied by all such as are awakened unto life by the powerful voice of Christ. Diligently should they avoid all fellowship with wicked persons or deeds, be watchful and circumspect in evil days, and use great care to improve time to the best advantage. Great should be our concern to have our heart filled with the Holy Ghost, and to live always under his comforting influences—in everything giving thanks to Christ, and to God through him. Earnestly should we labour to fulfil the duties of every station, from a principle of faith and filial fear of God. And happy are those families of which Christ is the centre, and his redeeming kindness the great pattern and motive of mutual behaviour!

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1. Do you children, whatever be your age and circumstances in the world, submissively, readily, and cheerfully hearken to and obey the counsels and commands of your parents in all lawful things, from love to Christ, regard to his authority, and for his glory and honour; for, according to all laws, human and divine, this is a just debt, and is highly fit and acceptable in itself, as ye have been brought into being by their means, and are so much beholden to their care and kindness. 2. Yea, the first command of the second table of the moral law, and 9 And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, forbearing<sup>5</sup> threatening: knowing that your<sup>6</sup> Master also is in heaven; <sup>k</sup>neither is there respect of persons with him.

10 Finally, my brethren, <sup>l</sup>be strong in the Lord, and in <sup>n</sup>the power of his might.

11 Put<sup>o</sup> on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the <sup>p</sup>wiles of the devil.

13 Wherefore <sup>s</sup>take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to with-stand in the <sup>t</sup>evil day, and, having done all,<sup>1</sup> to stand.

14 Stand therefore, "having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness;

15 And<sup>u</sup> your feet shod with the <sup>v</sup>preparation of the gospel of peace;

16 Above<sup>x</sup> all,<sup>3</sup> taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.

the only command which has a promise annexed to itself in particular, requires every one of you to think and speak of, and conduct yourselves towards, both your parents in the most affectionate, reverential, submissive, obedient, and honourable manner; 3. That, through the blessing of God upon your obedience, your life on earth may continue long and prosperous. 4. And do you parents carefully avoid everything humour-some, unreasonable, or harsh towards your children, which might provoke their resentment, exasperate their passions, and prejudice them against you or your Christian religion; and, by a holy and diligent example, by much fervent prayer, by earnest and persuasive instruction, and by prudent, moderate, and seasonable correction, administered to them in obedience to Christ's authority, and in dependence on his blessing to concur therewith, bring them up in the knowledge, fear, worship, and obedience of God in him.—Earnestly watch over and restrain the first appearances of inward corruptions, errors, or immoralities, and direct and encourage them to everything dutiful towards God or men.—5. Servants, make conscience of obeying all the lawful commands of your earthly masters and mistresses, who, in things pertaining to this world, are set over you by God's providence, and have a right to your services, whether they are believers or not. Be willingly and faithfully subject to them, with a reverential fear of their, and especially of God's displeasure, if ye should betray your trust, and embezzle their goods, or disobey their just orders. And see that ye do all this with a sincere, ingenuous, and honest heart, as therein desiring and intending to serve the Lord Christ, and adorn the doctrines of the gospel. 6. Fulfil your services with diligence, constancy, and fidelity—not merely when the eyes of your masters or others are upon you, as if ye only aimed at pleasing men for your own honour or advantage, but as from regard to Christ's authority, and always under his eye, and in view of being judged by him, and in order to promote his honour, doing whatever God requires of you in this matter from a sincere principle of religious regard towards him. 7. In this manner perform every part of your due service freely, affectionately, and industriously, and with all readiness of mind, as persons who love your masters, and have their interest at heart—doing everything which God or they call you to from a sense of duty to Jesus Christ, your supreme Lord and Master, that ye may serve, please, and glorify him, and not merely to acquit yourselves in the sight and gain the esteem of men. 8. And know, for your encouragement, that however your masters may reward you in this world, ye shall receive a gracious and eternal reward of all your faithful services from the Lord Jesus in the great day of judgment. 9. And ye believing masters, take heed that ye fulfil the duties of your stations with the like views, in singleness of heart as to Christ, and according to the will of God; and that ye behave towards your servants not in a domineering, severe, threatening, insolent, cruel, or oppressive manner, but with gentleness and humanity—always remembering that ye yourselves are the servants of our Lord Christ, who takes notice of your conduct, and will call you to account for it, without paying any more respect to you than to the meanest of your servants. 10. And that ye may perform your relative and other duties, and resist all the influences of sin, Satan, and the world, who labour to oppose you in your progress heaven-ward, set out and press forward, like valiant soldiers, under the Captain of salvation, not in your own strength, but in the strength of Christ, and through his almighty influences enabling you to every duty, service, and suffering to which ye are at any time called. 11. And that, while ye set out in his strength, ye may be thoroughly furnished for all encounters with your spiritual enemies, always earnestly endeavour, under a sense of their power and your own weakness and danger, to live in the constant exercise of all those graces, and use of those means, which God appoints, gives, and makes powerful for the full defence and spiritual safety of his people, that ye may be able to withstand and defeat the numerous, insnaring, fallacious, and cunning attacks of the devil and his instruments. 12. And great need we have of all this help; for, in our holy warfare, we ministers and others who have enlisted under Christ's banner have to engage in close and sharp contention not only with the carnal reasonings, authority, and violence of men, but with all ranks and orders of malicious, crafty, deceitful, powerful spirits who, through the permission of God, have erected an usurped empire over the minds and hearts of blinded sinners! and being in themselves most vilely and implacably wicked, make it their whole business to propagate spiritual wickedness, unbelief, pride, idolatry, error, malice, wrath, envy; and who, hovering in the air, and seated in our souls, strenuously labour to prevent our obtaining the eternal inheritance. 13. Since ye have therefore so many subtle and powerful enemies to contend with, see that ye be fully armed, and, in Jesus' strength, make a proper use of every spiritual weapon, defensive or offensive, wherewith God hath furnished you, that ye may be able to resist and overcome all these or other formidable enemies, in every day of conflict and trial. 14. In order therefore to your obtaining a glorious victory, it is necessary that, in the strength of Christ, ye, in your stations, indefatigably and incessantly, with all watchfulness, diligence, and steadfastness, keep your ground in the field of battle, having your whole man girt about with the truths of God revealed in his Word, and with sincerity and uprightness of heart and conversation, that thereby ye may be steady, resolute, and active: let your heart be protected by the sacrifice of Christ applied to your conscience, and by the daily exercise of righteousness and true holiness, which proceed from faith and love. 15. And that ye may be enabled to hold out against all hardships and snares, and be ready for every encounter, let your affections and conversation be duly influenced by the doctrines, promises, encouragements, and provisions of the gospel, by which God exhibits, offers, and applies the whole peace and consolation of the new kingdom, that nothing may hurt, discompose, or embroil you. 16. But especially let a lively exercise of faith in Christ's person, blood, righteousness, and fullness, and the power and grace of God in him through the declarations and promises of the new kingdom, be your all-protecting shield, by which you may be enabled to silence every terrifying charge of guilt; to repel every attempt to surprise you into hard or blasphemous thoughts of God or Christ, or sudden emotions of wrath, revenge, unchastity, or other wickedness; and to disarm of its force every furious temptation or sudden suggestion wherewith the devil may attempt to penetrate and influence your soul with horror, anguish, or guilt. 17. And let the hope of eternal salvation protect you from fear in danger, and fortify you against the most furious and threatening attacks of Satan and his confederates.

And let the doctrines, promises, commands, threatenings, and histories of God's Word, which the Holy Ghost indited, explains, and applies, be used, in the hand of your faith, for the destruction and confusion of your spiritual enemies. 18. And as none of your efforts, or even the graces, oracles, or ordinances of God, can be effectual without the special aids of the divine Spirit, maintain always a praying frame of heart; and let all your conflicts be attended with solemn, stated, or ejaculatory prayer, in all sorts of addresses to God, and on all occasions, public or private, in the name of Christ, and by the assistance of his Spirit, and with your whole heart, for all seasonable help and direction. And while ye watch against the designs and stratagems of your enemies, and for opportunities to annoy and defeat them, watch also for convenient opportunities of spiritual influences in and gracious answers to your prayers; and continuing constant and unwearied therein, earnestly beg that God would not only avert evils from, or bestow blessings on yourselves, but also all your fellow-Christians, that they, along with you, may stand their ground in their spiritual warfare, and more and more abound in light, grace, comfort, and holiness, to the glory of God and confusion of Satan and his instruments. 19. And particularly pray for me, your faithful and affectionate apostle and friend, whose work and trials are so important and difficult, and whose strength is so small, that God would relieve me from my present imprisonment, and give opportunity and ability to publish the great mysteries of the gospel, in an open, bold, plain, impartial, earnest, and successful manner; 20. That I, the graciously honoured ambassador of Christ, who am now a prisoner for preaching that gospel, may yet have opportunity, and be enabled to preach it undauntedly, freely, and plainly, according to the duty of my office, without molestation. 21, 22. And that ye may the better know how to order your supplications or thanksgivings for me, I have sent Tychicus, one of your dear Asiatic friends, and an upright, diligent, and laborious minister of Christ, with this letter, that he may fully acquaint you with my various sufferings and comforts under them, and my labours and success—that, by informing you how the Lord supports, directs, and comforts me under my trials, and by his preaching the gospel to you, he may comfort your spirits, and encourage you to trust in the Lord, and persevere in his way, amidst all the opposition ye can meet with. 23. And for this end, may abundant peace with God, your own consciences, and one another, and all prosperity of soul or body, abide with you; and the most ardent love to Jesus Christ and his people, together with, and springing from, a lively exercise of faith, flourish and increase in your souls and the souls of other Christians and ministers—by special influence from God the Father, the original fountain of all new-covenant blessings, and from Jesus Christ, through whose merits and mediation they are conveyed. 24. May the free love and favour of Christ, and of God in him, and all its blessed fruits and effects, especially in all seasonable discoveries, communications, and assistances for the producing of strong and lively exercises of every grace, be richly extended to you at Ephesus, and to all others who heartily, unfeignedly, perpetually, and according to the truth and tenor of the gospel, desire, esteem, and delight in our only and complete Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ.

¶ Written from Rome unto the Ephesians by Tychicus.

Word, however, the existence of a satanic kingdom, ordered into different ranks and principalities, is explicitly declared, of which a few historic facts are recorded—such as, the deception in paradise; the afflictions of Job; the persuasion of David to number the people; the temptation of our Lord in the wilderness—which, with some others, are specimens sufficient, not to gratify a prying curiosity, yet to produce a more important result—the inculcation upon believers of constant watchfulness and earnest prayer lest they enter into temptation. C.

Ver. 16. Fiery darts were slender reeds filled with combustible materials, ignited, and shot from bows, for the purpose of burning tents, stockades, or besieged towns. These the adroit and courageous soldiers were accustomed to receive on their ordinary shields, or other defences, covered with raw and wet hides, which are said to have been sometimes saturated with alum. These 'fiery darts' form apt emblems of many of those persecutions by which believers have in all ages been assailed—persecutions sometimes against their principles, sometimes against their character, sometimes against their property, and sometimes against their lives; against all which, trust in Jesus is their only sufficient shield. See Ge. 15. 1; Ps. 5. 12; 84. 11. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are those families in which parents, children, masters, and servants make Christ's law their rule, his example their pattern, his love their motive, and his honour their end, in all their conduct. Numerous and subtle are the enemies and hard the trials of every true Christian. But since they are rooted in Christ, the Captain of their salvation, his strength, and the complete armour he has provided for them, are sufficient to withstand and overcome all opposition. Happy are they who are taught of God to cleave to him, follow his direction, and improve his armour. And nothing is more useful than a vigorous faith and persevering and fervent prayer. As ministers are peculiarly exposed to temptations and troubles, they ought to have a double share in the prayers of Christians; and never will a minister's heart be actuated by the grace of God but he will be ready to pray for his people.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

Having read the Epistle to the Ephesians, it is impossible to overlook how distinctly it assumes, at the close, a domestic character. The Epistle to the Romans, commencing with the deep things of God, and continuing to expound the mysteries of redemption, draws out its practical conclusions, ch. xii. xiii. xiv., in the form of the most beautiful and splendid generalities. Throughout the Epistles to the Corinthians, like general precepts are interspersed; and in the Epistle to the Galatians, in a form more condensed, ch. 5. 14-26; 6. 1-10. But in this epistle, while the general precepts of a holy morality are earnestly enforced, ch. 4. 15-32; 5. 1, 2, the domestic duties and virtues, with their motives and obligations, assume a distinct and specific form, ch. 5. 21-33; 6. 1-9. By what peculiar circumstance, in the case of the Ephesians, the apostle was led to accumulate and urge these beautiful and holy precepts, is not declared; but if conjecture may be allowed, perhaps the cause may be found in that long-continued and frequent domestic intercourse with them to which the apostle alludes, Ac. 20. 20, 31, and the deep affection towards the apostle with which that intercourse had inspired his Ephesian converts, Ac. 20. 37, 38. In writing to them, the apostle's heart was naturally carried back to their 'happy homes;' and husbands and wives, and parents and children, and masters and servants, all rose up to his recollection, and the Spirit of God employed the occasion to enrich the church with that lovely code of domestic laws by which the Epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians stand peculiarly distinguished. C.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

Philippi was a considerable city on the eastern frontier of Macedonia, now part of European Turkey, which Philip, the father of Alexander the Great, enlarged, fortified, and called by his own name. Directed by a vision, Paul came hither from Asia, and planted a Christian church, Ac. xvi.; and afterwards visited them in his way to Jerusalem, Ac. 20. 1-6. Their concern for him was peculiarly affectionate; and, notwithstanding their poverty, they distinguished themselves in sending him seasonable and liberal supplies. Epaphroditus having brought him their bounty, during his imprisonment at Rome, he sent by him, upon his return, this excellent letter,—in which he expresses his great affection for them, and thankfulness for their favours; and exhorts them to constancy, courage, and perseverance under sufferings, and to public-spiritedness, humility, holy joy, fervent prayer, and diligent progress in universal holiness.

[The first name of Philippi was Datus, and it is peculiarly remarkable as the first place in Europe in which the gospel was preached. The references to the Old Testament are, Ps. 22. 6; 55. 22; Is. 40. 23; 56. 10; Je. 9. 23, 24; Da. 9. 26. C.]

CHAPTER I.

3 He testifieth his thankfulness to God, and his love toward them, for the fruits of their faith, and fellowship in his sufferings, 9 daily praying for their increase in grace; 12 he sheweth what good the faith of Christ had received by his troubles at Rome, 21 and how ready he is to glorify Christ either by his life or death, 27 exhorting them to unity, 28 and to fortitude in persecution.

11 Being<sup>10</sup> filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1, 2. Paul and Timothy—joint servants of Jesus Christ in ministering his gospel and promoting his kingdom and glory, to all the private Christians at Philippi who, by virtue of union with him, are renewed in their hearts and lives by the sanctifying Spirit of God, and devoted to his service; together with their spiritual overseers, who labour in doctrine or government, and their deacons, who take care of their poor and other temporal affairs of their church—earnestly wish the most abundant manifestations of divine favour, with all its distinguishing fruits and blessings, from our loving God and Father, as the Spring and Fountain of all grace, and from Jesus Christ, as the Fountain and Distributer thereof. 3-5. As often as I think of you, and what God has done for and by you, I cannot but bless him for putting me into the ministry, and making me instrumental in your conversion; and in all my stated and solemn addresses to him for each of you, I am delightfully constrained to praise and thank him for your gracious and continued admission, through faith, to all the rich and glorious privileges, promises, hopes, and enjoyments of the gospel state; and for your familiar communion with God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and with each other; and for your readily communicating of your substance for the support of the gospel, and to me in my sufferings for its sake; 6. Being assured, from the testimony, nature, purpose, and promise of God, and from the merits and intercession of Christ and the indwelling of his Spirit, that he who has changed your spiritual state, and begun your sanctification, honour, and comfort, will undoubtedly, in his wisdom, love, faithfulness, and power, maintain and increase it, if ye are only faithful to the truth till Christ shall come to be glorified in his saints. 7. And while you lie so much on my heart in my prayers to God for you, your patient bearing of tribulations and kind Christian sympathy with me under mine, which I suffer for the cause of Christ, together with your honourable and steadfast profession and practice of the gospel truths, make me to hope this good work of grace is really begun in most of your hearts. 8. For, affected with and in imitation of Jesus' redeeming love, God alone knows how earnestly I desire to be further instrumental in the spiritual and eternal welfare of each of you, whom I look on as his dear members. 9. And in my fervent affection I earnestly beg of him that your love to him and his Son, his Word, ordinances, ways, ministers, and people, may still more and more increase, along with and under the influence of a growing knowledge and experience of the doctrine of Christ. 10, 11. That ye may carefully examine, prove, and approve those sentiments and practices which are truly valuable and important, that so ye may be found genuine Christians—pure in heart and life, free from hypocrisy and deceit in your holy profession, and uncorrupted in your principles and designs, temper, and behaviour; and may, in the view of Christ's coming to call you to account for your conduct, constantly live in the most holy and blameless manner, doing nothing to wound your own spirits or occasion the stumbling of others—greatly abounding in the most precious fruits of all holy obedience, and in the performance of duties both to God and man, which are produced by virtue derived from Christ, and are, through his merits and intercession, acceptable to God, and tend to his honour and glory. 12-14. And that ye may not be terrified at nor discouraged by my sufferings for the cause of Christ, know that, contrary to all outward appearance or natural expectation, they have been permitted and overruled rather for the confirmation and propagation of the gospel than to the dishonour or hindrance of it, inasmuch that the hardships and imprisonment which the power and presence of Christ enable me to bear with becoming patience and fortitude, are well known among all the courtiers and citizens here to be for no immorality, but merely for the sake of Christ, and have proved the happy occasion of many inquiring after and believing in him; and, through the influence of God's grace, many of my fellow-ministers, fully satisfied of the justice and excellency of my cause, and of the remarkable support and encouragement which I have received from Christ under my troubles, have been more abundantly animated and emboldened thereby to preach the gospel with greater freedom and liberty of spirit than before. 15-17. There are indeed some judaizing teachers who preach Christ as the true Messiah, and several important doctrines of salvation, from envy at my reputation and success in carrying the gospel in its peculiar doctrines to the Gentiles as well as the Jews, and in order to sink my credit and authority, and raise their own. Others preach the pure doctrines of Christ in their full extent, with freedom and delight, from love to him and his truths, and to the souls of men, and to me his apostle. The former, not from any sincere regard to Christ, his truths, or immortal souls, but from a contentious and envious disposition, in hopes that thereby they shall supplant, distress, or grieve me, or that, by the contentions which they foment, they may provoke the civil government to detain me in prison or take away my life. But the latter, from a principle of love to me, as well as to the truth itself, accounting me one appointed and qualified of God, and even imprisoned and tried for maintaining and defending the gospel of Christ. 18. But however different the motives by which the preachers here are actuated, I am heartily glad, and hope always to be so, that the truths of Christ are preached, and himself made known to multitudes by that means. 19. For I know, from the promises of God, the revelations of his Spirit, and my own former experience, that, through your prayers for me, and the rich communications of the Spirit of Christ granted me in answer to them, that the very worst designs of my opposers shall be overruled for promoting my deliverance from prison, and be sanctified to my own and others' spiritual and eternal advantage. 20. And I firmly hope, as well as earnestly desire, that whatever my adversaries may design or do against me, I shall never be ashamed of Christ or his truths, but be enabled to go on in his work with all liberty of spirit and undaunted courage; and as, since my call to the apostleship, I have, through grace, acted to the honour of Christ, my great Master, I trust that, now and hereafter, he will, even in my weak, frail body, manifest the greatness of his power and grace, whether by my patient continuance under suffering, my further publication and defence of the gospel, and my holy life and conversation, or by my bravely owning and honouring him in enduring the most cruel and violent death for his sake. 21. For Christ, my ALL IN ALL, who lives in me, and to whom I look as the source of spiritual life, is my gain in living and dying; and the glory of his name, and the winning of souls to him, is the end which I pursue in both; and death, after living in, on, and to him, would but usher me into the unspeakable reward of eternal felicity. 22. But if it please God to lengthen out my days on earth to preach and suffer for the gospel, it will promote the honour and interest of Christ, which in the end will turn to my own account; so that, were I to be left to my determination, I can hardly say whether I would choose life or death. 23, 24. For I am indeed greatly straitened and pressed in my own mind, having, on the one hand, an earnest desire to be loosed from my present encumbrances, weakness, and imperfections, and to have my soul released from this frail body, that I may enter on the immediate views and full enjoyment of Jesus Christ my Lord; and, on the other, I am willing, if it please God, to continue for a while exercising my ministry on earth, as I believe this would be most for your spiritual advantage amidst the manifold enemies and temptations which surround you. 25, 26. In this persuasion, that my future ministrations might, by the blessing of God, be useful, I am not without intimations from the Spirit of God that, notwithstanding the present threatening aspect, my life shall be for a time preserved, that by my preaching, prayer, or example, I may be instrumental in promoting your and others' edification in knowledge, faith, comfort, and holiness; and that, by my wonderful deliverances from prison, and the benefits ye receive by my visit, preaching, and converse, your delightful glory in Jesus Christ, the only Saviour, may be more abundant than ever. 27, 28. Meanwhile, to manifest the truth of your faith, and to promote your own and my comfort, take the most earnest and special heed that your traffic and behaviour in the world be answerable to your Christian state and character, and suitable to the directions, and ornamental to the principles, privileges, and obligations of the gospel of Christ, and to your holy profession thereof—that whether I should ever in this life see you again or not, I may have comfortable accounts of your spiritual concerns; that notwithstanding all the subtle and furious attempts of your enemies, under the influence of the Holy Ghost ye may persevere unshaken in one and the same evangelical spirit of liberty, truth, and love, and concur in vigorous efforts for preserving, propagating, and defending the pure, uncorrupted, and important doctrines of faith delivered in the gospel, and for rendering the grace of faith in one another lively and steadfast; and may hear that, however artful, cruel, and outrageous the adversaries of your souls and Christian profession be, ye behave amidst all their attacks with a truly Christian courage and fortitude—which to them is not a mark of your obstinacy, but an awful token that they are on the way to everlasting destruction; and to you is an evidence that God, who calls you to these trials, will tenderly carry you through unto eternal salvation! 29. For, to your distinguished honour, God, on account of Christ's merits, not only calls you to believe in him to the saving of your souls, but also patiently, and aiming at his glory, to suffer for his cause, that ye may be more illustriously glorified together with him hereafter: 30. In which ye are exercised with no other combat of trials and troubles than I myself have experienced even among you, and still am under, and yet am enabled, through grace, to sustain with holy fortitude and patience, for the same glorious cause.

Ver. 4. Let this apostolic memorandum impress upon every Christian's spirit the duty and extent of intercessory prayer. How expressive are the words, 'Always!'—'in every prayer!'—'for you all.' C.

Ver. 7. My grace. Cheerfulness and patience in suffering for the gospel, Ac. 5. 41; Ro. 5. 3; 8. 17, 18; 12. 12; 2 Co. 6. 10. C.

Ver. 8. In the bowels, &c. Rather, 'with the bowels of Jesus Christ'—with such love and tenderness as he feels for all his members, Ep. 5. 25, 29, 30, 32. C.

Ver. 10. Sincere. The English word literally signifies 'without wax'—in allusion to the finishing of cloth with gummy materials, that fill up and hide their deficiencies till carefully examined by looking through them in sunlight.—The Greek might be translated 'sun-judged.' C.

Ver. 11. The fruits of righteousness. Fruits of that justification which springs from 'the righteousness of God,' Ro. 3. 21, 22; which are chiefly 'peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, growth in grace, and perseverance therein unto the end.' C.

Ver. 15. Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife. Envyng Paul's popularity, they suppressed their own judaizing sentiments, and adopted his theme—Christ—that so they might raise up opposition to him, and transfer his influence to themselves. C.

Ver. 16. Either by strengthening the hands of his adversaries, or, as many, both ancient and modern, think, these contentious preachers sought to have severity of treatment added to confinement. But how their preaching of Christ could effect this object does not appear. C.

Ver. 19. The supply or 'leading' of that Holy Spirit from whom your prayer proceeds. C.

Ver. 21. This is a sentence of confessed difficulty, of which two views are taken by expositors. 'The apostle's meaning,' says Valpy, 'is not that Christ was his life, and death his gain; but that both in life and death Christ was his gain;' in which view he is supported by Beza's translation, Pierce, &c. On the other hand, Bloomfield, following Chrysostom and Theodoret, explains it thus: 'For as to me, to live (if I live) will be Christ (he will be my life, in him I shall live); and (if I die) to die will of this passage is somewhat difficult. The idea embodied is this:—Paul in ver. 21 speaks of death only in a personal point of view. He had so many troubles in life, and so much hope in Christ, that death would be a gain. But then the thought of Christian duty, and the service he owed to his Master, comes in, to show that such a view as he had taken of death was selfish. He therefore says:—'But to live in the flesh is to me the fruit of my labour,' i.e. if by living I shall be able to do more work for Christ in his kingdom here: 'then I am in a strait,' &c.—P.

a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:

24 Nevertheless <sup>n</sup>to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

25 And having this confidence, I know that <sup>o</sup>I shall abide and continue with you all, for your furtherance and <sup>p</sup>joy of faith:

26 That<sup>q</sup> your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me, by my coming to you again.

27 Only <sup>r</sup>let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ; that, <sup>s</sup>whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that <sup>t</sup>ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the <sup>u</sup>faith of the gospel;

28 And <sup>v</sup>in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an <sup>w</sup>evident token of perdition, but to you <sup>x</sup>of salvation, and that of God.

29 For unto you <sup>y</sup>it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake;

30 Having the same conflict <sup>z</sup>which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

CHAPTER II.

1 He exhorteth them to unity, and to all humbleness of mind, by the example of Christ's humility and exaltation: 12 to a careful proceeding in the way of salvation, that they be as lights to the wicked world, 16 and comforts to him their apostle, who is now ready to be offered up to God. 19 He hopeth to send Timothy to them, whom he greatly commendeth, 25 as Epaphroditus also, whom he presently sendeth to them.

If <sup>a</sup>there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies,

2 Fulfil<sup>b</sup> ye my joy, that ye <sup>c</sup>be like-minded, be gain (since I shall be relieved from trouble). But as mere release can be no gain, might not this view be better stated thus: 'To me to live is Christ (living in me), to die is gain (for I die but to live with him?)' See Phil. 1.23. C.

Ver. 28. To the blaspheming Jews and persecuting Gentiles your firmness appears obstinacy and madness, and 'a token of (your) perdition;' but to you the grace of patience, which you feel to be the gift of God, is an evident token of your final salvation. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In great kindness hath Christ furnished his church with all needful officers to take care of their spiritual and temporal concerns. Hopeful are daily fervent prayers for necessary blessings to such as are sanctified in Christ; and thrice happy those churches wherein all the members appear such. The free favour of Christ and his Father flows out delightfully in their spiritual peace, and to bless the work begun in their hearts. It is very refreshing for ministers to observe their hearers walking in the fellowship of the gospel, and unitedly increasing and abounding in sincerity, light, love, and holy conversation, to the glory of God through Christ, and as a mean of preparing them for his great coming.—For deep is the concern which faithful ministers have for the spiritual edification and comfort of their hearers; and great is the delight they take to share with them in it, and to help in promoting it!—Alas! that ever the gospel of God's grace and salvation should be preached from envy or contention! But how amiable when it is preached with fidelity, and with sincere affection to Christ, and to his servants, people, and cause. It is very encouraging when God makes the sufferings of his ministers to turn out for the spread and success of the gospel. And honourable is it when they rejoice to be debased that Christ may be exalted and souls edified; and, through love to him, are in a strait whether they should desire the immediate enjoyment of Christ, or for a time to continue in a suffering state on earth for the service of his church. Thrice happy is it when, through Jesus' merits and grace, the prayers of Christians draw down rich supplies of grace on their ministers; and when, with remarkable unanimity, they cordially believe, boldly profess, uprightly practise, and are ready cheerfully to suffer for the truth!—What fearful ruin must await the adversaries of such!

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1, 2. By all the exhortations which have been delivered to you in the name of Christ, and by all the consolations which you have in or from him, or would occasion to me; by all the joy you have had, or can have, in his love to you, or in yours to him, or to one another for his sake, or in your or my mutual love; by all that holy fellowship which you and I have in the special influences, gifts, and graces of the Holy Ghost, or with one another, as members of Christ's mystical body; by all the inexpressible grace and tender mercies of God manifested in your heart by his Spirit; and by all the reality, worth, pleasure, obligation, or endearment in those things which you have experienced,—I beseech you to increase my comfort and joy, in more and more abundantly uniting with me, and with one another, in mind and heart, in joint love to Jesus Christ and everything that is his, and in joint pursuits of the same design for promoting his honour and the edification of souls, and in a joint view and relish of the doctrines of the gospel, in opposition to judaizing preachers. 3. Take heed that nothing be said or done among you from a litigious ostentation, a self-conceited temper or desire of applause; but in your church assemblies, and in all your conversation, behave with the deepest humility and modesty, being always ready to condescend to persons of the lowest degree, and to think and speak better of others, who walk in a becoming manner, than of yourselves—duly affected with a sense of your own failings, and casting a veil of love upon the defects of other Christians. 4. And in order to attain this excellent disposition, let every one of you beware of a narrow selfish spirit, magnifying your own endowments, or of principally aiming at your own honour, ease, and secular interests; but let every one, actuated by a general public spirit, consult and study what tends to the general edification, peace, comfort, and advantage of others, spiritual or temporal. 5. For, in opposition to strife, vainglory, and self-seeking, the same spirit of meekness, humility, and love ought to prevail in you which was so perfectly and conspicuously exemplified in our Lord Jesus Christ; 6–8. Who, though, as the eternal and only begotten Son of God, he was necessarily possessed of all divine perfections, and justly claimed a sameness of nature and equality of person with his eternal Father, nevertheless, by an act of infinite condescension, disrobed, and, as it were, emptied himself of his appearances of that divine majesty and glory of which he is necessarily and perpetually possessed; and that he might be his Father's bond-servant, living, acting, bleeding, and dying according to his commandment, and go through the most painful, humbling, and difficult services of our redemption, assumed a true and real human nature into personal union with his divine; and being found in the common form and condition of men, as well as in their law room and stead, he submitted to the lowest degree of service and suffering, humbly obeying his parents and magistrates in everything lawful; yea, obeying his Father in fulfilling the precepts and bearing the penalty of his holy law, and that even unto the ignominious, painful, and accursed death of the cross. 9–11. But having fulfilled his work of redemption in this humble, obediential, and suffering manner, God his Father, working also, gloriously exalted him, not by adding anything to his essential happiness, perfection, or glory, but by raising him as man from the dead, receiving him up into heaven, setting him at his own right hand, and giving him universal dominion as God-man Mediator, and a new title of honour and having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.

3 Let<sup>a</sup> nothing be done through strife or vain-glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.<sup>1</sup>

4 Look<sup>e</sup> not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

5 Let<sup>g</sup> this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus:

6 Who, <sup>h</sup>being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God;

7 But made himself of <sup>i</sup>no reputation, and took upon him <sup>j</sup>the form of a servant, and <sup>k</sup>was made in the likeness<sup>2</sup> of men:

authority as Lord and Saviour, incomparably superior to any other name, dignity, or authority among creatures—that all intelligent beings, angels or men, good or bad, might, either now or in the last judgment, voluntarily adore, worship, and submit to him, or be constrained publicly to submit to him, as their supreme Judge; and that men of all nations and languages might, either cheerfully or by constraint, be made to acknowledge him as Mediator God-man, to be the great Head, Lord, and Ruler over all, and the universal Judge of the world, to the glory of God the Father, who, in infinite wisdom and mercy, appointed him to this dignity, as his honorary Servant under himself. 12. Since therefore the beauties of holiness and humility, and the infinite importance of your salvation, have been so conspicuously and affectingly exemplified in Jesus Christ, I entreat and hope that, as when I was present among you, to observe, assist, and admonish you, ye were obedient to my words, and have been much more since I left you, so ye will more and more abound in the diligent exercise and assiduous practice of the forementioned, and all other graces and duties necessary in the nature of things, and by the appointment of God, for the final accomplishment of that salvation which is yours by faith and the love of the Father, the death of the Son, and application and earnest of the Holy Ghost; and that not with a servile, distrustful, and desponding dread, but with a holy, filial, and awful reverence of the divine Majesty, and a cautious fear of sinning against him, and humble dread of provoking his frowns or chastisements. 13. For to encourage your diligence, and prevent your pride and carnal security, remember that the same God of all grace who has begun the good work in your souls through your faith, doth carry it on in like manner, and not for any desert of yours, but because of his compassion and grace, with infinite pleasure and delight, he excites, inclines, and persuades your will, and enables you with freedom and cheerfulness to perform those things that relate to your salvation. 14. In dependence therefore upon his gracious operations in you, study in your whole conduct to avoid all discontent at the prosperity of others, or the disposals of Providence; and all animosities and wrangling disputations one against another, or against what God in his providence calls you to do or suffer for Christ's sake; 15. That, as children of God, and not of the devil, ye may in reality, as well as appearance, be unreprouvable and inoffensive in your temper and conversation, and sincere in your dealings with God and men, that there may be no just occasion of complaint or accusation against you, or any room to revile and censure you, while ye live in the midst of Jews and Gentiles, exceedingly depraved in their minds and manners, and perversely turned aside from the right ways of the Lord—among whom ye Christians are, or ought to be, shining lights and illustrious examples, for their conviction, direction, or pattern, that, seeing your good works, they may glorify your Father which is in heaven. 16. Holding fast to yourselves, and holding forth to all around you, Christ, who is our life; and the glorious doctrines of that gospel which reveals, offers, and is the mean of conferring spiritual and eternal life—that, according to my hope, I may rejoice in your steadfastness, usefulness, and eternal salvation, when, at Christ's blessed coming, we shall appear together in his presence; and may find that my pains and labours have, by the grace of God, issued in his glory and your happiness. 17. Nay, if God, for the confirmation of your faith and that of other believing Gentiles who are offered up as an acceptable sacrifice to himself, sanctified by the Holy Ghost, should call me, his prisoner, to undergo the most cruel sufferings and death, I do and should rejoice and glory therein. 18. And if ye hear of my martyrdom, I beg that ye will rejoice with and congratulate me on the honour of such a death, since it will bear the most noble testimony to the Lord Jesus and his gospel, and tend to the further encouragement and establishment of your faith in him. 19. But notwithstanding all that I have said about my willingness to die for these great purposes, I at present humbly hope and trust that, through the care and kindness of the Lord Jesus, who has all power in heaven and earth, I shall be quickly able to spare my dear brother Timothy, and send him to visit you, and help you in your spiritual concerns; and that I may have the satisfaction to hear from him that the work of the Lord prospers among you, and that the subtle judaizing teachers have not been able to pervert you. 20. And my reason for sending him is, that I have here no fellow-labourer so like myself in temper, ministration, behaviour, and love to you, and who with the like genuine, tender, and parental affection will lay your concerns to heart, and carefully study to promote your establishment and edification. 21. For the generality of those with me are too selfish and feeble-minded, rather solicitous about their own temporal ease, honour, profits, or safety, than willing to expose themselves to such fatigues, dangers, and reproaches as they might possibly be called to undergo in promoting the interests, cause, and glory of our great Lord and Saviour, and the welfare of his church amongst you. 22. But ye have had sufficient trial and proof of his eminent qualifications, faithfulness, courage, and zeal; and that, as a son, he has been always ready to engage with me in any work or warfare, or cheerfully go wherever and do whatever I desired him. 23. Him therefore I hope to send to you as soon as I shall have taken my trial at Cæsar's bar, and know whether I am to die or live, to remain a prisoner or be discharged. 24. Nay, I trust in the Lord Jesus, whose I am and whom I serve, and for whose sake I am in bonds—that, by his gracious and overruling providence, I shall be acquitted, and visit you myself. 25. Nevertheless, I thought it necessary, for your edification and comfort, to send back with this letter Epaphroditus, who is my brother in the Christian faith and ministerial office, and fellow-labourer and soldier under Christ, our Captain of salvation in our spiritual work, and in our warfare against sin, Satan, and the seducers and powers of this world; and who, as your minister and messenger, has faithfully and kindly supplied me with your generous benefaction. 26. And I the rather chose to send him, as he is extremely desirous of seeing you again, being exceedingly afflicted in his own mind that your hearing of his sickness would occasion so much grief and distress to you. 27. For indeed his sickness was such that we despaired of his life; but our prayer-hearing God, whose prerogative it is to kill and to make alive, brought him back from the gates of death, which was a great mercy, not only to him, in the restoration of his health and his further capacity for usefulness, but also to you and others, particularly myself, as the loss of so dear and valuable a friend and brother would have been a great addition to the trouble which his sickness and my own confinement gave me. 28. I therefore despatched him back to you with the greater care and speed, that, when you see him again in full health, ye may have fresh comfort, and, by the renewed usefulness of his labours among you, my own mind may be comforted under my troubles, and for the want of him. 29. Receive him therefore as a servant of Christ, and for his sake, with all spiritual joy, as well as with humane, civil, and friendly affection; and let him, and all such faithful labourers in the gospel, be esteemed very highly, and treated with great honour, for their work's sake. 30. For it was by the fatigue he underwent in the service of Christ, in love to him, and zeal for his interest and glory, that he contracted that illness which brought him so near the point of death—neglecting his own body, and hazarding his own life, that he might preach to such as I could not come to in my confinement, and might attend and assist me in your name.

Ver. 1. Consolation under the sufferings endured for his sake. C.

Ver. 4. The injunction does not direct attention to the affairs of others in preference to or in conjunction with our own (for with the affairs of others it is generally imprudent to interfere); but it directs attention to the good qualities, gifts, and endowments of others—not to the exclusion of, but in comparison with, our own, so that vanity, pride, and selfishness may be repressed and extirpated. C.

Ver. 6. Who being in the form of God. Inasmuch as 'the form of a servant' (ver. 7) clearly implies that Christ was a servant, so 'the form of God' must equally imply that he was God. —Thought it not robbery. Did not count it an act of usurpation. C.

Ver. 7. Made himself of no reputation. Emptied himself—divested himself of his visible divine glory. C.

Ver. 8. Became obedient unto death. Not as if his obedience was rendered to death as a power; but through life, and till death, as a limit—that is, from the incarnation till death inclusive. C.

Ver. 9. Given him a name. Neither the name of Jesus, nor Lord, nor any other appellative; but a dignity and authority above all principalities and powers of earth or heaven. C.

Ver. 10. At the name. Rather, 'in the name,' as the only plea of pardon and acceptance to sinners, and of glorying to saints and angels, Jn. 14. 13; Ac. 4. 12; Col. 3. 17; Re. 5. 11-14.—Things. This word is erroneously supplied from Tindal's translation. The word supplied should be 'beings,' as in all the best versions ancient and modern. C.

Ver. 12. Salvation simply signifies 'deliverance,' either from the suffering of disease or the power of enemies. See, for the first application, Ac. 4. 9-12; for the second, Lu. 1. 74, 77. The believer therefore 'works out his own salvation,' either by submissively receiving these spiritual remedies which Christ the great Physician furnishes for the disease of sin, Mat. 9. 12, by resisting and warring with the enemies of his soul, Ep. 6. 13, and by mortifying, through the Spirit, the deeds of the body, that he may live, Ro. 8. 13. The work therefore is his, not as a thing that he either would do or could do, but as a work that grace begins, carries on, and completes, in him and by him. C.

Ver. 15. Harmless. Untainted with the vices of the world. C.

Ver. 17. The sacrifice and service of your faith. 'The sacrifice' of your prejudices, your friendships, your honours, your possessions. 'The service' of your devotedness, your liberality, and godliness. C.

Ver. 20. Like-minded with myself—no second-self like him. C.

Ver. 21. All. Not 'all' universally, but all whom the apostle could then commend for the mission. C.

Ver. 27. He was sick nigh unto death. The miraculous power of healing not being unlimited—else Paul had healed Epaphroditus, as he had healed others—but directed by the will of the Holy Spirit, not so generally for the relief of the saints as for the conviction of unbelievers. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The comforts and influences of real religion should stir us up to Christian unity, affection, humble condescension, and tender care for the edification of others, particularly our brethren in Christ. And a most endearing example, and powerfully-constraining motive hereof, is his infinite condescension, self-abasement, and suffering for us. But his glorious advancement to his Father's right hand, having all power given him in heaven and in earth, is a delightful earnest and blessed mean of the exaltation of humble souls. And infinite is the obligation we have to contemplate, obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, <sup>s</sup>work out your own salvation with <sup>t</sup>fear and trembling:<sup>3</sup>

13 For<sup>a</sup> it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do <sup>o</sup>f his good pleasure.

14 Do<sup>x</sup> all things without murmurings and disputings;

15 That<sup>y</sup> ye may be blameless and harmless,<sup>4</sup> the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine<sup>5</sup> as lights in the world;

16 Holding<sup>z</sup> forth the <sup>a</sup>word of life; <sup>b</sup>that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I <sup>c</sup>have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.

17 Yea,<sup>d</sup> and if I be offered<sup>6</sup> upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all.

18 For the same cause also <sup>e</sup>do ye joy, and rejoice with me.

19 <sup>f</sup>But<sup>7</sup> I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheus<sup>h</sup> shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state.

20 For I have no man like-minded,<sup>8</sup> who will naturally care for your state.

21 For all <sup>i</sup>seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's.

11 * Carry on to completion is a more accurate rendering of the Greek. There is no allusion whatever here to justification; it is the gradual process of sanctification. Paul urges the Philippians to prosecute 'with fear and trembling'; i.e. with great anxiety, solicitude, and distrust of their own powers. The succeeding verse is most important, showing that even this progressive work can only be effectually carried on by the indwelling power of God.—For God is he who effectually worketh in you (in your mind) to will and (in your life and conduct) to do.—P.

22 But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel.

23 Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me.

24 But <sup>k</sup>I trust in the Lord<sup>9</sup> that I also myself shall come shortly.

25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you <sup>l</sup>Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier, but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants.

26 For he <sup>n</sup>longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick.

27 For indeed he was <sup>o</sup>sick nigh unto death: but God had merey on him; and not on him only, <sup>p</sup>but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 I sent him therefore the more carefully, that, when ye see him again, ye may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 Receive<sup>q</sup> him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and hold such in reputation:<sup>1</sup> admire, love, adore, and serve him. With humble caution, self-diffidence, reverence of God, and holy diligence, should believers attend to the things which relate to their own salvation. And hopeful is their labour when God is ever present with them to excite and assist them. And Christians have great need, for the honour of Christ, for the comfort of his ministers, and for the sake of the world around them, always to study a humble, holy, and inoffensive conversation.—Alas! that in the best of times so many ministers and professed Christians should be so selfish and corrupt. But it is delightful to see them striving to outdo one another in care, sympathy, love, and readiness to do or suffer for one another's edification and comfort.

30 Because for <sup>r</sup>the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service toward me.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. After all, my dear Christian brethren, make it your constant study to rejoice and glory in the Lord Jesus, his person, offices, relations, and blessings, as altogether excellent in themselves, and by the gospel given and applied to your hearts. This will support your spirits under trouble, and prevent your seduction by judaizing teachers.—And, without any irksomeness, I repeat the admonitions which I formerly gave you, as I find it necessary for your establishment and edification. 2. Beware of all flattering, malicious, mischievous, and dividing preachers, particularly those of the judaizing kind, who, with all their boastings of circumcision, are extremely disgraceful and hurtful to the church, tearing it asunder, and cutting themselves and others off from Jesus Christ. 3. For we who are true believers in Christ are the very reverse of such—being truly circumcised and renewed in our hearts, and truly instated in favour with God; and accordingly we worship him, not by ceremonial rites and carnal ordinances, but with our whole souls, in the exercise of all spiritual graces, under the direction and influence of the Holy Ghost, and with abundant joy triumph in Jesus Christ, as our only Mediator, righteousness, and ground of acceptance and hope; while we renounce all dependence upon and expectation of favour with God on account of circumcision, or any other Jewish ordinance, or anything we have or can do in performing the righteousness of the law by natural principles. 4-6. None of these judaizing teachers have more ground to boast of these carnal privileges than I myself.—I was duly circumcised on the eighth day, according to God's appointment.—I am no proselyte from among the Gentiles, but a true native Israelite, descended from Jacob, by his beloved Benjamin, the son of Rachel his dearest wife.—I am of a tribe which furnished the first king to God's peculiar people, and which did not, with the other ten, revolt to Jeroboam and his idolatrous worship. I am a Jew of pure extraction, both by my father and mother, and one who used the Hebrew language in our synagogue worship. I was, by education and profession, one of the strictest sect for observation of the laws of God and traditions of the elders.—I was so zealous for the ceremonial ordinances that I furiously persecuted the Christians because their principles and professions were contrary to mine; and so sincere and careful an observer of the moral and ceremonial laws, that neither my neighbours nor my own conscience could charge me with any flagrant or wilful transgression thereof. 7. But how advantageous soever I once did, or any carnal Jew may still, reckon these things for recommending to God's favour, or entitling to heaven, I was no sooner enlightened by his Spirit, and called by his grace, than I saw them all misleading, empty, and insufficient, and that my dependence thereon was inexpressibly hurtful; and so I abandoned them all as nothing, and worse than nothing, when relied on in competition with Jesus Christ. 8. And now, after many years' knowledge and experience of the way of salvation by him alone, I still, with the greatest assurance, reckon these, and all possible worldly enjoyments, and even all my religious and moral services since my conversion, to be but loss in comparison of the superabundantly more important, real, and experimental knowledge of Jesus Christ my Lord, in his person, offices, relations, fulness, and work: for the sake of and in comparison with whom, I have renounced and parted with all other things; and I do count them but dung, dregs, or dogs'-meat, in point of justification and substantial happiness—that I may gain the complete enjoyment of Christ and all his saving benefits: 9. And that, in the day of death and judgment, I may be found dwelling in him as my city of refuge, united to him as my spiritual Head, and comprehended in him as my representative; and so may stand and be judged before God, not according to my own personal righteousness, but as clothed with that righteousness which does now indeed consist in faith, either as in habit or act, and is received as the free gift of God, by faith in Christ—even that righteousness of the purity of his human nature, his obedience of life, and atoning sufferings and death, by which he fully met the law and justice of God in our stead, and which God appoints, accepts, offers, and imparts to us, to discharge us from guilt and condemnation, and entitle us to eternal life in believing. 10. And that, even in this world, I may have an experimental growing acquaintance with him, in the glory of his person and offices, and in the efficacious virtue of his resurrection, as the Head of his mystical body, for confirming my joyful hopes of eternal life on the ground of it, for animating me to the most vigorous holy obedience in conformity to him, and in preparing me for the blessedness of heaven; and that I, in holy fellowship with him in his sufferings, by faith, may be enabled to crucify my inward sinfulness till it be utterly destroyed, and may patiently endure sufferings and death for his sake; 11. That, by these and other means of God's appointment earnestly practised, I may, in the general resurrection of the dead, arrive at the harbour of eternal rest, being raised up in glory, and admitted into the perfect and inexpressible blessedness which is prepared for believers. 12. I have not as yet indeed received the prize for which I run; nor am I sufficiently prepared by holiness for the crown of righteousness; but I eagerly pursue my course, that, in God's time and way, I may reach that perfection, and lay hold on that eternal life, for the attainment of which Jesus Christ, by his power and grace, laid hold on me in the way to Damascus, plucked me as a brand out of the fire, and took possession of me for himself. 13, 14. Whatever your judaizing preachers or others may pretend, I freely acknowledge that I do not reckon myself to have attained perfect holiness any more than perfect happiness; but, fixing mine eyes upon it as the mark which I have in view, without valuing myself upon either my judaism or even my past advances in holiness, as an earnest racer I press forward to that perfection which is necessary to my receiving that eternal glory to which God has from heaven divinely called me, and every true believer, by Christ Jesus, and which is obtained only in and through him. 15. Let therefore as many of us as have all the essential parts of the new nature formed in us to a much greater degree than it is in weak believers, attend to this main point of counting all things but loss and dung to win Christ, to be found in him, and thoroughly to be conformed to him; and if, in other matters of less importance, any of you should have different apprehensions, God will in due time discover the truth to you. 16. It is nevertheless necessary that we hold fast whatever truths we have already embraced and professed; and that, in the exercise of all that knowledge, grace, and holiness which we have attained, we should, with the greatest exactness and harmony, think and act according to the plain revelations of Scripture. 17. In your whole principles and practice study therefore, with one accord,

CHAPTER III.

1 He warneth them to beware of the false teachers of the circumcision, 4 showing that himself hath greater cause than they to trust in the righteousness of the law: 7 which notwithstanding he counteth as dung and loss, to gain Christ and his righteousness, 12 therein acknowledging his own imperfection. 15 He exhorteth them to be thus minded, 17 and to imitate him, 18 and to decline the ways of carnal Christians.

FINALLY, my brethren, <sup>a</sup>rejoice in the Lord. To <sup>b</sup>write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe.

2 Beware <sup>c</sup>of dogs, beware of evil-workers, beware of the concision.

3 For we are <sup>a</sup>the circumcision, which worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh:

4 Though <sup>e</sup>I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more:

5 Circumcised <sup>g</sup>the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee;

6 Concerning <sup>h</sup>zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.<sup>1</sup>

7 But what things were <sup>i</sup>gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

<sup>1</sup> Paul speaks here of the position which, as a Jew, he occupied in the estimation of his brethren the Jews. He does not speak of his righteousness in relation to God: that was not before him. As a Jew of pure blood, of legal knowledge, of fanatical zeal, of perfect conformity to legal requirements—he had no superior. And yet all these distinctions he threw aside as worthless when compared with Christ.—P.

8 Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: <sup>k</sup>for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may <sup>l</sup>win<sup>2</sup> Christ,

9 And be found in him, not having <sup>m</sup>mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but <sup>n</sup>that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith.<sup>3</sup>

10 That <sup>p</sup>I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;

11 If by any means <sup>q</sup>I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

12 Not<sup>r</sup> as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but <sup>s</sup>I follow after, if that I may apprehend <sup>t</sup>that for which also <sup>u</sup>I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but <sup>v</sup>this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, 14 I press toward the mark for <sup>w</sup>the prize of the <sup>x</sup>high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us therefore, <sup>y</sup>as many as be perfect, to imitate me and my faithful brethren in the ministry, whom the Lord has led into the spirituality and light of the New Testament dispensation. 18, 19. And this I recommend to you with the greatest earnestness and care, to prevent your being misled by judaizing teachers; for they and many other professors—as I often warned you while I was with you, and now again assure you, with deep concern and grief for the dishonour done to Christ and hurt to the souls of men—whatever their pretences be, are, from an aversion to take up their cross and follow Christ, both doctrinally and practically, inveterate enemies to the fundamental article of salvation through active faith alone, and their wickedness shall issue in their everlasting destruction; and even now they have nothing but the gratification of carnal views and pleasures for their principal aim and chief good, in opposition to God and his glory; and, boasting of their shameful doctrines and success, under all their religious professions, they attend to, relish, and pursue after nothing but mean, empty, uncertain, unsatisfying, and defiling earthly enjoyments. 20. Never follow nor imitate such corrupt and pernicious leaders, but make us your pattern, whose tempers and conduct are quite the reverse; for, being citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem, our hearts and affections are set upon things above, and carry on a constant correspondence with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—looking, longing, and hoping for Christ's descent from thence at the last day to receive us to himself: 21. Who will then transform these vile and mortal bodies of ours—which for the present are so marked with weakness, weariness, or disease, and are clogs and hindrances to the spiritual and holy exercises of our soul, and which will be quickly rotten and corrupted in the grave—into the beautiful resemblance of his own most glorious body, by the working of that almighty power by which he is able to overcome every difficulty, and entirely subdue under himself every enemy, death not excepted.

Ver. 2. Beware of dogs. Rather, 'the dogs,' 'the evil workers.' The judaizing teachers are so emblematically called, either because they prowled or hunted like dogs in search of prey, or because they professed to be watchful as dogs in guarding against the apostle, whom they misrepresented as a robber. In the former sense it would be a term of reproach, which the apostle would scarcely use; in the latter, a self-chosen title, which he was therefore at liberty to employ. This circumstance renders the latter interpretation the more probable. C.

Ver. 5. An Hebrew of the Hebrews. A genuine Hebrew both by father and mother, without any admixture of foreign blood. C.

Ver. 7. The word translated 'loss' is applied to loss in trade, and especially to that kind of voluntary loss which is incurred by casting wares overboard to lighten and save a sinking ship. C.

Ver. 11. If by any means. Rather, 'in order that by any means (or sacrifice) I might attain to the resurrection from among the dead'—the resurrection that selects the justified for everlasting glory. C.

Ver. 12. Attained—had reached the goal, as in a race, and gained the prize.—Perfect. Declared the conqueror, and decorated with the allotted honours.—I am apprehended. The apostle describes himself as 'apprehended of Christ' because he did not enter his service willingly, but was laid hold of with a gracious violence, and impressed, as it were, into the service of his Lord. C.

Ver. 14. High calling. Rather, 'of God calling from on high;' or, 'calling me on high.' See Col. 3.1, 2. C.

Ver. 15. Perfect. Of full growth, as men, and not children, in Christian knowledge. That it cannot mean moral perfection, is evident from ver. 16.—Be thus minded to press toward the mark, ver. 14.—Otherwise minded. And if you be once fully minded to press toward the mark, should differences of sentiment or feeling upon minor matters unhappily exist or arise, God will in due time reveal it, and bring you by his Spirit to see eye to eye. C.

Ver. 18. Enemies of the cross—because they superadded Jewish rites and observances as necessary to pardon, peace, and acceptance with God. C.

Ver. 21. Who shall change, &c. 'Who shall re-fashion this body of our humiliation, that it may become conformed to the body of his glory.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—With great earnestness should professors guard against the seduction of false teachers, especially such as set up men's own righteousness in the room of the justifying righteousness of Jesus Christ. And ministers have need to repeat their warnings on this head. Nothing goes down more sweetly with a corrupt heart than the doctrine of justification by self-righteousness. Amiable, yet very rare, is a lively, devout, cheerful, a duly self-denied Christian. But contemptible are all external privileges in comparison of Christ and his righteousness; and very unprofitable are human works in the matter of our justification. The faith and enjoyment of free justification through his glorious sacrifice powerfully animates and enables to the diligent study of holiness. And though there is no absolute perfection in this life, yet every one ought to press as near to it as possible, and carefully avoid the smallest appearance of backsliding in faith, profession, or practice, and tenderly bear with others in lesser differences. It is a great mercy for a church to have ministers of an exemplary practice and heavenly conversation. Eternal glory will crown their and their followers' labours along with Christ. But what a burden to ministers, a plague to churches, and what enemies to Christ, are untender, sensual, and worldly-minded preachers and professors!

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. In these views, my dearly beloved brethren, whose further proficiency and establishment I much desire and long for, and whom I now account the honourable seals of my ministry, and expect to be my crown of rejoicing in the last judgment,

I again earnestly entreat you to abide steadfast and recompense, my loving God and Father, who has fession of the Lord Jesus, as your Head and Saviour. 2. And I beg that those noted women, Euodias and Syntyche, would lay aside all their differences, and agree with the church and with one another in sentiment, profession, love, and affection in the Lord. 3. And I beseech you, my noted assistant in the work of the gospel, in the most prudent, tender, and affectionate manner, to advise and exhort them heartily to reunite in the common cause—who, by their prayers, their sympathy, and their supplies, were so remarkably useful to me, and to Clement, and my other fellow-preachers, who, I am persuaded, are noted favourites of God, and from eternity chosen to be heirs of salvation. 4. And let all of you true believers, in the view of the blessings which ye have in hand, or which ye hope for, always, and in all circumstances, rejoice and triumph in the Lord Jesus, your Head and Saviour, and in all that he is, has, or does for you, and even in your sufferings for his sake. 5. And—as knowing that he is at hand to observe your behaviour and take your part, and will quickly appear to execute justice on his Jewish, heathen, or antichristian opposers, and ere long to judge the world—labour to maintain and discover a meek, patient, and gentle temper of spirit towards all men, your most furious persecutors not excepted, and a weanedness of affection from the things of this life. 6. Yea, whatever difficulties, wants, or dangers may befall you relating to this present world, never perplex yourselves with anxious, distrustful, and distracting cares about them, how ye shall be able to avoid, bear up under, or get through them; but in every time, circumstance, or matter—in the firm faith of God's promises, and with humble pleadings and earnest importunity and perseverance, and with thanksgiving for mercies received or promised—lay your whole case and requests before God as your reconciled Father in Christ, that, as the hearer of prayer, he may give you whatever help, comfort, deliverances, or blessings are for your real advantage: 7. And in so doing, the most excellent peace with God, with your own consciences, and with one another, and a transcendently sweet calmness of spirit, shall, through the merits of Christ, your union to him, and influences from him, fortify and preserve your souls from sinking or fainting under the heaviest troubles. 8. And, in fine, my brethren, beloved in the Lord, whatever things are agreeable to the gospel of truth, and consist in or promote truth and sincerity, in words or actions, professions or engagements; whatever things are venerable, decent, or becoming in dress, language, or deportment, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.

16 Nevertheless, <sup>a</sup>whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

17 Brethren, <sup>b</sup>be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample.

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you <sup>c</sup>even weeping, that they are <sup>d</sup>the enemies of the cross of Christ;

20 For <sup>i</sup>our conversation <sup>j</sup>is in heaven; from whence also we <sup>k</sup>look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ;

21 Who shall <sup>l</sup>change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according <sup>m</sup>to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

CHAPTER IV.

<sup>1</sup> From particular admonitions 4 he proceedeth to general exhortations, 10 showing how he rejoiced at their liberality towards him lying in prison, not so much for the supply of his own wants, as for the grace of God in them. 19 And so he concludeth with prayer and salutations.

2 I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, <sup>f</sup>that <sup>g</sup>they be of the same mind in the Lord.

4 Rejoice <sup>n</sup>in the Lord alway: <sup>o</sup>and again I say, Rejoice.

answerable to your respective stations as men or Christians; whatsoever things are just and due to God or men in your dealings with them; whatsoever things relate to chastity in body or mind, or to holiness in heart, speech, or behaviour; whatsoever things render a person amiable or lovely in the sight of God or men; whatsoever is of good repute among wise, judicious, or pious men; whatsoever is truly virtuous, brave, or laudable,—earnestly study the nature, obligations, and advantages thereof, and carefully and constantly practise the same. 9. These and the like branches of morality and piety which ye, as disciples of Jesus Christ, and in part by my ministrations, have acquired the knowledge of, assented to, and approved as right, and which ye have seen exemplified in my own walk and behaviour, seriously and diligently reduce to practice; and in this way God, who is your reconciled Father in Christ, and who gives and delights in the spiritual peace and orderly deportment and prosperity of his servants, shall take pleasure to dwell among you, manifest himself unto you, and bless and own you as a people near and dear to him. 10. And having given you these important advices, I cannot but, with inexpressible pleasure, again reflect on the love and grace of our Lord Jesus, who inclined your hearts to repeat your affectionate and generous supplies to me in my imprisonment, even after ye seemed to have forgotten me; but I understand that was owing, not to your want of care, but of ability to give it, or opportunity to convey it safely. 11. I do not mention these things as if I were reduced to insupportable wants, or were uneasy under what I suffer, or as lifted up that I am now supplied by your bounty; for, through the frequent changes of my condition, and the sanctified use thereof, I have, by the Spirit of God, been taught to exercise Christian contentment in every condition into which Providence brings me, as being ordered for me by my heavenly Father, who never leaves me nor forsakes me; and as well calculated to promote my spiritual and eternal advantage. 12. In this manner I have been taught how to possess my soul in peace and patience when I am thrown into dejecting and humbling circumstances, and how to behave with proper humility and weanedness from the world when Providence smiles on me. Wherever I am, and in whatever circumstances I am, whether I have plenty or scarcity of the good things of this life, I am thoroughly taught to exercise the graces and perform the duties answerable to my diversified stations: 13. And not indeed of myself, or even by the grace which I have already received, but by the continual influence and assistance of Jesus Christ, with whom I am united, and on whom I depend, and who is ever with me, to animate, excite, and strengthen me, I find myself enabled to perform these, and every other duty to which I am called, as a Christian and apostle. 14. My contentment in pressing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God. <sup>6</sup>

7 And <sup>a</sup>the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds <sup>b</sup>through Christ Jesus.

8 Finally, brethren, <sup>c</sup>whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things <sup>d</sup>are <sup>e</sup>honest, <sup>f</sup>whatsoever things <sup>g</sup>are <sup>h</sup>just, whatsoever things <sup>i</sup>are <sup>j</sup>pure, whatsoever things <sup>k</sup>are <sup>l</sup>lovely, whatsoever things <sup>m</sup>are of <sup>n</sup>good report; if <sup>o</sup>there be any virtue, and if <sup>p</sup>there be any <sup>q</sup>praise, think on these things.

9 <sup>r</sup>Those <sup>s</sup>things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and <sup>t</sup>the God of peace shall be with you.

10 But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your <sup>u</sup>care of me hath <sup>v</sup>flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity.

11 Not <sup>w</sup>that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, <sup>x</sup>there-with to be content. <sup>y</sup>

12 I <sup>z</sup>know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where, and in all things, I am instructed, both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.

13 I can do all things <sup>a</sup>through Christ which strengtheneth me.

14 Notwithstanding, ye have well done <sup>b</sup>that ye did communicate with my affliction.

15 Now, ye Philippians, know also, that <sup>c</sup>in the beginning of the gospel, <sup>d</sup>when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.

16 For even in <sup>e</sup>Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity.

17 Not <sup>f</sup>because I desire a gift; but I desire <sup>g</sup>fruit that may abound to your account.

18 But I have all, <sup>h</sup>and abound; I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things

6 The nature and subjects of prayer are indicated in this verse. Prayer in its nature is the making of a request to God. A request must spring from a felt want; consequently every prayer must flow directly from the heart. The word supplication embodies, 1. Earnestness and fervour in prayer; and 2. the individualizing of our wants. We must make each want the subject of supplication to God. Prayer must also be offered in faith. There must be no doubt on the mind as to the power, wisdom, or love of God.—P.

VIEW OF THE TIBER. [PHILLIPPIANS, iv:23.]—The Tiber is the largest river in Italy. It intersects the city of Rome from north to south in three wide curves. The river is about sixty-five yards wide and about twenty feet deep. The river was once the medium of connection between Rome and the trade of the outside world. The city is mainly on the left bank of the Tiber. In the above view we see the river flowing between banks which have been lined with stone. This, however, is modern. The whole length of the river, in a direct line, is not more than one hundred and forty miles. It is a muddy, slow-moving stream, and its size is no adequate index to the famous position it occupies among the rivers of the world. Tiber owes its influence among rivers to the great men who have lived upon its banks.

22 All<sup>q</sup> the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Cæsar's<sup>1</sup> household.

inclined your hearts to show me such kindness for his sake, will richly reward you, not only with all needful temporal good things, but chiefly with all spiritual and eternal blessings, suited to your various wants, and that with an abundant liberality, in proportion to his own infinite treasures of grace and glory, which he has provided and treasured up in Christ, and gives together with him and for his sake, and in virtue of our union with him.—20. Unto that all-sufficient and infinitely liberal Giver of all temporal, spiritual, and eternal blessings, and our Father in Christ, let us jointly ascribe all possible and eternal honour, thanksgiving, blessing, and praise, on account of what he is in himself, and what he has been, is, and for ever will be to us. 21, 22. I, and all the faithful preachers and professing believers here, chiefly they who have been lately converted to Christ in the emperor Nero's own family, hereby present to every one of you who are truly renewed and sanctified in your hearts, our most cordial testimony of love and regard. 23. And may the free favour of our common Lord and Saviour, and all the distinguishing fruits thereof, be abundantly manifested to and upon each of you singly, and all of you jointly. This I heartily desire and firmly expect.

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers greatly delight in, have a high esteem of, and ardent affection to sincere and lively Christians; and are grateful in acknowledging their kindness. Very desirous are they that all things may turn out to their edification, and much concerned for their establishment in the faith, profession, and holiness of the gospel; for their continual comfort, and their unity in heart, design, and labour, to help forward the work of the Lord. Very patient also toward enemies, weaned from this world, free from anxious care, fervent and hopeful in prayer, peaceful in mind, and universally lively in practice, ought Christians to be—in the faith of Christ's being with them, and of his certain and sudden appearance to judge them. And it is a necessary duty and an honourable attainment to have learned in his strength to be always cordially contented with all the diversified changes of our lot, as wisely and kindly ordered by our gracious God and Father.—Happy is it to have him the Supplier of all our wants, and the Rewarder of all our friends' kindnesses to us. And highly delightful to view ourselves and millions around us eternal sharers of his infinite, his inexhaustible stores of grace, laid up for us in Christ in a manner suited to the glory thereof.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

Happy Europe! whose first planted church gave such early indication of holy fruitfulness! and though the harvest has come short of the hopes of the spring, and though many tares have been sown by the enemy in the midst of the wheat; yet, thanks to the Lord of the harvest, many a fair field has been ripened, and reaped, and gathered into her garner.

The church at Philippi was specially distinguished by missionary liberality, ch. 4. 15, 16, 18; a grace which God, in those days, seems to have restored, in some degree, to the reformed churches in Europe and their descendants in America.

No doubt Christian liberality is still repressed; yet is it making glorious progress; wherefore, 'let us thank God and take courage.' And let not Christians be afraid of giving back what God has given to them, but let them rely upon the word which testifies that what they lend to the Lord, their God will repay; and if the spirit of worldliness should tempt them to withhold from the gospel, lest they should not have enough for their own necessities, let them remember that God, and God alone, has supported them for the past; and that, for the future, he is able to 'supply all their need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.' C.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

Colosse was a large and populous city of Phrygia, in the north-west of Lesser Asia, where (not the apostle Paul, but) Epaphras, or some other faithful preacher, had planted a church. To establish those Christians in the faith, in opposition to the heathen philosophers, and especially to the judaizing teachers, Paul wrote them this epistle; in which, after salutation, thanksgiving, and prayer for them, he, in a most exalted manner, represents to them Jesus Christ, in his glorious dignity and gracious fulness, as infinitely preferable to all philosophical notions and Jewish ceremonies, ch. i. ii.; and exhorts them to improve their union to and fellowship with him in holy duties, personal and relative, ch. iii. iv.

[Colosse was a city of Phrygia-Pacatiana, in Western Asia. It is said to have perished in a violent earthquake, in the tenth year of the reign of Nero, and shortly after the date of this epistle, which is generally assigned to A.D. 62. It was afterwards restored, and Constantine Porphyrogenitus says that in his time it was called Chonæ; and is supposed to have occupied the site of a village now called Konous. By whom the church of Colosse was founded is not recorded; but it would appear from ch. 2. 1 that Paul had not that honour, though they feel for him as children, during his imprisonment, and he, for them as a father in the Lord. The tenor of the epistle, especially ch. 1. 3-6, indicates a healthy state of the church; while the warnings and precepts of holiness which it conveys clearly show that no present attainments can supersede the necessity of that watchfulness and prayer which are employed by the Spirit as the safeguard and the nourishment of the life of God in the soul. C.]

The church at Colosse was composed chiefly, if not exclusively, of Gentiles; yet false teachers of a judaizing tendency had found their way into it, and were attempting to corrupt the purity and simplicity of their faith, ch. 2. 13-23. The principal errors against which Paul warns the Colossians are:—(1) Ritualistic observances, fasts, feasts, and ceremonies, which were necessary under the Mosaic dispensation as types of Christ, but are useless and pernicious under the spiritual dispensation of Christ. (2) Angel-worship, which had then begun, being borrowed in part from heathen mythology, and which has since been productive of the grossest superstitions. (3) Bodily austerities—asceticism in fact; under the vain impression that by weakening and enervating the physical powers, the soul would attain closer communion with God. (4) Jewish theosophy, which, attempting to attach a deep and mystic meaning to the plain narratives of Old Testament history, and an allegorical sense of a fanciful and absurd character to the whole Mosaic ritual, perverted the meaning of Scripture, and tended largely to corrupt the purity of Christian truth. The Jews of the Alexandria school especially professed to be able in this way to fathom profound mysteries which the initiated alone could apprehend. These corruptions seem to be referred to in ch. 2. 18. P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 After salutation, he thanketh God for their faith, 7 confirmeth the doctrine of Epaphras, 9 prayeth further for their increase in grace, 14 describeth the true Christ, 21 encourageth them to receive Jesus Christ, and commendeth his own ministry.

PAUL,<sup>a</sup> an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother, 2 To<sup>b</sup> the saints and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We<sup>c</sup> give thanks to God and the Father<sup>d</sup> of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you,

4 Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints;

5 For<sup>e</sup> the hope<sup>2</sup> which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the *h*word of the truth of the gospel;

6 Which<sup>i</sup> is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth: 7 As ye also learned of Epaphras our dear fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ; 8 Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit.<sup>3</sup> 9 For<sup>o</sup> this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; 10 That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God; 11 Strengthened<sup>a</sup> with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness; 12 Giving<sup>s</sup> thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the *in*heritance of the saints in light:

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1, 2. I Paul, an inspired preacher immediately called by Jesus Christ to be an eye-witness of his resurrection and ascension, and to plant churches among the Gentiles, according to the free purpose, commandment, and pleasure of God the Father; along with Timothy, my faithful brother in the work of the gospel—to all the holy and faithful Christians in Colosse, spiritually united to Jesus Christ, and renewed and sanctified by virtue derived from him,—wish the most abundant manifestation and application of divine favour, and all the happy and peaceful fruits thereof, from God our common Father, the original fountain of all blessings, and from Jesus Christ as the mediatorial sacrifice and dispenser of them: 3, 4. To whom we have, in our daily prayers, offered up the most affectionate and hearty thanksgivings, ever since we heard of your cordial acceptance of and trusting in Christ alone for salvation, and of your brotherly affection to all that profess his holy name and bear his holy image. 5, 6. Our prayers and praises, as well as your faith and love to Christ and his people, are excited by the consideration of that perfect blessedness which ye justly hope for through him, and which is laid up and hid with him in God, as a rich treasure reserved and secured by him, as your Father, for you, and which he has held forth and offered to all in the preaching of the true and faithful gospel—which was, in the kind providence of God, carried over and published to you without your seeking after it, as well as to both Jews and Gentiles in most places of the Roman empire; and, by the attending power of the Holy Ghost, has converted all who believe to Christ, and made them to bring forth the fruits of faith, love, and holy obedience, as it has done among you ever since ye experienced a real work of grace on your hearts, and were led into the spiritual knowledge and sincere faith of its doctrines of divine grace.—7. According as ye were taught them by Epaphras, your worthy minister, and our dear brother and faithful fellow-labourer in the service of Christ and his church—particularly in promoting your conversion to and sanctification in and by Christ; 8. And who, in his great affection to you, has represented to us your hearty and spiritual love to Christ and to all his saints, which the Holy Ghost has wrought in you, and drawn out in a spiritual manner, and on spiritual accounts, by means of the gospel. 9. Reflecting upon which report, we ever since have been led to a peculiar concern for you in all our solemn addresses to God; and to beg that ye may be more and more abundantly filled with the knowledge of his mind and will relating to the way of salvation by Jesus Christ, and to your comfort and duty, as interested therein, and may exceedingly abound in a judicious, experimental, and practical acquaintance with his manifold wisdom, and in all spiritual discernment of spiritual things, in their truth, excellence, and importance, and the use ye ought to make of them;—10. That, in the whole of your conversation before God or men, ye may act up to the dignity of your relation to and profession of him, and to the rich benefits which ye have received and hope for from him, and every way agreeable to his holy nature and will, bringing forth all the fruits of righteousness to his glory, and daily increasing in a transforming acquaintance and fellowship with him, as your heavenly Father and Friend; 11. Strengthened with every needful and almighty assistance of his Spirit for performing every duty and service, and for sustaining every trial, in a sweet, calm, and patient manner, without either murmuring against God or raging against men—persevering in them with a noble constancy and fortitude of spirit in submission to the will of God, and even triumphing in what he has done, does, or will do to support, strengthen, comfort, and glorify you. 12. Yea, that instead of complaining under trouble, you may heartily join with us in the most grateful thanksgivings to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of us in him—who, by graciously changing and renewing our nature, and endowing us with heavenly desires and affections, has prepared us for the full possession of that glorious inheritance which he had mercifully appointed, provided, and promised to us, and to all persons who believe, as his children; and in the light, glory, and joy of which we shall, in his immediate presence, be for ever perfectly filled with knowledge, holiness, and happiness; 13. Who also, by his almighty power and grace, has plucked out and rescued us that believe, Jews or Gentiles, from the tyranny and dominion of sin and Satan; and by changing our state, nature, and temper, has brought us into his kingdom of grace, in order to advance us into his kingdom of glory, under and through his infinitely beloved Son: 14. In whom, through his righteousness, fulfilled in our stead, and imparted and applied to our persons, we have a complete discharge from the guilt of sin and curse of the law; and in consequence thereof, a deliverance from the power of sin, Satan, and the wrath of God; and have a full title to, and the anticipating possession of, all spiritual and eternal blessings. 15. For the dignity of his person added an infinite value to his sacrifice, he being the express image of his Father's person—one with him in essence, nature, and perfections; and being, in his mediatorial office, incarnation, qualifications, and performances, the representative image of the Godhead, in which all its spiritual excellencies are most clearly, amiably, and transformingly displayed; and having existed from eternity as the essential Son of God, begotten of the Father before any creature was formed; and being, along with him, the former of all things, and accordingly the original Lord and first-born Heir thereof. 16. For by him, together with his Father and blessed Spirit, as the efficient cause, and in order to their subserviency to his mediatorial kingdom, and for his glory, as their last end, were all creatures, of every rank and order, material or spiritual, formed out of nothing; 17. Which undeniably demonstrates that he had an existence prior to all creatures, and has an infinite dignity above them; and all things do equally subsist, stand, or continue in him, who is omnipresent, all-powerful, and active in his providential influences over them, by which they are continually preserved in being, order, and proper action under him, as Head over all things to his church; 18. In which capacity he is not only her political Head of direction and government, but her Head of vital influence, to communicate all spiritual life, nourishment, growth, and activity to all and every one of his members—the original spring, not only of the spiritual life of their souls, but of the glorious resurrection of their bodies to eternal life; being the first that rose from the dead to an immortal life, and that by his own power, as the pledge, pattern, quickening cause, and first-fruits of his people's resurrection—that in all things he might be dignified and exalted by God, and esteemed by the church, even in his mediatorial capacity, above all saints, angels, and every other creature. 19. For, in effecting our salvation, JEHOVAH, in his own infinitely wise, gracious, and holy good pleasure, in honour to his Son and love to his people, has ordained and appointed that, answerably to the greatness of Christ's divine person and mediatorial office, all fulness of gifts and graces, merit and right, light and power, should permanently abide in him to the utmost perfection, not only for himself, but to be communicated to all who believe in Jesus Christ; that out of his fulness we may receive, and grace for grace. 20. And having, through that redemption which was secured by his sacrifice, which was finished in his painful, shameful, and accursed death on the cross, removed the enmity and made up the breach between him and believers, it has pleased the Father by him, as their Head and Mediator, to bring them all into a state of favour and friendship with himself, that the demands of his broken law and offended justice being fully answered by him in their stead, he might honourably act towards them in a way of gracious kindness and friendship, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, believers on earth, or glorified saints in heaven. 21, 22. In consequence of this, you who in the days of your heathenism and unregeneracy were estranged from the life of God, inwardly filled with enmity, and living in constant rebellion against him and his holy law, has he now, upon your believing, brought into a state of peace and friendship with himself, through the incarnation, obedience, and satisfactory sufferings of Christ, that he might present you now, as his mystical members in his church, and hereafter in the last judgment, as persons made righteous in law, and thoroughly sanctified in nature and life: 23. Which, I am satisfied, will be the happy issue with respect to you, as ye steadfastly persevere in the faith, profession, and obedience of the truth, as persons who are built upon and established in him as your spiritual foundation, and so maintain your ground against all the artful and violent attempts of Satan and his agents to shake or carry you away from Christ, the object of your hope, and from your hope in him, as set before you in the gospel, which ye have attentively heard and cordially

13 Who<sup>v</sup> hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son;<sup>4</sup>

14 In<sup>y</sup> whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins;

15 Who<sup>s</sup> is the image of the invisible God, the a first-born of every creature:

16 For *b*by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him:

17 And<sup>c</sup> he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

18 And he is *d*the head of the body, the church: who is *e*the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all<sup>5</sup> things he might have the pre-eminence.

19 For it pleased the Father that in him should<sup>9</sup> all fulness<sup>6</sup> dwell; received, when tenderly preached to both Jews and Gentiles, and of which God, in his infinite mercy, has appointed me a stated and inspired preacher. 24. And in the view of your steadfastness, I am so far from repining at the severe persecutions and present imprisonments which have befallen me on account of my preaching the gospel to Gentile sinners, that I greatly rejoice and glory in all these outward tribulations which I, who was once a persecutor, do or may endure, according to the appointment of Christ, and for his glory, and for the confirmation, edification, and comfort of his mystical body the church: 25. Of which church God, by his immediate authority, has constituted me an apostolic minister, according to that infinitely gracious order which he has fixed for dispensing the gospel, which is committed to me as a sacred trust, for the fulfilment of the ancient promises of the conversion, edification, and salvation of you Gentiles; 26. Which gospel is indeed a mystery, as it contains the unsearchable riches of Christ; and as it was for many ages concealed in its brightest glories, not only from the Jews, but which is now revealed, as clearly as the nature of the things permits, to his holy prophets and apostles, and by them to all true believers who, by repentance, faith, and regenerating grace, are his saints; 27. To whom, of his everlasting love, according to his compassion and ancient predictions, God would now, under the New Testament, make a plain discovery of the exceeding riches of the glory and incomprehensible excellency of the gospel tidings of salvation among you Gentiles—the all-comprehending sum of which is Christ, in his person, offices, relations, fulness, and work; who also is preached among you, and dwelling in your hearts by faith as the foundation, author, and object of all your hopes of eternal life. 28. And it is this Christ, in his natures, person, and mediation, and in the believing, affectionate, obediential regards due to him, whom we faithful preachers of the gospel make the grand subject of our ministrations, wisely and prudently admonishing all sorts of persons, Jews or Gentiles, to consider their sinful and miserable state by nature, and to beware of rejecting him; and instructing them, as God enables us, in the knowledge of the manifold wisdom of God, as displayed through him in the gospel revelation, to render them truly wise unto salvation, that we may be honoured instruments of presenting them to God as true and uncorrupted believers, renewed in all the faculties of their soul and members of their body, and remarkably fruitful in the several graces of the Spirit—who are perfect already in Christ their Head; and to be, through him, perfected in all knowledge and grace, holiness and happiness.—29. For this end, and in this work, as one excited and assisted by the remarkable influences of the almighty power of God, I labour to my utmost in prayer and preaching, and every other means, amidst all difficulties, and in the face of all opposition.

Ver. 7. It would seem from the way in which Epaphras is here mentioned that he was the first teacher of the Colossians, and perhaps the founder of the church there. He was a native of Colosse, ch. 4. 12, and shared Paul's imprisonment, for a time at least, in Rome, Phil. 23. It seems to have been from him the apostle learned so much of the Colossians, ch. 1. 8. P.

Ver. 12. An allusion, most probably, to the fact that the Israelites who came out of Egypt were not admitted to the inheritance of Canaan; while their children, under the teaching of Moses, and by the power of the Spirit, were prepared to enter in with Joshua, and to conquer and possess the land. C.

Ver. 15. Who is the image of the invisible God. God is essentially invisible; but 'the Word that was God' 'became flesh, and dwelt among us,' and in that flesh men 'beheld his glory,' and thus 'he that saw Christ saw the Father,' Jn. 14. 9; that is, in the works of love and power which Christ wrought.—The first-born of every creature. According to ver. 16, 17 Christ was before all things, and by him were all things created; therefore the title 'first-born' cannot signify that the Creator was a creature, for that were a contradiction; but the title πρωτότοκος appears to be taken, as in Jn. 1. 15, 30, for πρωτος, and signifies that Sonship of the Word which existed before any being was created, agreeably to the scriptural mode of describing eternity. See ch. 8. 23; 24. 26; comp. 1 Jn. 1. 2. C.—This expression in the Greek may signify either (1) That Christ was the first-born of every creature, which might imply that he was himself a creature; or, (2) That he was begotten before every creature; and, consequently, that he could not himself be a creature. While the grammatical form of the clause will bear either signification, sound canons of hermeneutics compel us to attach to it the latter meaning, which alone accords with the analogy of Scripture. He was 'begotten antecedently to everything that was created,' his eternal Sonship is here set forth. P.

Ver. 16. This description can never be applied to a moral or evangelical, but must refer to a natural creation. See ch. 2. 15; Ep. 1. 20; 6. 22. C.

Ver. 20. All things that, having rebelled against divine authority, needed reconciliation, and were given to Christ by the Father, Jn. 17. 2, that they might be called, gathered, kept, saved, and glorified, Ro. 8. 31. C.

Ver. 24. As if he had said, 'I who formerly took a cruel pleasure in persecuting others, now feel the highest joy in enduring, through what yet remains of my life, such afflictions as my Lord himself endured, and as he appoints for me, that thereby I may edify and confirm in patience, hope, and love, every persecuted member of his mystical body, the church.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers ought never to lose sight of their mission from Christ; and Christians ought never to lose sight of the divine authority of the Scriptures. Abundant is the grace, peace, and other blessings which Christ and his Father give, and which we ought therefore to wish to all his people. It is a great mercy to hear the gospel, to have its power manifested in our hearts, its glorious fruits appearing in our lives, and to hear of the like in others. And very thankful should we be that the gospel of our salvation, which was so long concealed under obscure figures and in dark promises, and almost confined to the Jews, is now plainly manifested to both Jews and Gentiles. Happy is it to experience its power in enlightening our mind, renewing our will, delivering us from the slavery of Satan, and translating us into the kingdom of Christ, that he may dwell in us as the hope of glory! With much assurance may prayers be made for the increase of saints in light and grace, their strengthenings unto all patience and comfort under present trials, and unto all fruitful and holy walking with God, and meetness for their heavenly inheritance. Infinite are the glories of our Redeemer, as the essential, necessary, and eternal Son of God; the Creator, Preserver, and Governor of all things; the Head of the church; the Storehouse of all spiritual blessings; the reconciling Mediator between God and men: and abundant the peace, pardon preservation, sanctification, and everlasting glory which his people receive by faith in him. Great is the honour to be made wise, faithful, diligent, and successful preachers of Christ. No sufferings nor labours must be reckoned too hard for his sake, or for the edification, comfort, and eternal salvation of souls.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. I mention these my earnest endeavours to present every man perfect in Christ Jesus, to make you sensible of my great care and fervent prayers for you and your neighbours of Laodicea, and others who never had an opportunity of attending on or being profited by my ministrations; 2. That their hearts may be abundantly filled with divine consolation, as believers who are closely and firmly cemented together in the most cordial affection to Christ and to one another, and are thoroughly united in their endeavours for attaining a distinct, clear, and complete acquaintance with the gospel plan of salvation, in all its riches of spiritual and eternal blessings, unto the entire satisfaction of their souls, and their making an honourable, steady, and public profession of those deep things of it which were from all eternity intended and prepared in the gracious mind of God the Father, and are secured, revealed, and bestowed through faith in Christ, as the great Mediator between God and man; 3. In which mystery of the gospel, and especially in which Christ, are truly, safely, and incomprehensibly laid up and contained all the inexhaustible treasures of wisdom and knowledge for managing all the affairs of providence and grace, and for manifesting the whole will of God as to our salvation, and seasonably supplying our wants, enlightening our minds, and daily directing our steps to the heavenly glory. 4. And I would lead you to consider this inexhaustible fulness of wisdom and knowledge laid up for you in Christ and the gospel, in order to prevent your being seduced from him and his truths by pretenders to heathen philosophy and Jewish learning. 5. For though in bodily presence I am, and always have been, absent from you, yet my heart is with you, delightfully reflecting on what I have heard of your faith, love, and hope; and, through the suggestions of God's Spirit, I have a view of your rich attainments and diversified trials; and am affected as if I were present among you, rejoicing in your orderly behaviour and regular discipline, and in your firm, solid, and steady adherence of faith to the person, mediation, and doctrines of Christ, notwithstanding all the artifices which have been used to corrupt your minds, and draw you off from him. 6. As therefore ye have by faith received the Lord Jesus Christ in his person and offices, as your Prophet, to instruct you; your Priest, to make atonement and intercede for you; and your King, to defend, rule, and govern you,—be careful, by virtue of union to and gracious influence from him, to cleave to him with full purpose of heart, and to walk in a daily exercise of faith on him, and in a constant observation of all his ordinances and commandments, answerably to your profession of and relation to him: 7. As trees of righteousness, being rooted in and fastening on him, to keep you fixed and immovable, and drawing nourishment from him for your spiritual growth; and as a spiritual house, being built upon him and closely united to him, as the only foundation of your faith and hope, security and salvation—that ye may be confirmed in the doctrine and grace of faith in him, as ye have heard by the ministry of Ephraim; and may exceedingly abound in the daily increase of knowledge, faith, and every other grace, with enlarged thankfulness and praise to the author and finisher of all that concerns you.—8. Take heed lest seducers make a prey of you, and draw you off from Christ and his pure gospel, and rob you of its privileges and blessings, through the subtleties and corruptions of heathen philosophy, Jewish traditions, or the observation of Mosaic ceremonies; none of which things are, according to the mind and will of Christ, revealed in the gospel, nor do any of them, as now urged and observed, lead your soul to him only for salvation, who alone hath an all-sufficiency for it in himself. 9. For all the perfections of the Godhead, in their utmost fulness, for ever and substantially abide and dwell in his incarnate person, or temple of his manhood, in a personal and infinitely more glorious manner than ever JEHOVAH dwelt in the Jewish tabernacle or temple. 10. And ye who have received him by faith, and are united to him as members of his mystical body, have all your defects made up, and all your securities or blessings completed in him as your Head, made of God to you wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption; who, answerable to the infinite dignity of his divine person, is, in his office capacity, exalted to be the sovereign Ruler of all ranks of angels or men, good or bad. 11. In him therefore ye are so complete as to have no need of ceremonial circumcision, as judaizing teachers pretend, being spiritually circumcised by the Holy Ghost, who hath renewed your heart and cut off your whole system of inward corruption—removing the guilt, power, and defilement of it, not by any human influences, but merely by the cleansing and sanctifying operation of Jesus Christ. 12. And in that baptism, which Christ hath instituted in the room of circumcision, ye have received the sign of and obligation to that holiness which is, or ought to be, in you as God's faithful people; and have had represented, sealed, and applied to you a certain and continued death to sin, and a quickening and resurrection to a life of holiness, in conformity to and by virtue derived from his death and resurrection, through that faith you have exercised in your hearts by the same almighty influence by which God raised up Christ from the dead, and will, by virtue of his resurrection, at last raise you up to eternal life. 13. And you, who, in your sinful unregenerate state, were dead in law, lying under a just sentence of condemnation, and dead to God and everything spiritually good, lying under the power and filth of your inward corruptions, which circumcision anciently signified, hath God now raised up to a new life of grace and holiness, in order to a heavenly life of glory and blessedness together with Christ as your Pattern and Head of influence—having, on account of his righteousness imparted, freely pardoned to each of you all your iniquities, original and actual, lesser or greater, and given you a full and glorious title to eternal life; 14. Blotting out, as it were, all our transgressions by the blood of his Son, and thereby disannulling that federal or ceremonial obligation to punishment on account of them which testified that we were transgressors, and which separated the Gentiles from the church and privileges of the Jews, and was the cause of much enmity between them; and by his death entirely removing and utterly destroying it, that it might never be produced in judgment against us. 15. And having, by fully honouring all law and justice, disarmed Satan and all his subordinate ranks of apostate angels of their power, which arises from the curse of the law, he exposed them to open contempt in the view of all the holy from the rudiments<sup>6</sup> of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, 21 (Touch<sup>a</sup> not; taste not; handle not;

22 Which<sup>e</sup> all are to perish with the using;) after<sup>9</sup> the commandments and doctrines of men?

23 Which things have indeed<sup>h</sup> a show of wisdom in will-worship, and humility, and neglecting<sup>7</sup> of the body; not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh.

CHAPTER III.

1 He sheweth where we should seek Christ. 5 He exhorteth to mortification, 10 to put off the old man, and to put on Christ; 12 exhorting to charity, humility, and other several duties.

IF ye<sup>a</sup> then be risen with Christ, <sup>b</sup>seek those things which are above, where <sup>c</sup>Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.

3 For <sup>e</sup>ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God.<sup>2</sup>

4 When Christ, who <sup>9</sup>is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also <sup>h</sup>appear with him in glory.

5 Mortify<sup>i</sup> therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry:

6 For<sup>j</sup> which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the <sup>k</sup>children of disobedience:

7 In<sup>l</sup> the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them.<sup>3</sup>

8 But now ye also <sup>m</sup>put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.

9 Lie<sup>n</sup> not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;

10 And <sup>9</sup>have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:

11 Where<sup>a</sup> there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but <sup>b</sup>Christ is all, and in all.

12 Put<sup>s</sup> on therefore, as the <sup>c</sup>elect of God, holy and beloved, <sup>d</sup>bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering;

13 Forbearing<sup>9</sup> one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel<sup>4</sup> against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.

14 And <sup>e</sup>above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.<sup>5</sup>

15 And let <sup>f</sup>the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.

16 Let<sup>g</sup> the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; <sup>h</sup>teaching and admonishing one another in <sup>i</sup>psalms and hymns and spiritual songs,<sup>6</sup> singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

17 And <sup>j</sup>whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

18 Wives,<sup>k</sup> submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.

19 Husbands,<sup>l</sup> love your wives, and be not bitter against them.

angels, and triumphed over them as his conquered foes.

16. Since therefore believing Gentiles as well as Jews are complete in Christ, and the handwriting of ordinances, contrary to both, is cancelled, let none pretend that the non-observance of ceremonial ordinances relating to meats and drinks, or to their annual or monthly festivals, or even the Jewish seventh-day sabbath, can hinder your spiritual or eternal happiness; or, if they do, regard them not. 17. For the whole of these observances required by the ceremonial law were but merely shadows and figures of the good things which were to come under the gospel; but the truth, reality, or substance represented by them is brought in by Christ, and to be found in him.—18. And since he, in whom ye are complete, is the Head of all principality and power, let no one, whether Jewish zealot or Gentile philosopher, deprive you of your spiritual comfort or eternal glory, or lead you out of the way to it, seducing you to adopt human inventions in the worship of God, or to worship angels, good or bad, as mediators between God and men; through the pride of their corrupt hearts, pretending uncommon insight into the things of God, and attempting to pry into what he never revealed; 19. Adopting these corruptions of worship to the great dishonour of Jesus Christ, and rejecting, instead of laying hold on, adhering to, and by faith trusting in him alone, as the only and all-sufficient Mediator and Advocate, to recommend them and their prayers to the acceptance of God; and joining creatures in honour with him who is the Head of angels, good or bad, and of every other creature, and who is the Representative and the vital as well as governing Head of his church, from whom all her true members, deriving spiritual nourishment, are united to him and to one another, by his Spirit, and by faith, love, and religious ordinances; and do, by virtue derived from God, increase in light and grace, comfort, holiness, and strength, and in good works, according to his will, and for his glory. 20-23. If then, according to the meaning of your baptism, ye, by virtue of union with Christ, and by communion with him in his death, are fully discharged from the moral law as a covenant, and from the obligations of the ceremonial law, why, as if ye were merely carnal men, and lived under a carnal dispensation, do ye, from regard to human imposition, submit yourselves to any of the legal ordinances, which prohibit the touching or eating of meats once ceremonially unclean, but now allowed for men's perishing provision, as things that cannot defile their soul?—These human injunctions, relative to the service of God or mortification of our body, beyond what he has prescribed, have nothing worthy in themselves or honourable to him, but are a mere shadow of wisdom or humility, and are really calculated to cultivate and please the false taste of men of corrupt minds.

Ver. 1. Laodicea. A famous city in the neighbourhood of Colosse. C.

Ver. 7. Rooted, as a tree bidding defiance to every storm.—Built up, as a living stone in a living temple.—Note, There is here no mixture, but merely a variety of most appropriate metaphor, each forming a separate and complete picture in itself. C.

Ver. 9. He embodied the Godhead: God was manifest in his flesh, in life, wisdom, love, and power. C.

Ver. 10. Ye are complete in him. Rather, 'Ye are made complete in him'—in knowledge of God, in motives to holiness, in comfort of heart, in possession of righteousness, in heirship of glory. C.

Ver. 14. The handwriting. The bond of Jewish ordinances by which we were bound as a debtor to a creditor.—Nailing was an ancient mode of cancelling a bond.—To his cross. Rather, 'by his cross'—the condemnation of the law having been reversed by his sacrifice. C.

Ver. 15. This verse is very obscure. The subject of it may be, grammatically, either God or Christ. From ver. 13 I am led to the belief that it is God; and I therefore adopt Alford's interpretation, which is in substance as follows:—'Putting off (not 'having spoiled'—a meaning which this word cannot have) the principalities and powers (the glories and angelic attendants which are referred to in ver. 10 and ch. 1. 16), he (God the Father) exhibited them (the principalities and powers as completely subjected to Christ) openly, triumphing over them in him' (i.e. showing his omnipotence by placing all these under Christ as Head of the church, so that he may employ them in his work). P.

Ver. 18. Let no man, &c. 'Let no man beguile you of your prize'—the high calling of God in Christ—'desiring' to initiate you 'in an affected humility and worshipping of angels.' The reference seems to be to some false teachers who inculcated the inappropriateness of a direct address to God by Christ, and urged the necessity of angel mediators as an evidence of humility. C.

Ver. 20-22. 'Why are ye subject' to those vain philosophical precepts or Jewish ordinances, which are ever saying, 'Touch not' this, even with your finger; 'taste not' that, lest you be seduced by appetite; 'handle not' this, for it is unclean—precepts which have no real relation to the immortal soul, but merely to bodily ailments, 'which all perish with the using?' C.

Ver. 23. Not in anything really honourable because spiritual, but merely in things pertaining to bodily gratification by food. And, truly, ascetic severity, instead of improving the heart, is usually found to pamper self-righteousness and pride. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is God's will, and his ministers' care, that the saints be united, comforted, and daily increase in knowledge, faith, and holy order; and that, having received Jesus Christ in all his offices as an all-supplying fountain, they should walk in him with the most steady faith, love, holy obedience, and cordial thanksgiving. Christians have need to beware of carnal wisdom and plausible errors. And it is absurd to forsake Christ or his gospel for anything else, when he has such fulness of Godhead and of spiritual blessings, and renders us complete in himself. Thrice happy are they who, being quickened by his Spirit, renewed in their hearts, delivered from the broken law, reconciled to God, and made triumphant over devils, derive all necessary and nourishing influences from him as their Representative, vital Head, and gracious Governor. Rich is the mercy that, through his incarnation, obedience, and death, we are delivered from sin, from curses, from devils, from death and hell, and from all the dark and burdensome rites of the Jewish dispensation. And it is absurd for such as the Lord has thus freed to retain those rites, or add others, in the worship of God, as if such things could render us acceptable in his sight.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. If, according to your profession, ye be indeed risen from under the law, and the guilt and power of sin, to a life of righteousness and holiness—together with, in conformity to, and by the quickening virtue of, our risen Redeemer, applied by faith—let your hearts, in their temper and exercises, and in all your meditations, views, inquiries, and pursuits, by prayer, and every other ordinance of God, aspire after realizing clear and enlarged experiences and assurances of the durable, substantial, and satisfying things of the heavenly state, where he, your ascended Head, is exalted in all his majesty and authority, dignity and glory, rest and safety, to make intercession, and prepare a place for you. 2. Let all your affections of desire and hope, love and delight, be supremely fixed upon the excellent things which belong to and are transacted in that heavenly state, and not upon the empty, uncertain, perishing, and defiling pleasures and enjoyments, or even the carnal ordinances of this world. 3. And this is highly proper, since, by profession and obligation, and many of you by actual communion with Christ in his death, are really dead in your hearts and affections to the Mosaic law, and are crucified with him to sin, Satan, and the world, and all the pleasures and enjoyments of your spiritual life are maintained and promoted in secret and mysterious transactions and fellowship between God and your souls, by virtue of Christ, who is one with him, till it be perfected in that eternal life which lies so much out of sight in this life, but is nevertheless secured and treasured up with Christ in the tender love and immediate presence of God for you. 4. And when Christ, who is the source, author, sustainer, finisher, scope, and end of our spiritual life, and lives in us, shall appear in all his glory to judge the world, ye who accept him by faith shall be glorified together with and in conformity to him in soul and body. 5. In the prospect therefore of that blessed day, and in reflection on the spiritual purity and sublime happiness which ye shall then enjoy, as men dead to sin and risen with Christ, labour to have all your carnal and sinful dispositions, which are like members to the body of inward corruption, and are influenced and exerted by your bodily members, more and more weakened and slain, particularly all inclinations to unchastity in thought, word, and deed, and all excessive or irregular desires after the enjoyments of this world, whereby ye put creatures into an idolatrous competition with or preference to God. 6. Abhor and abstain from them, as polluting abominations which draw down the fearful judgments of God in this life, and especially in the next, upon unbelieving obstinate sinners. 7. And the more earnest care is necessary in this matter, as, in the days of your heathenism and unregeneracy, of free choice and with great eagerness, ye lived in the love and practice of these abominations. 8. But now, as Christians, ye ought to have no further fellowship with these or any other works of darkness; such as causeless and intemperate anger, furious passion, malicious revengefulness, reproachful speeches, particularly of God and sacred things, and all immodest expressions, which tend to defile your own or others' minds. 9. And never, either rashly, in jest, in excuse, in ill-will, or for gain, speak anything contrary to strict truth, since, in profession, and I hope in reality, ye have absolutely cast off and renounced the whole system of inward and original, of subtle, but just now decaying and dying corruption, with all its pernicious and defiling practices; 10. And, by a work of heart-changing grace, ye have, as it were, clothed yourselves with the holy qualities and beautiful ornaments of a new nature, formed after the image of God, the Creator and Renewer of men; 11. In which new creation there is no partial respect shown to persons on account of any external distinctions or privileges, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, savage or polite, slaves or freemen; but Christ is ALL IN ALL in the whole of their salvation, in all their experiences and privileges. 12. Therefore, in an entire dependence on Christ, and imitation of him, and as persons living in him, and accordingly helped into holiness, and regarded as the objects of God's distinguishing love, instead of indulging or practising works of wickedness, earnestly practise, and, as it were, clothe and adorn yourselves with the most tender compassion towards the distressed, and with a generous and benevolent temper and behaviour towards all men, with modest thoughts of yourselves, and condescension to persons of low degree, with gentleness, mildness, and candour towards all, and persevering patience under repeated and long-continued provocations; 13. Bearing with and forbearing one another's various infirmities; mutually forgiving one another their offences and injuries, in imitation and for the sake of Christ, who, at the expense of his own blood, has fully and freely pardoned all your infinite crimes. 14. And especially let the exercise of brotherly love, as an upper garment, add a beautiful lustre to and regulate all the other graces—which is at once the fulfilment of God's law, and knits together the members of Christ in the most perfect harmony, till his whole mystical body arrive at its perfect stature in him. 15. And for the more effectual cultivation of this brotherly love and every other grace, let the sense of God's friendship with you, through Christ, engage you always to practise and live under the influence of that excellent peace and concord among yourselves of which God is the author, approver, and commander, and to which ye are called by the grace of the gospel, and your union as members in Christ's church; and let the sense of mercies received or expected animate you to constant thankfulness and praise. 16. And for the same purpose let the Holy Scriptures, of which Christ is the author, matter, and end, be applied to and fixedly reside in your hearts, as the constant mean of renewed influences from him, and of directing your whole conversation; and be mutually helpful in instructing and exciting one another to bless and praise God in every proper form—not only with grateful and harmonious voices, but with spiritual and gracious affections towards Jesus Christ, and God in him. 17. And whatever ye do in thought, word, or deed, in public or private, in things religious or civil, let it be done with a conscientious regard to the authority and command of the Lord Jesus Christ, with an humble dependence on him for all direction and assistance, and with an eye to his Father's glory—always giving God thanks for his unnumbered mercies through him, through whom the blessings themselves are granted, and your thanksgivings for them accepted.—18. And as the Christian religion does not dissolve but strengthen all moral obligations to relative duties required by the law of nature, let each of you carefully attend to them, notwithstanding your differences in other things: particularly see that ye Christian wives behave in a meek and submissive manner to your lawful husbands, as far as consists with your superior relation and obedience to Christ. 19. And ye, Christian husbands, treat your wives with all possible tenderness, kindness, and affection, doing all that you can for their temporal and spiritual ease, comfort, and happiness; and never exercise a severe and arbitrary lordship over them, or abuse them by passionate words, blows, or other severe conduct. 20. Ye Christian children, love and honour your parents, of whatever character or condition they be, and conscientiously obey them in every just and reasonable command; for this is agreeable to the will of Christ, and acceptable to God through him. 21. On the other hand, see that ye parents carefully study the tempers of your children, and by prudent, kind, and gentle methods establish your authority over them; but never, by furious or opprobrious language, unreasonable impositions, or unmerciful corrections, sour their minds, break their spirits, and fill them with prejudices against you and the religion which ye profess. 22. And ye servants, whether bought or hired, be diligent and faithful in executing the trusts and doing the business which your masters commit to you, fulfilling all their commands as far as ye can in consistency with your duty to Christ, your Master in heaven; and that cheerfully and sincerely, at all times, from regard to God's honour and authority, and as in his sight. 23. And whatever ye are called to do in their service, let it not be done with grudging and reluctance, but with a willing and ready mind, from a sense of duty towards the Lord Jesus Christ, in obedience to his command, with a view to his glory, and not from a selfish mercenary spirit, which aims only at pleasing of men. 24. And to animate you to cheerfulness and fidelity in your service, know that, whatever ill treatment or unrighteous returns ye meet with, instead of a suitable reward, from your masters on earth, ye shall now, and especially hereafter, be graciously rewarded with the heavenly inheritance; for in doing your duty to earthly masters ye really pay honour and do service to the Lord Jesus himself, who hath placed you in your subordinate station for that purpose. 25. But he, whether master or servant, who indulges himself in wronging the other by any injustice, shall receive a just and impartial recompense and reward for all his iniquitous conduct, none being respected by Christ more than another upon account of any external circumstances.

Ver. 2. The chief of the 'things above' are—the Father and his eternal love; Christ and his righteousness and intercession; the Holy Spirit and his graces; the company of angels and the spirits of just men made perfect; rest from labours; happiness and glory. C.

Ver. 4. The 'glory' mainly consists in victory over sin and Satan; in acknowledgment as faithful servants, dear children, and heirs of God; in copartnership in the throne of God and the Lamb; in companionship with the blessed; in perfected holiness of heart implanted by the Spirit; and in the glory of renovated bodies, together with the inconceivable splendours of the paradise of God. C.

Ver. 11. Christ is all things to the believer. He is his light, his life, his wisdom, his righteousness, his sanctification, his redemption, his hope here, his glory hereafter.—Christ is . . . in all; that is, in all believers, of whatever nation, kindred, or tongue; and 'in all' places where two or three are assembled in his name; and 'in all' times and circumstances, even to the end of the world. C.

Ver. 14. Above all—not as if other graces could exist without charity, or as if charity were better than them all; but charity is to be put on as a covering, ornament, or cincture, to all the other garments which believers were required to put on. C.

Ver. 17. In the name of the Lord Jesus—asking of God, speaking to men, and acting in public and private, as instructed of him by his Word and Spirit, and in all conducting yourselves as his disciples, representatives, and servants. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How dignified and happy are they who are risen with Christ, and whose life is laid up with him in God! Certain is their glorious appearance with Christ in the last judgment, and their eternal reign with him in heaven. And it is necessary that they set their affections on things above, and abhor and mortify every lust, shun every sinful practice, and study to be like Jesus their Head, their Saviour, their Portion, their Master, in both heart and life. A worldly and wicked mind and a heavenly hope are quite inconsistent. It is absurd to conceive ourselves members of Jesus Christ, redeemed to God by his blood, while we live in unchastity, covetousness, sinful passion, malice, falsehood, or blasphemy. If we belong to him, we must prove it by our conformity to him in our tempers and practice. Actuated by the faith of his forgiving kindness, what merciful compassion, what meekness, what humility, what forbearance, what readiness to forgive injuries, what brotherly love, what calmness of mind, what experimental and abundant knowledge of the Scriptures, what labours to edify one another, what thankfulness to God, what constant improvement of Christ, what punctuality in relative duties, ought to mark every Christian! And in every relative duty great regard must be had to Christ as the commander, the source, the motive, the pattern, the end of them all.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. And as servants ought to obey their masters in all lawful things, so ye Christian masters ought to deal justly and equitably with them, allowing them proper work, provision, and wages, and giving them proper reproofs or encouragements in their work, knowing that ye yourselves serve the Lord Jesus Christ, and must give an account of your treatment of servants, as well as of every part of your conduct, to him who now inspects, and will hereafter judge and reward you. 2. But to return to general exhortations, let all of you daily, at set seasons, in secret, private, or public prayer to God, in the name of Christ, plead for his blessings—temporal, spiritual, or eternal. Watch for special calls of Providence and needful assistances of spiritual influence, to make you ever ready, fervent, and persevering in prayer; and watch against all hindrances of it, or deadness or wandering in it. And let all your supplications for mercies be joined with grateful praises and cheerful thanksgivings for what ye have received or expect. 3. And in all your addresses to God earnestly plead with him that I and my fellow-labourers in the ministry may be favoured with extensive opportunities and abilities to preach the gospel in a right manner, and with remarkable success, and to lay open the deep things, and exhibit and offer the unsearchable riches of Christ (for doing of which I am now a prisoner in bonds); 4. That, as far as Providence shall grant me opportunities, I may be eminently assisted in declaring the whole counsel of God with a proper frame of spirit, and in a duly free, extensive, and plain manner. 5. And let the whole of your conversation toward your unbelieving neighbours be managed with such Christian skill, circumspection, and prudence that ye may not be defiled by them, or encourage them in sin; but may, by your example, win them to Christ. In this manner improve and extend every opportunity of doing your proper duty, and doing good to them. 6. And let your speech be always such as proceeds from the grace of God in your heart, and as may recommend his free favour to others, and promote in them a gracious temper, that thereby ye may know how to give a reason of your hope with all modesty, meekness, and wisdom; and how to answer scrupulous doubts, serious inquiries, and captious cavillings relative to any point of Christian faith, duty, or experience which may be proposed to you.—7. As to my outward circumstances and inward comforts, Tychicus, my beloved fellow-Christian and faithful minister of Christ, who brings you this letter, will fully inform you. 8. And being desirous to know how matters in religion stand with you, I have ordered him to make a thorough inquiry, and inform me of them—while he comforts you by his good counsels, and his informations of God's kindness to me. 9. He and Onesimus your countryman, who is now a noted convert to Christ, and comes along with him, will inform you fully of everything important about this place. 10, 11. Aristarchus, the Macedonian, who endangered his life for my sake, and is now my fellow-prisoner; and John Mark, nephew to Barnabas, my dear old colleague in apostolic labours (whom, if he come to you, I hope ye will respectfully receive, according to the recommendations he hath received); and Joshua Justus—the only three Jewish preachers who have here assisted me in propagating the gospel, and comforted me under my sufferings,—send you their heartiest wishes of temporal and spiritual blessings. 12–14. Epaphras, your fellow-citizen, who spends much of his time in earnest wrestlings with God in prayer, that ye may continue steadfast in the faith, be fully instructed in and eminently conformed to the will of God, and who manifests an uncommon concern for your present and eternal happiness, and your neighbours in Laodicea and Hierapolis; Luke, the beloved physician and evangelist; and Demas,—send you their Christian respects. 15. Present my cordial love to your brethren at Laodicea; and particularly to Nymphas, and his regular, holy, and religious family, or other Christians who meet at his house for public worship. 16. And when ye have, in a proper and public manner, read this letter among yourselves, let an exact copy of it be sent to and read in like manner by the church in Laodicea; and let the letter from the Laodiceans be also publicly read among you. 17. And as ye are surrounded with subtle enemies who seek to pervert you, entreat and respectfully admonish Archippus, under a deep sense of the excellent nature, design, and importance of his ministerial work, to lay out himself to his utmost in the authority and strength of Jesus Christ, and for his glory, to fulfil the duties of his office with all wisdom, diligence, faithfulness, and perseverance; explaining, confirming, vindicating, and enforcing the great doctrines of revelation, in exemplifying them in his own conduct, in reproving sin and confuting error, and in every other thing in his power, for the furtherance of the gospel in the conversion of sinners, and the edification and comfort of saints. 18. To conclude in my usual manner, I send you, in my own handwriting, my hearty respects, wishing that the full favour of God, with all the precious manifestations and effects thereof, may abound towards you. This I heartily desire and hope for; and that my letter may have the greater weight with you, and render you the more earnest in prayer for me, remember that I am suffering, with patience and cheerfulness, in bonds, for preaching the gospel to you Gentiles.

Ver. 1. The 'servants' here spoken of were bond-servants or slaves, wherefore the apostle is the more careful to commend them both to justice and equity—principles that could not long be in exercise until slavery would first change its character, and then cease to exist. C.

Ver. 3. A door of utterance—acceptable capacity and favourable opportunity of preaching the gospel. C.

Ver. 6. With grace—courteous, respectful, free from all rudeness real or affected.—Seasoned with salt—commingled with such wisdom as would render it agreeable to the intellectual taste, worthy of being preserved in memory, thought of, and repeated—even as salt seasons food, and preserves it from putrefaction.—That ye may know, &c. That having your thoughts in a state of preservation and readiness, and your minds habituated to a respectful and agreeable, because sincere and humble, manner of address, you may be able to reply to the learned or unlearned, the rich or the poor. C.

Ver. 9. Onesimus had been Philemon's slave (see Phil. 1.), and is most probably sent as a free man, as the best practical and living commentary on the apostle's directions for masters. C.

Ver. 11. These only. It is worthy of remark that Paul had now but five fellow-soldiers at Rome; and yet, let none 'despise the day of small things;' for these were the leaders of that army that finally subdued that gigantic heathen empire.—Note. Among the millions of an unconverted world, let the ministers of Christ never despond; God, who encouraged Gideon to assail and conquer Midian with a reduced army, is able to conquer the whole kingdom of darkness by whatever handful he may please to commission. C.

Ver. 16. The epistle from Laodicea. Some suppose this to refer to a lost epistle; but this is gratuitous and unauthorized. Some think it to refer to 1 Ti.; others, to the epistle to the Ephesians left by Tychicus on his way to Colosse. What epistle it was is unknown, and conjecture is useless. The record, however, is most valuable, as it inculcates the duty of reading the apostolic writings. C.

REFLECTIONS.—With great equity, mildness, and mercy ought masters to treat their servants, in the view of God's authority over them, and of their accounting to him. Great is the necessity of fervent and persevering prayer for fellow-Christians, and especially for ministers—that they may preach the gospel with proper wisdom, courage, and success. And much wisdom and grace are necessary to make Christians improve their time, and order their speech to the honour of Jesus Christ and the edification of their neighbours. Much mutual esteem of one another, and fervent wrestlings for the church; great sympathy towards the distressed; courtesy to all men, especially the saints; and studious care to fulfil their ministry in the Lord—ought to prevail in every minister of Christ. And earnest care to vie with one another in every grace and duty, and to edify one another in love, and even to render their pastors duly diligent and faithful, ought to take place among all Christian professors.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

There is a considerable similarity between the epistles to the Ephesians, the Philippians, and the Colossians; so that they may be most advantageously read as mutual commentaries. The Epistle to the Colossians has in it, however, several particulars that are not referred to in the others. Among these the most prominent are, the germinant doctrines of angel-worship, and acts of voluntary austerity and will-worship, which were subsequently matured by the popedom of Rome;—which voluntary austerities, in penances, pilgrimages, and such like, 'have indeed a show of wisdom and humility, and neglecting of the body;' but have in reality sprung from that ignorance which has rejected, even as the Jews rejected, 'the righteousness of God,' Ro. 10. 3; which will-worship has superseded the all-prevailing intercession of Christ, by conjoining with him apostles, saints, and angels, all exalted to be objects of confidence, not only without, but in defiance of, the divine commandment, Mat. 4. 10. Thus early did the enemy begin to sow the tares where even the hands of apostles had sown the wheat! And, no doubt, they will be permitted by a wise and merciful Providence to 'grow together until the harvest,' when the tares of false doctrine and evil practices shall be separated, and the wheat of truth and holiness shall be gathered for the garner of the Lord, Mat. 3. 12; 13. 25. C.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS

Thessalonica was the chief city of Macedonia, rebuilt by Philip the father of Alexander the Great, and so named to commemorate his victory over the Thessalians. Here Paul planted a Christian church, consisting partly of Jews and partly of Gentiles; but was quickly driven from them by the fury of the Jews, Ac. 17. 1-10: and his attempt to return to them seems to have been hindered by the same cause, ch. 2. 18. To show his great affection for, and care of them, and to prevent their being seduced by false teachers, or discouraged by persecution, he wrote them this epistle;—in which he affectionately thanks God for his mercy manifested in their conversion, ch. i.: represents the engaging example he had set before them, and the tender care he had of them; his intention to send Timothy to comfort them, and his praying for their welfare, ch. ii. iii.: and, in view of the approaching judgment of the world, admonishes them to make proper preparation in all the branches of holiness, ch. iv. v.

[Thessalonica was a flourishing city and seaport, the capital of Macedonia. This name was given to it by Philip, father of Alexander, in memory of his conquest of Thessaly. We learn from Ac. 17. 1-9 that Paul, during his first tour in Europe, preached the gospel in Thessalonica with considerable success, but was driven thence through the malice of the unbelieving Jews. From Thessalonica he went to Berea, and thence to Athens. From Athens he sent Timothy to Thessalonica to inquire into the state of the church, and confirm the new converts in the faith. Timothy, on his return, found Paul at Corinth,—whence, about A.D. 52 (as is generally supposed), he wrote this epistle, the topics being suggested by Timothy's report. This is also generally believed to have been the first of that glorious series of epistles with which Paul afterwards enriched the churches. Particular references are made in this epistle to Ge. 15. 16; Is. 59. 17; Zec. 14. 5; 1 Co. 15. 22, 51, 52. C.]

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1. Paul, together with Silas and Timothy, his assistants in preaching the gospel—to you Christians at Thessalonica who believe in God as the only true God, and in Jesus Christ as the only true Messiah—wish all the rich manifestations and fruits of divine favour, and the most abundant peace and prosperity, temporal, and especially spiritual and eternal, from these divine Persons, according to their different stations in the work of our redemption. 2. And in our stated and occasional addresses to God, we daily, and in the most express manner, offer up our most solemn thanksgivings to God for his mercy bestowed upon you, and our most fervent supplications that he would perfect his work of grace which he has begun in you; 3. Being animated hereunto by the affecting and constant remembrance which we have of that lively and operative faith manifesting itself in all holy obedience, and of that ardent love to Jesus Christ, his oracles, ordinances, and people, and the manifold exertions thereof towards us and towards one another, and of that patient continuance in well-doing under all your tribulations, and waiting for God to crown your lively hopes of eternal life, through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, with full enjoyment—which he has wrought in you, through the living and constant faith which, as his children, ye exercise with all uprightness and sincerity, as in his sight: 4. By which manifest fruits of holiness ye and we justly conclude that ye have graciously led to accept eternal salvation. 5. For the gospel preached by me and my in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God, <sup>which</sup> trieth our hearts.

5 For <sup>neither</sup> at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness; <sup>God is</sup> witness:

6 Nor<sup>j</sup> of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor <sup>yet</sup> of others, when <sup>we</sup> might have <sup>been</sup> burdensome,<sup>5</sup> as the apostles of Christ.

7 But we were <sup>gentle</sup> among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children:

8 So, <sup>being</sup> affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

9 For ye remember, brethren, <sup>our</sup> labour and travail: for labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of God.

10 Ye<sup>p</sup> are witnesses, and God <sup>also</sup>, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

assistants did not merely reach your ears; but while it was attested by miracles, the almighty influence of the Holy Ghost brought it home to your hearts, and produced in your souls an unshaken assurance of the truth and importance of it, and of your personal interest in the blessings thereby conveyed; God thus owning our plain, patient, and faithful preaching of the gospel among you, in order to promote your eternal salvation. 6. And by this powerful influence of the gospel on your hearts ye immediately became imitators of us preachers, and of Christ our glorious Master, in faith, obedience, and patience, having, amidst all your severe persecutions, firmly believed the truths of the gospel, and thereby received such inward consolations of the Holy Ghost as sweetly supported you under your sufferings; 7. So that ye became eminent, encouraging, and exemplary patterns of faith, patience, and holiness, to all those who in Greece were afterwards turned to the Lord. 8. For the gospel of Jesus Christ, having had such glorious success among you, was thenceforward published far and near with great reputation and advantage—the fame of your faith in God through Jesus Christ, manifested by remarkable fruits of holiness, having so spread abroad that we have no occasion to speak of it; 9. For wherever we travel we meet with persons who are disposed, with wonder and joy, to mention to us what happy effects our ministrations had among you; with what sincerity ye embraced the gospel which we preached; and how, by its powerful influence, ye voluntarily and quickly renounced your heathen idols, and with indignation turned from them, to believe in, adore, and obey that God who alone has all life, glory, and blessedness in himself, and is the fountain of all created life, natural, temporal, spiritual, or eternal; 10. And to wait with faith, preparation, patience, desire, and hope, under all your present sufferings, for the glorious appearance of his eternal Son, whom he hath raised from the dead to judge the world—even Jesus Christ, who, by his obedience and suffering, secured, and by his loving sacrifice seeks, our deliverance from his dreadful wrath, which will be for ever coming, like a perpetual torrent of deep displeasure, to the wicked.

More accurately—'Even as ye know (ye yourselves from personal observation and experience) what manner of men we proved to be (i.e. were shown by our acts, and the authority and power with which we proclaimed the gospel) among you, on your account' (so as thus to promote your eternal interests by pressing gospel truth on your acceptance). Ver. 8. Thessalonica being a sea-port, the news of the conversion of so many of the inhabitants would readily obtain a wide circulation—so graciously does God overrule all local circumstances to the advancement of the kingdom of his Son! O that Britain, the great sea-port of the world, would combine the gospel with all her commerce, and supply the nations with that merchandise which is better than gold, and enrich them with that gain which is better than fine gold! C.

Ver. 9. They themselves—that is, 'all that believed in Macedonia and Achaia,' ver. 7. C.

Ver. 10. Hope—the hope especially of Christ's second coming—is the chief subject of this epistle. It is the pole-star of the church on earth; for then, and only then, will be consummated the church's happiness. The Greek word does not convey the idea of immediate expectation, but rather of deep, abiding, patient faith and expectation. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Thrice happy is it when the gospel is really accepted in the hearers' hearts; and when they, by their conversion from idols to God, and a holy imitation of Christ and his servants, in love, patience, and purity, prove their active faith in him! They are a credit to their religion who receive the gospel with full assurance of its divine truth, excellence, and importance, and with joy in the Holy Ghost, amidst manifold tribulations. With great pleasure should faithful ministers assist one another, and reflect on the success of their labours, regard their spiritual children, pray for them, and labour to promote their edification. And nothing is more endearing, comforting, or animating to holiness, than saving views of Jesus Christ the Son of God and his everlasting salvation.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1. And yourselves, my dear Christian brethren, know that, as I and my two fellow-preachers did not entertain you with unprofitable subjects, or a mere sound of words in our ministrations, so they were not without that good fruit which the promise of God had given us ground to expect. 2. And in hopes of this, even after we had been treated with the utmost cruelty and contempt at Philippi, we, in an humble dependence on our God, publicly preached the gospel among you with a holy resolution and undaunted courage, and with great zeal and fervour of spirit—striving for your conversion, and against the furious opposition of the unbelieving Jews. 3. For our exhortations to duty, and comforting encouragements under sufferings, did not consist of erroneous doctrines leading to licentiousness, but of the pure gospel of Christ, productive of holiness in heart and life; nor did we minister to you in hypocritical pretences of piety and zeal, or of love to you, in order to promote our own selfish ends, but in the sincerity of our hearts, for the glory of God and your real welfare. 4. There was no falsehood or impurity in the matter, or insincerity or selfishness in the manner of our preaching; but as God had chosen, authorized, and furnished us for, and intrusted us with, the preaching of the gospel, so we endeavoured to preach it exactly as we received it from him—not in a manner suited to the corrupt taste, notions, and fancies of men, but with such purity and sincerity as God, the searcher of hearts, could not but approve of. 5. We can appeal to you, and even to God himself, that we never studied, by fawning or complimentary speeches, to ingratiate ourselves with any of you; nor did we ever encourage any to expect salvation in their sins, or by their own righteousness or strength; nor did we ever make use of religion as a pretence to cover some secret design of making advantage of you; 6. Nor were we ever ambitious of being honoured by men, or ever contrived, intended, or endeavoured to be admired, caressed, or applauded by any among whom we ministered; nor, though as messengers of Christ we might have justly claimed it, did we ever require a maintenance from you; 7. But, on the contrary, we behaved among you with such humility, modesty, meekness, and self-denial, as plainly marked the most tender and affectionate concern to do everything possible for your spiritual benefit, help, comfort, and eternal salvation; 8. Inasmuch that we not only took great pleasure in preaching to you the gospel of Christ in a suitableness to your necessities, but were ready to testify our affection to you in the most tender compassion, exhausting our strength and spirits, and hazarding or even laying down our lives to promote your spiritual and eternal welfare. 9. In proof of which, ye cannot but remember, that while we were among you we not only spent our strength in our ministerial labours, but even worked early and late at our secular callings for our livelihood,—that, as an evidence, it was not your wealth, but your spiritual and eternal salvation, we were earnestly desirous of—we might preach the gospel to you without putting you to any expense. 10. We can appeal to your consciences, and even to the all-seeing and heart-searching God, that we exercised ourselves in a conscientious discharge of all the duties of religion towards God, and of righteousness towards men; and always in such a sober, humble, benevolent, and inoffensive manner as might best recommend the good ways of the Lord among you, who were brought to the faith of Christ by our ministrations. 11, 12. And while we set you a good example in our own behaviour, ye cannot but know how we counselled, entreated, excited, and encouraged every one of you to practise the like Christian duties in your respective stations, and did all that we could to comfort you under your tribulations; and, with the greatest earnestness and affection, in the name and authority of Jesus Christ, solemnly charged you to live answerably to the holy nature and will, and to the blessed favours of God as your God, who has truly invited you by the gospel to partake of all the blessings and honours of his kingdom of grace in this world, and of his kingdom of glory in that which is to come. 13. In reflection upon which, we are exceedingly thankful to God, and daily praise his blessed name, that, when we were sent by him to preach the gospel to you, your hearts were opened to attend to it, and embrace it with reverence, faith, love, and obedience, not as a human scheme, or on the ground of human authority, but as indeed a revelation from God, and upon the ground of his authority, as a doctrine of which none but God himself is the contriver and author, and which, through his blessing, worketh so powerfully in changing the 13 For this cause also <sup>4</sup>thank we God without ceasing, because, when <sup>u</sup>ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but, as it is in truth, the word of God, which <sup>v</sup>effectually worketh also in you that believe.

CHAPTER III.

1 Saint Paul testifieth his great love to the Thessalonians, partly by sending Timothy unto them to strengthen and comfort them: partly by rejoicing in their well-doing: 10 and partly by praying for them, and desiring a safe coming unto them.

WHEREFORE, when<sup>a</sup> we could no longer forbear,<sup>1</sup> we thought it good to be left at Athens alone;

2 And sent <sup>b</sup>Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith;

3 That<sup>c</sup> no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that <sup>d</sup>we are appointed<sup>2</sup> thereunto.

4 For verily, when we were with you, we sentiments, inclinations, and views of you who believed it. 14. As a proof of which blessed operation in you, ye had no sooner embraced it in faith and love than ye became imitators of us and of the believers in Judea —courageously, calmly, patiently, and even cheerfully submitting to the persecutions of your countrymen for the sake of Christ, even as they did to those of their Jewish brethren, 15. Who, in the madness of their rage, murdered the Lord of glory and only Saviour of mankind, as their fathers did the ancient prophets; and who have all along, and everywhere, persecuted us ministers of Christ—acting in direct opposition to the merciful nature and holy law and gospel of God, and even to the common welfare of men; 16. Doing what in them lies to hinder our preaching the gospel to you Gentiles, for your conversion and salvation; and thus, through their obstinate prejudices and furious opposition to Christ and his servants and cause, filling up the measure of their own and their fathers' iniquities, till the righteous wrath of God, which has already begun against them, dreadfully complete their ruin, and without remedy destroy their church and state for many ages, till the fulness of the Gentiles' conversion to Christ occasion their restoration. 17, 18.

Being, by their outrageous persecution, driven from you exceedingly against our will, when, in your tribulation and danger, ye had much need of our further counsel, admonitions, cautions, and encouragements, my brethren, and especially myself, have been extremely desirous, and have once and again attempted, to pay you a visit; but Satan, that adversary of Christ and his ministers, and of your salvation, has hitherto, by his instruments, laid such entanglements and obstacles in our way as rendered it improper. 19, 20.
We are, nevertheless, still as mindful of you as ever, and as affectionately desirous to see you, if the Lord permit; for what is the hope which chiefly animates us in our ministrations? What is our chief joy in them?
Or what is the crown of glory we expect as our reward at the end?—Is it not that we shall present you and other converts as chaste virgins to Christ; that when he who is our life shall appear, ye, together with us, may appear with him in glory, and sit on his right hand?

REFLECTIONS.—Great patience, courage, candour, diligence, humility, prudence, tender affection, self-denial, unblamable holiness, and equity, are necessary for ministers in all their ministrations and conduct.
And happy is the church in which such are found, and where hearers receive the gospel into their hearts upon the testimony of the Holy Ghost, and experience it powerfully influencing them to universal holiness and readiness to suffer for its sake! Desperately malicious are apostate professors against Christ, his truths, and people, and certain and dreadful is their punishment.

In manifold forms Satan bestirs himself to hinder the spread of the gospel by faithful ministers.—But dear is the affection such bear to their spiritual children; great the comfort they take in them now, and exalted the honour they will have by them in the great day of account.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. Such was the distressing care of my mind about you, as young converts in perilous circumstances, that, when I found I could by no means quickly return to you myself, I chose rather to struggle alone with difficulties unnumbered at Athens than neglect anything which might contribute to your edification; 2. And therefore cheerfully parted with my dearly beloved brother Timothy, whom God has by his grace called to, richly furnished, and rendered most laborious and faithful in the ministerial office, and sent him to labour among you in exciting, strengthening, and confirming your faith in Christ and the great doctrines of the gospel, and that he might revive in your souls a sweet sense of the glorious advantages and delights which result from your faith in this, and especially the other world; 3. That so none of you might be disheartened or staggered at the afflictions and persecutions which ye or we have to endure for the sake of Christ; especially as ye know that God, in his eternal, infinitely wise, and holy purpose, has appointed us, the servants and followers of Christ, to suffer with and for him, as well as to reign with him.
4. For when I and my fellow-labourers in the work of the gospel were present with you, we warned you that both you and we must expect trouble and persecution in following Christ; and ye know it quickly came upon us before your eyes. 5. And on account of the troublesome circumstances in which we were forced to leave you, I could no longer forbear sending Timothy to inquire concerning your spiritual condition, lest, by the violence of persecution, the subtlety of false teachers, or the deceitfulness of your own hearts, Satan—that malicious, artful, and busy adversary—should prevail to draw some of you back from the truths and ways of the Lord, after all the promising appearances ye had made.—6. But when Timothy returned to us at Corinth, and informed us that, notwithstanding all your trials, temptations, and dangers, ye stand fast in the faith of the gospel, and in your love to Christ and his truths, ordinances, ministers, and people, and retain an affectionate remembrance of us in your daily prayers, and a lively sense of the excellent doctrines which we preached among you, and are often speaking of us with esteem and honour, and earnestly desirous of another visit from us; 7. These good tidings of your steady perseverance in the faith of Christ, and the genuine fruits thereof, entirely removed all our painful anxiety about you, and exceedingly comforted us under all the troubles to which we have been exposed for the gospel's sake. 8. For whatever were our difficulties, dejections, and solicitude concerning you before, we are now alive and comforted in our souls, and go on cheerfully in our work; since we knew that ye continue so steadfast in your adherence to the Lord Jesus, and hold fast the profession of your faith without wavering. 9. For, considering the happy state of your affairs, how can we ever be thankful enough to God, in fresh returns of praise, for his grace bestowed on you, and for giving us hearts to rejoice so exceedingly and sincerely in it before him: 10. In all our stated and occasional devotions praying with uncommon fervour, earnestness, and importunity, that, if it be his will, we may be allowed to visit you again, and be further instrumental in instructing, establishing, and building you up in knowledge, faith, comfort, and holiness, unto complete and eternal salvation? 11.

And to promote these valuable purposes, may God himself, whose kingdom ruleth over all, and who is your loving God and Father; and our Lord Jesus Christ, who, as Mediator, is Head over all things to his church—by his overruling providence, grant us a speedy and unobstructed opportunity to visit you. 12.
And whether we be permitted to come to you or not, may the Lord Jesus, as your Head of influence and government, enable you, by his Spirit, still more abundantly to increase in Christian love towards one another, as members of the same mystical body of Christ, and children of the same heavenly Father, and even in all good-will towards all men, with all sincerity and fervour, even as our affection increases towards you; 13.
To the end that he may thus strengthen, stablish, and confirm your whole souls in the doctrines of the gospel, and in every grace, and may preserve you blameless in every good word and work, and in all holy conversation before our all-seeing God and Father, till ye be presented holy, unblamable, and unreprovable, when Jesus Christ, attended by all his holy angels and glorified saints, shall come to judge the world.

REFLECTIONS.—Ministers should be very solicitous to demonstrate their love to their people, and use every mean possible for their establishment and comfort in the truth; and to prevent their being seduced by deceivers, or dispirited by sufferings, especially when they are but newly converted and babes in Christ.—The told you before that we should suffer tribulation; <sup>e</sup>even as it came to pass, and ye know.

5 For this cause, <sup>9</sup>when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, <sup>h</sup>lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and our labour be in vain.

6 But now when <sup>i</sup>Timotheus came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also <sup>j</sup>to see you;

7 Therefore, brethren, <sup>j</sup>we were comforted over you, in all our affliction and distress, by your faith:

8 For <sup>k</sup>now we live, if <sup>3</sup>ye stand fast in the Lord.

9 For what <sup>l</sup>thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes before our God;

10 Night<sup>n</sup> and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might <sup>o</sup>perfect that which is lacking in your faith?

11 Now<sup>p</sup> God himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, direct<sup>4</sup> our way unto you.<sup>5</sup>

12 And<sup>q</sup> the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you:

13 To the end he may <sup>r</sup>stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the <sup>s</sup>coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorteth them to go forward in all manner of godliness, 6 to live holily and justly, 9 to love one another, 11 and quietly to follow their own business: 13 and, last of all, to sorrow moderately for the dead. 15 And unto this last exhortation is annexed a brief description of the resurrection, and second coming of Christ to judgment.

FURTHERMORE then <sup>a</sup>we beseech<sup>1</sup> you, brethren, and exhort<sup>2</sup> you by the Lord Jesus, that <sup>b</sup>as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, <sup>c</sup>so ye would abound more and more.

2 For ye know <sup>d</sup>what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For<sup>e</sup> this is the will of God, even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication:<sup>3</sup>

4 That every one of you should know how more thoroughly professors count the cost at their entrance on religion, the better they will withstand Satan's temptations to apostasy. And when church-members persevere and increase in knowledge, faith, love, and good works, it gives great comfort to their faithful ministers; yea, it supports them under their distresses, engages their thankfulness to God, and animates their prayers for and delight in them.—But it is Jesus Christ, and his Father, and his blessed Spirit, who are alone the proper source of believers' gospel privileges, growth and establishment in grace, and happy meetness for and comfortable appearance in the last judgment.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. In order to your being established in holiness at the great coming of our Lord Jesus, with the most tender affection we entreat, and with the highest authority, in the name and for the sake of the Lord Jesus, we exhort and charge you, that, according to the inspired directions which ye have received from us, how to order your whole conversation in a manner acceptable to God through Christ, ye would, by his grace, more and more labour to improve and excel therein every day. 2. For ye cannot but know and remember what holy precepts we delivered to you when with you, as the rule of your behaviour in all things; and with what solemn and evangelical arguments we enforced and pressed them on your consciences, by the immediate authority of the exalted Lord and Saviour of his body the church. 3. For the ordaining, approving, and commanding will of God, and his end in bestowing his grace upon you, concur in this—that, encouraged by the promises of his word, ye should cleanse yourselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in his fear; and particularly that ye should carefully avoid and to <sup>9</sup>possess his vessel<sup>4</sup> in sanctification and honour;

5 Not<sup>h</sup> in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:

6 That no man <sup>i</sup>go beyond and defraud<sup>5</sup> his brother in any matter;<sup>6</sup> because that <sup>j</sup>the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.

7 For <sup>k</sup>God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness.

8 He therefore that despiseth,<sup>7</sup> despiseth<sup>1</sup> not man, but God, who <sup>h</sup>hath also given unto us his Holy Spirit.

9 But<sup>o</sup> as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you; for ye yourselves are <sup>2</sup>taught of God to love one another.

10 And indeed ye do <sup>q</sup>it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye <sup>r</sup>increase more and more:

11 And that <sup>s</sup>ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you;

12 That <sup>t</sup>ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of <sup>8</sup>nothing.<sup>9</sup>

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are <sup>u</sup>asleep, that <sup>v</sup>ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope.

14 For <sup>w</sup>if we believe<sup>1</sup> that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which <sup>x</sup>sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

15 For this we say unto you <sup>y</sup>by the word of the Lord, that <sup>z</sup>we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep.<sup>2</sup>

16 For<sup>b</sup> the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout,<sup>3</sup> with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: <sup>c</sup>and the dead in Christ shall rise first:<sup>4</sup>

17 Then we <sup>d</sup>which are alive and remain, <sup>e</sup>shall be caught up together with them in the clouds,<sup>5</sup> to meet the Lord in the air: and so <sup>f</sup>shall we ever be with the Lord.

CHAPTER V.

1 He proceedeth in the former description of Christ's coming to judgment, 16 and giveth divers precepts, 23 and so concludeth the epistle.

BUT of<sup>a</sup> the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly that <sup>b</sup>the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief<sup>1</sup> in the night.

3 For<sup>c</sup> when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 But<sup>d</sup> ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.

5 Ye<sup>e</sup> are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore<sup>f</sup> let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.

7 For <sup>h</sup>they that sleep, sleep in the night; and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting<sup>i</sup> on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, <sup>j</sup>the hope of salvation.

9 For <sup>k</sup>God hath not appointed us to wrath,
